Open Art In The Park Event Friday

Opening ceremony for Art in the Park '79 will be held at 10 a.m. Friday, July 6, at Northland community college with Mayor Bob Carlson and Miss Thief River Falls, Julie Schelling, participating. Twenty-six artists and craftsmen will be exhibiting, demonstrating and giving lectures at the two-day community event and paintings and craft items will also be on sale both July 6 and 7.

Highlights of this year's art in the park include a local artist's concert to be presented Friday at 8 p.m. with free admission. Among the performers will be vocalists Marilyn Lund, Deb Penning and Paul Mortenson with instrumental selections by Doug Engstrom and James Solsten.

Deb Penning who is now in her second year of teaching vocal music, will open the concert singing "Let Me Entertain You" and "Getting To Know You" by Rogers and Hart. Lund, a former Thief River Falls resident, now resides with her family in Tracy. She will sing three selections by the composer Giacomo Puccini: "Un Bel Di (Soon We'll See At Daybreak" from "Madame Butterfly", "Quando Me'n Vo Soletta (I Go My Way)" from "LaBoheme", and "Gianni Schicchi (Oh! My Beloved Daddy!)" from "O Mio Babbino Caro." Mortenson, a vocal and music student now attending the University of North Dakota, will perform "Gia il sole dal Gange (Sun Over the Ganges)" by Alessandro Scarlatti and "An die Musik (To Music)" by Franz Shubert.

"Sonata for B flat Trumpet and Piano" by German composer Paul Hindemith is the selection Doug Engstrom will perform on trumpet in the concert. Hindemith's style, according to the Lincoln high school music director, is "radical and was the result of a long and careful evolution." It can be compared to that of "Stravinsky as a reaction against subjectism."

James Solsten, violinist, will perform two concert numbers, "Liebesleid (Love's Sorrow)" by Austrian composer Fritz Kriesler, and "Csardas" by V. Monti. Composer for the first number, Kreisler, "has been ranked with the half-dozen great violinists of all time," Solsten comments. "Kreisler's compositions sing as one would expect a Viennese spirit to sing, and the difficult technical passages are hidden from the audience because of the beauty "floating from Kreisler's art." Solsten's second number has "a gypsy air with all the moods expected in gypsy music from mournful to fiery, and all the violin techniques from broad legato to bouncing spicatto and fingered harmonics."

Among the other activities planned in the July 6 and 7 Art in the Park are workshops in watercolor, macrame and puppetry. Pre-registration is required for the workshops and fees will be $2 for adults and $1.25 for children.

Workshop times and numbers to call for registration are given below: watercolor for children ages 8-12, Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 12 noon, 681-1151 or 681-

RUTH FERBER has been playing guitar for six years and composes a number of her own songs. Music and drama have been a big part of her interests at Lincoln high school. Her talent presentation as a contestant July 28 in the Miss Thief River Falls pageant will be a vocal solo entitled "God Gave the Song".

Ruth Ferber In Queen Contest

Times Editor

(This is the third in a series of personal interviews with candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title at the annual Jaycee Aquacade. The official Miss America preliminary event will be held Saturday, July 28, at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium.)

Music and drama have been major interest areas for Ruth Ferber during her school years in Thief River Falls. Not only has she played a number of lead roles in plays and musicals, she has performed at many school and community functions.

Eighteen-year-old Ruth is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Ferber of Thief River Falls and a 1979 graduate of Lincoln high school. She is five feet six and one-half inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, has brown hair and green eyes. Her pageant talent number will be a vocal solo entitled "God Gave the Song".

Ruth is the youngest in a family of five children. Her older sister, now Mrs. Karen Olson, was a Miss Thief River Falls a dozen years ago. Other older sisters and Becki and Debbie are also married and she has one brother, Carl, age 22.

Developing a religious conviction over the years, Ruth states that as a personal goal she wants to "walk in fellowship with God all of my life, share with others the joy I have found and serve the Lord in any way I can and in everything that I do."

Last summer she directed that willingness to serve into a Teen Missions trip to Israel where she spent two and one-half months building a storage building and two retaining walls for a missionary in Ramallah.

This fall she will attend Oak Hills Bible institute at Bemidji, also taking some classes at Bemidji state university. Then she plans to enroll full-time at BSU, majoring in sociology and minoring in music.

In high school drama Ruth had leads in one-act plays four years with two of those plays winning area competition and advancing to regional contests. She also was in two fall all-school plays, playing one lead, and had lead roles of Rose Alvarez in "Bye Bye Birdie" and Maria Reiner in "Sound of Music", Lincoln high school musicals.

She was first chair alto for four years in Lincoln choirs

Art works for the touring collection were selected from 82 pieces exhibited at the East Grand Forks fine arts festival. Hosts for the touring exhibit include regional libraries at Hallock, Roseau and Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls art council, Artists unlimited of Lake Bronson and Marshall county state bank at Newfolden.

Although main interest in the exhibit is expected during the Art in the Park observance Friday and Saturday, the exhibit will be on display during the entire July 2-9 period. The college is open until 9 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Families Will Host Japanese 4-H Exchangees

Four Pennington county families will host exchangees from Japan who are visiting 50 Minnesota counties through a 4-H exchange program. Host families include: Norris Thune, who will host 15-year-old Mesami Sasaki; John E. Erickson hosting 14-year-old Akiko Shto; Merle Lundeen hosting 15-year-old Yasushi Kusakari; and Roger Rivera hosting 13-year-old Hiroyuki Fufukawa.

"All the participants will reap benefits from this program," says Pennington county extension agent Deborah Matero. "Host families can experience the joys of international travel right in their own home. The exchangee will have the opportunity to participate in county 4-H events and activities."

Such a program has a more universal appeal, Matero adds. "Host families and exchangees may develop skills in crosscultural communication that lead to mutual understanding and good will among all people in the world."

Students arrive July 28 for a one-month stay. 4-H and youth development is a program of the Pennington county office of the University of Minnesota agricultural extension.

JUST OUT FOR EXERCISE? Actually this team of Percherons, Queen and Trixy, is rehearsing for its appearance in "Weathered Years," a historical pageant to be presented at Goodridge Wednesday, July 4, at 7 p.m. The pageant, which will be performed outdoors, is planned as a part of the observance of the Eleven Towns Jubilee and will depict life as it might have been while the 11 townships in eastern Pennington county were being settled in 1904. The horses, owned by Orlin Ostby, will add a touch of realism to the performance. The wagon they are pulling was purchased by Ostby at an auction and is approximately 75 years old and the box nearly 50 years old. Both were restored by Ostby for the Goodridge event. Ostby and his family will also participate in the pageant portraying the settlers of the early years.

Guard Serves Many Ways In Helping Public

Some 4,000 men and women of the Minnesota army national guard were winding up two week's annual training at Camp Ripley last week while in other parts of the state; more than 500 other army and air guard members were on active duty, called out by Gov. Al Quie to help restore order in a protest strike, by independent truck drivers.

The callup, largest use of guard troops in Minnesota since 1976, when guardsmen logged 5,000 man days fighting forest fires, was the second thus far this year. Last April, approximately 100 troops spent a week in East Grand Forks, helping protect the city against the flooding Red river.

In the current emergency, guardsmen were called up June 19 to provide security at oil refineries, fuel terminal points and grain elevators as well as ride-along security of highways with the Minnesota highway patrol.

Personnel from a dozen guard units around the state were activated by Gov. Quie to help restore order as truckers — protesting high prices and scarcity of diesel fuel — blockaded refineries and key fuel terminal points, halting flow of gasoline to service stations and bringing supplies of available gas to dangerously low points around the state.

As of early this week, grain and fuel supplies were moving, although more than a score of acts of violence had been reported through the weekend, ranging from shooting incidents where trucks were damaged to fist fights, tire slashings and nails and paint thrown on trucks and highways.

There are approximately 10,000 men and women in army and air national guard units throughout the state.

American Foods Are Favorites Overseas

Somewhere in Saudi Arabia, an oil-flush sheik competes with a broiling sun on a soft ice cream cone.

In the shadow of the pyramids, an Egyptian munches on a corned beef sandwich.

A native merchant in far-off Trinidad peddles slices of salami.

And West Germans say "mix" to their wiener schnitzel in favor of corn on the cob.

Culinary tastes of the world are changing and the increasing diversity of overseas appetites is having a profound effect on the American farmer.

Role of the U.S. farmer as a world marketer is not only continuing to grow in dollar volume, but also in the variety of agricultural products being exported to foreign lands.

This twin trade growth, in turn, holds significant positive results, not only for the agricultural community, but for the nation as a whole.

Agricultural exports during the coming year are expected to top $30 billion — up about $3 billion from the past year.

Although changing world tastes are causing a widening diversity in these agricultural exports, traditional farm products are still maintaining a basic importance. Soybeans, corn and wheat remain the "big three" products off U.S. farms and will account for more than half of the $30 billion in trade.

But even in these mainstays of farm export markets some changes are being wrought down on the farm. As such food and feed grains command higher prices overseas, foreign buyers are placing increasing emphasis on the quality of these products.

Although not as large in volume or dollar value as grains, exports of fruits, vegetables, nuts, animal products and other speciality agricultural items will be a multi-billion-dollar business during the coming year.

In fact, sales of such items will reach nearly $7 billion. That alone is more than all U.S. farm exports were worth at the beginning of just this decade.

Reports of inquiries from overseas buyers during a single week illustrate the increasing scope and diversity of world trade in these speciality agricultural products.

At least part of the tremendous oil revenues making their way to the Middle East will be coming back in some unique agricultural ways. Amidst the heat, sunshine, sand and oil of Saudi Arabia, a taste is being developed in soft ice cream and frozen yogurt. With plans for a chain of such stores, it opens markets for not only the concentrate ingredients, but the equipment to make those delicacies.

Not only are the Saudis acquiring American food tastes, but they're interested in U.S. eating customs and programs. The Saudi ministry of education is seeking to establish a 40,000 meal-a-day school lunch program, including biscuits, peanuts, milk, cheese, orange juice and fruits.

Such speciality foods and programs thereby make a significant contribution to the U.S. balance of trade.

Amounts of similar purchases are substantial. For instance, there are the 18 metric tons each of turkey and beef livers sought in Egypt, along with a small mountain of canned corned beef.

Besides salami bound for Trinidad and canned corn on the cob to West Germany, there are black and sour cherries to South Africa, bloody Mary mix to Abu Dhabi and milk shake and hamburger ingredients headed for West Berlin.

Thus, whether it be a shipload of field corn for livestock feed or a few thousand cases of canned corn on the cob, the U.S. farmer is not only the keystone of U.S. world trade, but is the foundation of thousands of domestic jobs to process and move a vast variety of products from American farms throughout the world.

Many Septic Tank Cleaners Said Dangerous

Many septic tank or cesspool cleaners being marketed in Minnesota have levels of Carcinogens so strong that one gallon can contaminate up to 29 million gallons of ground water in excess of environmental protection agency (EPA) drinking water standards.

This warning is from Roger Machmeier, agricultural engineer with the University of Minnesota agricultural extension service; and Michael Hansel, staff engineer with the Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA).

The following cleaners contain the carcinogens trichlorethane and methylene chloride: Drainz; Glamorene Drain Power; and Kitchen Drano. Other septic tank cleaners as well as household products, such as fabric and rug cleaners, workshop cleaners and solvents may also contain high concentrations of cancer-causing chemicals.

"None of these products should be discharged into a home sewage system," Machmeier and Hansel say. "They are not removed by the system and quickly find their way into the ground water supply."

They add, "Please help keep these dangerous compounds out of Minnesota's underground waters, a valuable natural resource. If you are aware of these products on your local market, please write or call the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency," at 1935 West County Road B-2, Roseville, 55113 (612) 296-7356.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Does business really have the right of free speech? The question may seem ridiculous, but herhaps it is not, given what has just happened to the Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation.

The Kaiser people wanted to air a series of television commercials to stimulate public interest and involvement in three issues: Free enterprise, energy and governmental red tape. But after viewing the proposed spots, all three networks turned them down. Or, as Kaiser more bluntly put it, they "censored" them.

Kaiser maintains it has a perfect right to speak its mind in public. I agree. What's more, I believe the Supreme Court does too. Last year, the National Chamber of Commerce filed a brief in the Supreme Court supporting five corporations which were suing the state of Massachusetts over a question involving free speech. The companies wanted to campaign against a proposed amendment to that state's constitution which would have permitted a graduated tax on personal income. But the state did not want to let them.

The Court decided in favor of the companies and made two very important points: First, it ruled that speech has an inherent worth, and that the freedom to inform the public does not depend on the identity of the source, be it a corporation, an association, a union or individuals; second, the Court said the public itself should be the final judge of the relative merits of conflicting opinions. In other words, the First Amendment does not "belong" to any definable category of persons; it belongs to all who exercise its freedoms.

Getting back to the Kaiser case, can a question be raised as to the content of the proposed Kaiser commercials? Were they, perhaps, maliciously worded, biased or unsuitably controversial? On the contrary, upon reading them one is struck by how balanced and moderate they are. They seem as American as apple pie.

In its spot on free enterprise, Kaiser does not make opinionated statements; it asks questions. For example: "Is free enterprise an endangered species?" and, "How much government regulation is enough?", to cite just two of the six. But rather than give its own answers, Kaiser says: "The answers are up to you. Whatever your views, let your elected representatives know."

In its spot on energy, the company makes statements, but they are carefully balanced: "Some people are calling the energy crisis a hoax. Others say that at the rate we're using up our oil resources we'll be down to our last drop in our children's lifetime." The company then calls for an energy plan making use of all our energy resources. And here again, it calls on people to make up their own minds and to contact their elected representatives.

Business is sometimes criticized for overselling its products. Is it now to be criticized for overselling democracy?

The Kaiser commercial on red tape might be judged slightly more opinionated in that it uses fact to express criticism: "In 1977, America spent $100 billion on federal paperwork alone. And in the end we all pay for it." And yet, who among us would disagree? With American workers now giving back in taxes almost half of everything they earn, this is one issue where there really is overwhelming agreement. Each year we are transferring a greater share of our wealth, intellect and energy from the pursit of progress to the satisfaction of bureaucratic requirements.

I do not believe the networks are in cahoots to prevent business from making an editorial case. But what is astonishing was the apparent fear of approving such mild messages. Fear of whom? Of our own government? Shades of King George! Kaiser said it was informed by one network that its commercials were rejected because of the Fairness Doctrine. That's the doctrine administered by the FCC to insure that television presents balanced opinions. But as the company countered: "We believe, too, that television should present a fair balance of opinion. Even ours."

Maybe it's time to take a closer look at the Fairness Doctrine. The way it is being interpreted now hardly seems fair. Indeed, I have to wonder, is it even constitutional?

Governor Quie Urges Planned Vacation Time

With the Fourth of July holiday approaching, the latest figures from the energy department show gasoline supplies available throughout the state's tourism area, and Governor Al Quie has urged Minnesotans to make use of their planned vacation time.

"I'm concerned that one of our state's great natural resources, the tourism industry, was forced to absorb much of the initial shock of this energy crisis," said the governor.

"But now I think we have the 'booster' the tourism industry needs," said the governor. "The energy agency has informed me that gasoline supplies, while still tight, are available throughout the state's resort areas.

"Of course we still must cut down on unnecessary driving, but when your vacation time comes, by all means, take it," said the goernor. "A vacation helps cut down on the stress of the rest of the year."

The governor said that moderation in our daily lives, fewer unnecessary trips, as well as a greater reliance on car pooling and mass transit should assure us adequate supplies when vacation time rolls around.

"If we reorganize and conserve energy in our everyday lives, we should be able to enjoy for years to come that well-deserved vacation," said the governor.

New Insurance Policy Designed For Older Home

Inflation and changing construction practices make it difficult for the owners of many older homes to insure them. Traditionally homeowners policies (combining insurance for real property, contents and personal liability) provide replacement value coverage for the house, garage and outbuildings. If there is a loss, the insurance company must repair or replace the buildings with materials like those damaged. In order to have full coverage for partial losses, a house must be insured for at least 80 per cent of its replacement value.

Many houses built prior to World War II have features such as hardwood floors, decorative millwork and leaded or stained glass which are now very expensive. The cost to repair or rebuild a house with these features would be much greater than the market value of the house.

The owners must choose between insuring the house for much more than its market value or being under-insured for partial losses. Since insurance company underwriters forsee many problems arising from either situation, they are often reluctant to insure older houses.

In response to this problem, insurance companies developed a new homeowners policy, HO8, and an endorsement, HO 256, to be added to a standard homeowners policy.

HO8 provides coverage on the actual cash value of the property. The coverage is similar to that offered by other homeowners policies, including personal liability and additional living expenses. HO 256 provides the basic coverage of the homeowners form to which it is attached. It allows the policyholder to receive full replacement coverage of a partial loss percentage of its total replacement cost.

An investigator from the insurance division's circuit rider program will be in Thief River Falls on Wednesday, July 11. Brian Pennington will be at the employment service office from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. Persons needing assistance with any type of insurance problem except workers compensation and federal programs should bring materials pertaining to the problem with them.

Scientists Express Views On Skylab

by Mark E. Canney
'U' M News Service

A sonic boom explodes with startling ferocity. Molten metal traveling 3,000 miles per hour hurtles toward earth, crashing to the ground with spectacular impact. What was on the ground moments before is now a series of craters 50 to 100 yards across. This is the way the predicted landing of Skylab has been described by some.

"Ridiculous," says Cecil J. Waddington, professor of physics at the University of Minnesota.

"Bull——," says E. Calvin Alexander, a University of Minnesota geology and geophysics professor.

There is not question that Skylab will break up and fall to earth sometime during the middle of July, but there is disagreement on what will happen when it does fall.

The National Aeronautics and Space administration (NASA) has given its own version of what will happen when the pieces of Skylab enter the atmosphere and crash, but they have been challenged by groups such as Chicken Little Associates of Washington, D.C.

Chicken Little is a computer group that feeds NASA figures into its own computers to chart the path of the falling space lab. For $100 a month, the group provides about 100 subscribers — mostly media and government organizations — with five-day reports on the status of Skylab's descent.

Sam Greenlaw of Chicken Little has received quite a bit of attention for his own predictions about what will happen when Skylab breaks into the atmosphere.

In a recent article in Seven Days magazine, Greenlaw said that the debris from Skylab will be traveling at speeds much greater than NASA is willing to admit.

The pieces that survive reentry will slow down to about 250 miles per hour before impact, according to NASA figures. Greenlaw disagrees. His prediction is that the materials will attain speeds anywhere between 1,000 and 3,000 miles per hour just before they land.

Waddington and Alexander, however, say NASA is correct. Alexander, who has done extensive research on meteors, said that meteors weighing as much as or more than Skylab do not retain the speeds Greenlaw predicts when they strike the earth. Meteor speed is reduced by the atmosphere during the last 150 miles of descent, Alexander said, and the speed of Skylab will likewise be slowed.

"The speed at which Skylab material will be traveling at the point of impact depends on the weight and shape of the pieces," Waddington said. "Apollo space crafts have landed on earth at lower velocities than Greenlaw's prediction."

Even before their parachutes opened, Apollo crafts, which are heavier than any one piece of Skylab, were traveling slower than the speeds Greenlaw predicts, Waddington said.

The two scientist also disagree with Greenlaw's prediction that craters from 50 to 100 yards across will be formed by the falling material.

"Craters are a function of velocity, and since I believe Greenlaw's velocities are in error, it follows that the crater predictions are equally wrong," Waddington said. Alexander said that a person standing six feet away from the point of impact of any given part of Skylab would be in no danger.

According to Greenlaw, Skylab will cause a sonic boom that will be thunderous to persons in the area of impact. Alexander, however, said that Skylab will be high enough at the point it reaches supersonic speed that the boom will be tolerable to anyone on earth. "There should be a sonic boom about 90 miles above the earth's surface. Although we may hear it, it will be no more than that caused by high flying jet airplanes," he said.

Greenlaw also predicts that the falling Skylab will be a mass of molten metal, a prediction that Alexander says gives the reader a false picture of the landing. "There is no chance in Hell that the Skylab pieces will be molten on impact with the earth," he said.

As Skylab falls closer to the earth, it will come in contact with much denser gases. This dense area will break up the lab and melt portions of the pieces, Alexander said. However, by the time the debris is within about five or 10 miles of the earth's surface, the energy from the motion will have dissipated and the objects will slow down and cool before impact, he said.

Waddington agrees with Alexander, pointing out that Apollo crafts were not molten when they landed in the ocean. The objects from Skylab will be warm, he said, but certainly not molten.

The fact remains that Skylab will land on earth, maybe not as spectacularly as Greenlaw and others think, but it will land just the same. "The biggest tragedy is that the scientific community will lose a valuable resource in space," Alexander said.

New $1 Coin Being Shipped To Area Banks

New one-dollar Susan B. Anthony coin will be available to the public at banks on July 2. The new coin is being issued to reduce paper currency volume. Paper currency is nearly as expensive to produce as coins but is not a durable. It costs about two cents to produce a one-dollar bill which will last about 18 months. By comparison the new dollar coin will cost about three cents to produce and has an estimated life expectancy of 15 years.

The front of the coin honors the 19th century civil right leader and suffragette. The reverse commemorates the moon landing of the Apollo 11 in July 1969. This is the first time that a portrait of an American woman rather than a symbolic woman has appeared on a circulating U.S. coin.

The Anthony dollar will replace the one-dollar Eisenhower coin. Minting of the coin honoring President Eisenhower was ended Dec. 31, 1978. The Eisenhower coin doesn't circulate freely due to its size and weight. The smaller and lighter Anthony dollar will be easier to use as a medium of exchange and as a substitute for the $1 note. The new coin is smaller than the half-dollar and slightly larger than a quarter. The new dollar weighs three-tenths of an ounce. To make the coin more distinguishable, a raised 11-angled geometric design (undecagon) is on both sides.

The coin is made of copper and nickel, as are virtually all other coins currently in circulation, except the penny, which is made of copper and zinc.

Silver dollars, containing 90 per cent silver and 10 per cent copper, haven't been minted since 1935. To commemorate the bicentiannial, silver dollars with 40 per cent silver were produced for proof and collectors' sets, when their production was ended in December of 1976.

Dollar coins of various compositions, including golf and bearing various designs, have been part of the U.S. currency since 1794, when they were first minted. Those coins were authorized by Congress in 1792.

Nearly nine million of the new coins have been shipped from the Mint to the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis. The Minneapolis Fed and its branch in Helena, Montana, supply coin and currency to commercial banks in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana and parts of northwestern Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

The new dollar coin was authorized by an act of Congress at the initiation of the U.S. Treasury.

Productivity Declines

Declining productivity in the United States is a cause for concern as a major economic problem since the ability to realize a profit is tied closely to the ability to produce. In the free enterprise system, profit potential is the motivating force for industrial development and the meeting of human needs and demands.

C. Lowell Harriss, professor of economics at Columbia university and economic consultant for the Tax Foundation, Inc., makes the following assessment of the situation:

The rate of improvement of the efficiency of our economy — also known as productivity growth — has dropped seriously. Taxes are not the only source of the trouble, but taxes are one thing which, quite clearly, the government can control.

Productivity can be thought of as the amount of production per hour worked by a person or a machine, and while the measuring of output relative to the input of labor and capital cannot be precise, all measures agree that our trends are bad. Earlier — in the 20 years to 1967 — the average productivity advance in private business (including agriculture) was 3.2 per cent a year. Recently, in the 6 years through 1978, it was 1.0 per cent and in 1978 averaged only 0.5 per cent. (Industries differ. In telephone and other communications, productivity has been improving much above the average while mining and construction have shown actual declines.)

Our living standards depend upon how much we produce per hour worked. According to the Congressional Joint Economic Committee, "sluggish productivity growth is the most important factor contributing to the present economic malaise." What can be done? No quick change of tax laws can restore overnight the higher past rates of productivity progress. Nor can we hope for progress like Japan's 9 per cent a year. But tax reforms could be directed toward encouraging productivity.

Our lawmakers still refuse to allow adequately for inflation in the taxing of businesses. The law limits the depreciation expense allowed for machinery and buildings to the original cost even though replacement prices will be much higher. The result? Expense deductions permitted by tax laws are less than the real costs — and the reported profits on which taxes must be paid are greater than the true earnings.

A careful study has found that after adjusting for inflation the actual federal taxes on real corporate earnings are frequently round 66 per cent. After tax, therefore, businesses simply do not have the money to pay for enough up-to-date machinery to permit worker productivity to improve as it did in the days before serious inflation.

Taxes made artificially high by inflation are one reason why capital funds for modernization are inadequate. The shortfall of capital funds is especially bad now because the number of persons with jobs has soared. Seven million more persons are at work now than 1976. Businesses need new capital in mammoth amounts to provide equipment good enough to justify modern wages and to meet hopes for rising real incomes.

Our tax system includes another impediment to the adequate financing of facilities. Personal income and social security taxes take more and more of our income as inflation pushes dollars into higher brackets. Just when inflation is raising the dollar costs of new machinery, factory buildings, utility plants, and so on, many of us find that after taxes we have fewer dollars to put aside as savings. Industry cannot pay for improved and expanded facilities with money that government siphons off through taxes.

Technical progress based on research has a vital rôle in the advance of productivity. The marvels of science account for much of what we get as higher earnings and more consumption. Yet in relation to the size of the economy, business spending on research and development has dropped.

Congress should try for tax reform to give research and development better treatment. The ordinary voter may not fully understand the legal technicalities of such tax changes, but they can be assured that they will serve their own interest, and those of their children, by directing elected representatives to improve the tax conditions for scientific efforts. These lay the base for advances in productivity and thus in human well-being.

Personal income tax rates, federal plus state, go above 70 per cent. Do they aggravate the slowdown in productivity? Let us look at three effects:

—Very high taxes certainly reduce the after-tax payoffs from risky ventures. Such undertakings are sometimes wonderfully productive, and taxes that discourage them depress the rate of progress.

—The after-tax rewards for new saving are discouragingly low for persons who have good wages and salaries or who have accumulated some holdings of property. Even though added capital would make production more efficient, what can the saver expect to keep?

—Persons with high skills face tax rates that "skim off the top" half or more of any earnings from extra effort. More typical workers find taxes absorbing much of the pay for overtime.

Scholars do not yet have accurate measures of just how Americans in all their diversity change their working and saving because of high taxes. We do know that as tax rates have continued at high levels — and crept up with inflation — our productivity record has gotten worse.

The President and Congress, now awake to a serious problem, should be pressed for tax reform to aid economic efficiency.

America's Hang-up

Followng editorial is from the Minneapolis Tribune:

The first Vietnam Veterans Week has come and gone. President Carter, stung by criticism that his administration has ignored the sacrifices of the men who fought in Indochina, promised more help for those thousands of Vietnam veterans who need schooling, jobs, health care and psychological counseling. These men deserve help — and more: They deserve respect.

In a White House ceremony Carter said the nation is ready to change its heart and mind toward Vietnam veterans. But is it? Vietnam veterans see few signs of change; most people, they say, still don't want to talk about the war, and too many people still regard the men who fought it as either fools or killers.

Thus, Robert Muller, a former marine lieutenant who came home a paraplegic, paralyzed from the chest down: "You people ran a number on us. Your guilt, your hang-ups, your uneasiness, made it socially unacceptable to mention the fact that we were Vietnam veterans. Whenever we brought it up, you walked away from the conversation. (You saw us as) junkies, crazed psychos or dummies that couldn't find their way to Canada."

And, Dave Christian, eight times wounded and one of the war's most decorated soldiers. "Most of these guys still can't figure it out. They came back and high school kids jeered at them. They came back and people said, 'Forget it. Block out Vietnam. What you did was worthless'."

The Vietnam War was unpopular, but it wasn't the Vietnam veteran who began it; the war's horrors and sacrifices belong to all of us. For many veterans the war still is not over; too many still have not been welcomed home. Vietnam Veterans Week was an official start toward a deeper understanding of their plight. We hope it doesn't end there — for the White House and for the rest of us.

Washington Report

Sen. Dave Durenberger

In the coming months the American public will be inundated with acroyms. Confusing initials with the most far-reaching consequences will dominate headlines.

The parent of these acronyms is the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty — SALT II. The treaty is an agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to slow down the frantic nuclear arms race. Before the pact can be implemented, two-thirds of the members of the U.S. Senate must consent.

This process, leading to ratification or rejection, is about to start. In the coming weeks three different committees of the Senate will conduct hearings on the treaty. Their reports are due in late September. Shortly after the committees have reported, the full Senate will begin its debate. A final vote is scheduled before the end of the year.

The debate on SALT II will not and should not be confined to the Senate. The treaty affects every American and should be subjected to a national debate.

Informing and involving the citizenry must be the task of each senator. SALT II is a complex and confusing document. It took seven years to negotiate and includes almost 80 pages of highly technical language.

SALT II isn't an issue of foreign policy like the Panama Canal treaties. Most of the public understood what was involved in the Panama Canal debates — they had studied the history of the canal in school, many of the American people had seen the canal and everyone knew what it was.

That isn't the case with SALT II. Only a handful of top officials have seen the treaty. Few people have ever seen the missiles the pact is restricting. And, no one in this country has been exposed to the devastation of nuclear weaponry.

So, we know SALT II attempts to limit the development of nuclear arms and the public consensus is that such a restriction is a worthy goal. The question before the Senate and the American public is whether or not SALT II is the means to accomplish that goal.

Two important facts must be understood about SALT II:

It will not end the competition between the United States and the Soviet Union. Rather, the treaty is designed to define the competition and make our rivalry safer and

Just as the defeat of SALT will not necessarily mean an immediate build-up of nuclear weapons, its ratification will not end our costly development of weapons. As President Carter said in his June 18 address to the nation, "With or without SALT II we must modernize and strengthen our strategic forces — and we are doing so. But SALT II makes this task easier, surer and less expensive."

The debate on SALT II will be exhaustive, but, when it's over many questions will remain unanswered. As a member of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, one of the three committees that will hold hearings on SALT II, I will have access to much classified information that will not be available to the public. In part, my vote on the treaty will be based on that information. To a much greater degree, however, I must reflect the sentiments of my constituency.

In previous columns I have outlined my efforts to obtain the opinions of Minnesotans — questionnaires, meetings with the public, special task forces comprised of Minnesotans and several other projects.

Many people who have not seen the treaty have urged me to vote for or against SALT II. This attitude puzzles me. How can they shape their opinion without the basic information? Would you buy a new house without seeing it: Without talking to the owner? The public must "see" SALT by gathering information through reading, talking and listening. Just to say, "I don't trust the Russians" or "I want to stop the arms race" isn't enough.

Gathering the information from my constituents is an ongoing process. Through me, you can have a vote on SALT II in the Senate. Please share your concerns with me by writing or calling my offices: 353 Russell Senate Building, Washington, D.C., 20510 (202-224-3244) or Suite 550 East, Butler Square Building, 100 North Sixth Street, Minneapolis, 55403 (800-752-4226). Research Test For 'Addiction-Prone' Helps Find Addicts

by Jeanne Hanson
University News

They had never really talked about it, but he thought she might be "the type" to become an alcoholic. She believed he was already addicted to cigarettes. And both of them had a friend whose gambling had gotten out of hand.

Addictions like these are now being analyzed by Gloria Leon, psychology professor at the University of Minnesota, through a paper and pencil research test. The test, used in a clinical setting with a battery of other tests, can distinguish some addicts and potential addicts from those with other psychiatric problems and those considered "Normal."

Researchers are just now beginning to discover what different types of addiction and addicts have in common.

"We hope the test will eventually be able to predict addiction-proneness," Leon said. So far, the test has proved to be a good predictor of alcoholism and opiate drug addiction, and, to a lesser degree, of addictive smoking in males, compulsive gambling, and massive obesity in women, a form of "substance use," Leon said. In one follow-up study, addiction-prone college freshmen identified through the test were found to have alcohol problems 15 years later.

But female smoking addiction, moderate obesity, anorexia nervosa, and such "positive addictions," as addictive jogging cannot be reliably predicted by the psychological test, Leon said.

The test, a series of 49 questions called the MacAndrew scale, is part of the Minnesota Multiphasic Inventory, or MMPI, an internationally used psychological test. Researchers have known for about 14 years that the scale can identify alcoholics, and more recently it has also been found to identify those prone to drug addiction. Now, however, research by Leon and others has extended its usefulness to other types of addiction.

"It's a strange test," Leon said. The test-taker is asked to agree or disagree with statements such as "I enjoy reading crime news" and "I sweat easily."

Psychologists don't really know or even need to know exactly what attitudes these items are measuring, Leon said. But there is a clear statistical correlation between people identified as addicts or potential addicts and people who get high scores on the scale. The correlation is not perfect: alcoholics and drug addicts can be identified about 78 per cent of the time, for example.

Generally, not all people with addictive tendencies will score high on the test, but most of those with high scores do have addiction problems, Leon said. "We're not fortune tellers with magical numbers," she said.

Very little is known about the addictive personality, according to Leon. An analysis of the test, however, indicates that addiction-prone people have high energy and activity levels, are impulsive and like to take risks, have shallow interpersonal relationships, and are generally unhappy and unsuccessful at leading their lives. They are not, however, anti-social.

Beyond this general profile, addictive male smokers also tend to be depressed and to develop physical symptoms such as headaches, diarrhea and stromachaches when under stress.

Also under investigation is the individual's "choice" of addiction, Leon said. The person's family and peer environment may emphasize one type of drug over another, for example, and some substances or activities are more accessible than others to an individual. Certain people also rid themselves of one addiction, such as compulsive gambling, only to substitute another, like alcohol.

Eventually, if the research continues to show results, the MacAndrew scale and other tests could be used to alert people to their problems and indicate directions for treatment, Leon said. A heavy drinker scoring high on the test might decide to be more careful with alcohol for example, or come in for treatment earlier. A male smoker who scored high might choose an anti-smoking program that recognized his problem as an addiction.

Although learning more about a potential addiction may sometimes seem a disadvantage to the individual, ignorance is probably worse, Leon said.

Suggests Not Pruning Elms During Summer

If you've been thinking about pruning your elm this summer so it will look nicer, you could be setting yourself and your tree up for some big problems. Elms with open pruning wounds are good candidates for Dutch elm disease. Experts say it's best to avoid pruning until later in the year.

Pruning elms during the summer is hazardous primarily because of elm bark beetles, says extension entomologist William Phillipsen. These beetles, which frequently carry the Dutch elm disease fungus on their bodies, are very attracted to open wounds on elm trees. Thus, a healthy tree, which the beetles might have passed by, can become a real target for beetles and, therefore, the disease after it has been pruned.

"Both European and native elm bark beetles are feeding and reproducing right now," says Phillipsen. "In fact, very large numbers of the native beetle have been reported in the Little Falls and Hinckley areas. However, between mid-October and March they will be inactive, so it will be safer to prune during this period."

Phillipsen points out that these recommendations apply to aesthetic pruning and that elms can be trimmed for therapeutic reasons this summer. "Trees in the early stages of Dutch elm disease may have just a few yellowing branches at the crown caused by beetle-induced infections. Sometimes by pruning off these branches it is possible to save a tree," he says. "In these cases, wound dressings may help make the trees less attractive to the beetle." Would dressings are not recommended when elms are aesthetically pruned later in the fall.

Frequently, pruning dead or dying limbs from elms is suggested as part of a community's dutch elm disease santitation program. Here, pruning helps to reduce the number of breeding sites for the beetles. "Pruning for sanitation should also be done during the fall and winter, as much as possible," says Phillipsen.

North Central and Southern are coming together to build your kind of airline.

And what a great get together it is!

All of us at North Central and Southern are now together as Republic Airlines. And we're really taking off . . .building an airline with new ideas based on solid experience.

Using our experience. Over the years, we've flown millions of passengers on North Central and Southern. We're proud of how you've come to count on us for efficient, dependable and friendly service. And we're bringing that good service along with our new name.

Making the big change. Our new name is going up everywhere . . .from baggage carts in Birmingham to the insignia on the pilots' caps. From air-freight trucks in Oshkosh to the twenty-foot letters on the Minneapolis/St. Paul hangar.

But no matter how fast we work, changing the name of an airline as big as ours takes time. So you might see some reminders of North Central and Southern for awhile . . .at ticket counters, boarding gates and on airplanes.

But if you see more than one name, just remember, you're still flying one airline. The new Republic Airlines.

Serving more cities. Even as we change our name, we are serving more U.S. cities than any other airline . . . 157 cities, to be exact. As we grow, we'll be improving that service by adding more nonstops and more flights to many cities.

We'd like to welcome you aboard the new Republic Airlines. So you can see for yourself how your kind of airline is on the grow.

For reservations, call your travel agent or 681-1223.

Legion Off To Strong Start

Under first year coach Terry Sullivan, the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team is off to one of its best starts in recent memory — Matching the starts enjoyed by those strong 1973 and 1974 Thief River Falls squads who were Ninth District championship contenders.

With a 5-0 debut, and now a 5-1 record after a 2-1 loss to Red Lake Falls Friday, Sullivan has his surprising ball club off to start equal to Rocky Wilson's 1973 and 1974 teams that both opened 5-1. In 1973 Thief River Falls finished with a sparkling 23-4 record and reached the Ninth District tournament championship game before losing to Breckenridge 2-0. In 1974 Thief River Falls finished 18-9 and reached the Ninth District tournament semifinals.

In 1975 it was a 3-3 start and an 11-11 finish for Thief River Falls. In 1976 Thief River Falls opened 5-0 but then lost a doubleheader to Detroit Lakes, finishing the year 17-13.

Thief River Falls lost season opening games to Fargo and Roseau the past two years, finishing 19-10 with a Sub District championship in 1977 and winding up 8-6 in 1978.

Weathered out of its scheduled trip to Crookston Thursday, Thief River Falls remains a co-favorite with Crookston on Northwest League Sub District play. But a July 10 game at Roseau could be a key contest for Thief River Falls, a 3-1 season-opening winner when the two teams met here back on June 8. Thief River Falls' final Northwest League game is scheduled July 12 at Warroad.

Thief River Falls has non-league regular season games remaining with Red Lake Falls, Bagley, Gonvick and Bemidji, along with a July 7-8 invitational tournament appearance at Crookston.

Post-season Northwest League Sub District playoffs start July 24. The Ninth District tournament, featuring four league champions and four league runner-ups, will be played Aug. 2-5 at New York Mills.

This is the 54th year of American Legion baseball competition in Minnesota which features some 250 teams playing in ten districts. Those districts, broken down into sub district league play, will provide the ten teams, along with the host ball club, who will participate in the 1979 American Legion state baseball tournament Aug. 10-13 at Willmar.

The state tournament will be an 11-team, double-elimination affair that will send its champion to Central Plains Region 6 tournament at Fargo, N.D. against the champions of Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota and the host Fargo ball club.

Eight regional champions will advance to the American Legion baseball World Series at Greenville, Miss. Aug. 30 to Sept. 30. The 1980 American Legion World Series will be played in Ely.

While New York Mills plays host to the 1979 Ninth District tournament, the District One event will be played at Rochester Aug. 1-5; Second District at Sleepy Eye July 27-Aug. 5; Third District at St. Peter Aug. 2-5; Fourth District in St. Paul July 25-Aug. 5; Fifth District in Minneapolis Aug. 2-5; Sixth District in Cold Spring Aug. 2-5; Seventh District at Litchfield July 28-Aug. 3; Eighth District at Grand Rapids Aug 2-5; and Tenth District at Princeton and Delano July 31-Aug. 5.

GOING HIGH IN the air to pull down a throw from the outfield, Tony Dorn, Inc. catcher Randy Dallmann didn't come down in time to tag Wagon Wheel base runner Rick Rantanen who completed an inside-the-park home run with a slide across home plate in the second inning of Thursday's Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association Division I game. The Middle River ball club won the game 6-2.

Schmidt Stealers Falter In Women's Slow Pitch

Unbeaten at the start of the week, the Schmidt Stealers lost three of four outings in Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball to fall into fifth place in the 16-team league.

After losing a one-sided 24-4 game to Red Lake Falls in a battle of unbeaten teams Monday, the Schmidt Stealers could do no better than a doubleheader split in a round of Tuesday rain-postponed make-up games, beating winless Rusty Nail 11-6 but losing to Ekeren Drug 15-5 when Laura Larson and Kelly Storhaug homered for the winners.

The busy and unproductive week continued for the Stealers when Wednesday's regularly scheduled action saw the Ridge Runners claim an easy 16-6 victory over the faltering Schmidts squad.

Middle River's Ridge Runners (7-1) stayed within striking distance of still-unbeaten Red Lake Falls (8-0) with three wins. A 13-9 victor over Falls Clinic Tuesday despite home runs by the losers' Helen Anderson and Linda Olson, the Ridge Runners made it a doubleheader sweep Wednesday by drilling Ekeren Drug 27-11 before taking the Schmidt Stealers 16-6.

Pizza Hut also built a 7-1 record by beating J & B Drug 17-3 Tuesday and blanking Hydra-Mac-Toreq 12-0 Wednesday behind a grand slam home run by Coco Stokke.

Great Northwest Agency, Inc. (6-2) missed a chance to be part of a three-way second place tie by losing to Hydra-Mac Toreq 16-9 Tuesday but bounced back to drop J & B Drug 13-4 Wednesday when Lorri Cwikla hit a three-run home run.

St. Hilaire Saints earned a pair of close wins, stopping First Federal Savings & Loan Association 5-2 Tuesday, then breaking a 2-2 sixth inning tie to shade Falls Clinic 6-3 Wednesday.

Lorna Bray went 4-for-4, hitting a home run, to lead the Healthy Hustlers past the Credit Bureau 13-7 and the Farmer's Co-op Stingers tipped Roseau Transport 6-5 to complete Tuesday's schedule.

Connie Brinkman also had a 4-for-4 night as the Farmer's Co-op Stingers knocked off the Healthy Hustlers 10-2 Wednesday, while First Federal Savings & Loan Association handled Rusty Nail 14-2 and Roseau Transport ripped Credit Bureau 21-9.

Dean Brandon threw a one-hitter as the Blue Jays shut out the Yankees 5-0. Curt Wagner led the Blue Jays offense with three RBI.

Eric Charleson's run-scoring single enabled the Twins to tie the A's 6-6 in the sixth inning, with the unbeaten Twins then exploding for five runs in the top of the eighth to win the extra inning game 11-6. Charleson and Jeff Schotenboer were both 3-for-4 at the plate, with Schotenboer also pitching all eight innings for his first win of the year.

In two well-played games, the Twins took a 3-1, 5-2 doubleheader from the Blue Jays to run their winning streak to eight games. Schotenboer's double drove in two runs and Ryan Drees collected his second home run of the year in the opener, handing Jeff Anderson a tough-luck loss on the mound, despite a fine four-hitter. Doubles by Dave Absey and Tim Nyland highlighted a four-run sixth inning as the Twins completed the sweep. Drees struck out nine batters to win his third game of the summer.

A grand slam home run by Billy Desrocher and a strong relief pitching performance by Alan Erickson led the Yankees over the A's. Bobby Breiland and Tricia Armstrong contributed two hits apiece for the winners.

Face Slow Pitch Leaders This Week . . .

Wagon Wheel Ball Club Is Making Move In Division I

First-year Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association member Wagon Wheel, after a slow start, has been making noise in Division I lately by winning four of its last five games, including a doubleheader sweep Thursday over Tony Dorn, Inc. 6-2 and Hobo Haus 9-4.

Those two wins, combined with a 16-6 romp over Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. the night before, doubled the Wagon Wheel victory total and put the Middle River ball club above .500 at 6-5.

Tony Dorn, Inc. bounced back to blank Arnold Realty 10-0 behind an 18-hit attack that included a Jim Leach home run, but the Wagon Wheel loss kept Tony Dorn, Inc.—from gaining on the second place TRF Merchants who beat Hobo Haus 8-3 on the strength of Bobo Dicken's 4-for-4 night at the plate.

Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. handled Arnold Realty 11-2 to complete Thursday's Division I schedule that did little to affect the hold on first place owned by the idle Rusty Nail Raiders.

Wagon Wheel will have a chance to show its worth Friday when the Middle River players challenge both the Rusty Nail Raiders and TRF Merchants in a tough doubleheader assignment.

Division II

Battle for the Division II lead became a real dogfight when the St. Hilaire Bears, near season-long front runners, lost twice, dropping a 9-3 decision to Hamms-Pizza Hut Wednesday and losing to Home Lumber 13-4 Friday. That dropped the Bears (7-4) into a three-way second place tie behind The Get-A-Way (8-3), a double winner Friday with a 4-1 victory over Popplers-Action Realty and a forfeit winner over Home Lumber.

Bridgeman's gained one of those second place spots with an 8-6 win over Home Lumber Wednesday and a 5-4 decision over Dallmann Athletic, Inc. Friday.

Popplers-Action Realty outscored Hamms-Pizza Hut 13-8 to complete Wednesday's slate.

Division III

Schumacher's Tireland, down 12-10 in the bottom of the seventh, came up with three consecutive two-out base hits to overtake The Club 13-12 Thursday, pulling the winners into a first place Division III tie with idle Arctic IWA. Ray Eggleston was 4-for-5 in an 18-hit attack for Schumacher's Tireland.

Elsewhere Thursday, Phase II defeated Great Northwest Agency, Inc. 11-7 and Consumer's Co-op Association, with Stuart Peterson clearing the center field fence with a first inning home run, downed McDonald's 7-5.

Division IV

Wilson Brothers Co. was impressive Wednesday in a doubleheader sweep that featured two 10-run-rule decisions and a shot at the Division IV lead.

Mike Wiebolt hit two home runs, including a grand slam, and drove in seven runs as Wilson Brothers Co. opened with an 18-8 romp over Kmart. Mike Wigness homered and was 3-for-4 in the second game, a 14-4 drubbing of Lon's Restaurant & Pub.

But division leader Jean Junction-Rundell Electric maintained its one-game edge over Wilson Brothers Co. with an 18-3 thumping of the TRF Aggies that same night as Steve Rundell came up with a 4-for-4 batting performance.

It was a doubleheader loss for the TRF Aggies, beaten 8-2 by Tip & Ring.

Smith & Holthusen was a doubleheader winner in Division IV Friday, beating Lon's Restaurant & Pub 13-10 and dropping the TRF Aggies 14-9.

Legion Winning Streak Ended By RLF 2-1

Taking a break from Northwest League play, the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team split a pair of decisions that left the Terry Sullivan-coached squad with a 5-1 season record.

Thief River Falls pushed its 1979 season-opening winning streak to five games Wednesday with an 11-3 win over the Grand Forks Air Force Base but lost for the first time Friday when Pete Sullivan's Red Lake Falls squad pulled out a 2-1 victory. No details were made available on either game.

A Thursday Northwest League game at Crookston was postponed because of rain.

A League Race Made Close In Women's Golf

First Northwestern State Bank had its A League lead shrink to four strokes in the latest round of Thief River Falls women's golf club competition.

The First Northwestern State Bank squad has shot a 470 to date, followed by Gladys' 474, KTRF 481, Thune-Upham & Associates 483, Bredeson Cleaners 504 and Northern Motors 510.

Simplot Soil Builders, like First Northwestern State Bank a season-long leader, kept a firm hold on the B League lead with a 492, followed by First Federal Savings & Loan Association 510, Bergan Travel 518, Lee Plumbing & Heating Co. 551, Evans Seed, Wool & Fur 557 and Gordon's Hallmark & Gifts 562.

Vi Johnson and Joan Peterson shared a low net honors in the A League with 34s. Carol Becker's 31 was the low net in the B League.

THE BALL BOUNCED away from Tony Dorn, Inc. catcher Randy Dallmann before he could apply the tag to Wagon Wheel Base runner Mike Peterson who scored from third base on a sacrifice fly to short left field by teammate Mike Carriere in the fifth inning of Thursday's Division I game in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association. Wagon Wheel beat Tony Dorn, Inc. 6-2 and added a 9-4 victory over Hobo Haus for a doubleheader sweep.

Action Realty Is 3-2 Winner Over Dallmann

Action Realty scored two unearned runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to surprise Dallmann Athletic, Inc. 3-2 in Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league play Thursday.

A Mike Drury-Al Erickson pitching duel was actually won by Drury who surrendered just two base hits, but Erickson picked up the victory with a three-hitter when Dallmann Athletic, Inc. committed three sixth inning errors.

Trailing 2-1 and limited to just one hit through five innings, Action Realty won it when Paul Drees led off the sixth with a single to left. Bunts by Tim Barris and Erickson were then mishandled for the tying and winning runs. Barris' attempted sacrifice was muffed and put runners at first and second. Erickson's bunt was fielded, but in an attempt to throw out Drees at third, the ball went into left field where it was again misplayed as both Drees and Barris scored.

Action Realty began the scoring in the first inning when Nick Drees hit a 2-0 pitch out of the ball park.

Dallmann Athletic, Inc. took the lead in the top of the second when Randy Dallmann drew a walk, stole second and scored on Rick Reierson's two-out single. A throw to the plate moved Reierson to second and he scored the go-ahead run on Gary Laidley's base hit to center field.

N.S. Transport 3
Radio Shack 2

In what some observers called the finest game of the year in the Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league, North Star Transport outlasted upset-minded Radio Shack 3-2 in nine innings to complete a Friday twin bill for the losers.

Radio Shack got on the scoreboard first in the top of the first inning when Bob Lundbohm doubled to left, advanced to third on a ground out, and scored on Match Dicken's sacrifice fly.

North Star Transport tied the contest in the bottom of the frame when Nick Neibuaer led off with a two bagger to right center, went to third on a ground out and scored on Ron Ostby's suicide squeeze bunt.

It was 2-1 lead after two innings when Tom Neibauer led off the second with a walk, was sacrificed to second by Mike Carriere, advanced to third in a passed ball and scored on a wild pitch.

Radio Shack scored the tying run in the top of the seventh on singles by Dicken, Glen Kalsnes and DuChamp.

Neibauer got out of earlier trouble in the fourth when Brian Peterson led off with a triple and Dicken walked. Neibauer got Don Forney on an infield popup, Kalsnes on a ground out and DuChamp on a soft grounder back to the mound.

But in the bottom of the ninth inning, North Star Transport got the lead-off batter, Darrell Stromlund on board via an error. Kevin Sethre laid down a sacrifice bunt and Stromlund raced to third when the base was uncovered.

Dan Peterson hit a grounder to DuChamp who checked the runner at third before tossing to first. But Stromlund raced for home as soon as DuChamp looked at first. The relay back to the plate was too late, and North Star Transport remained undefeated.

Predator, Prey Have Different Sleep Patterns

Humans spend about one-third of their lives sleeping. But what about other animals — how much sleep do they need? Most animals require sleep or rest each day, according to Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine, but some need to put in more hours than others.

Most long sleepers are predators, which hunt other animals for food, explains the National Wildlife Federation's monthly publication for children. Cats, for example, have few enemies, and may spend up to 16 hours a day napping. Bats, which sleep 20 hours a day, and opossums, which sleep up to 19, are among the longest sleeping predators. "These animals pack a lot of living into the few hours they are awake," notes Ranger Rick.

Some short sleepers are animals which have hooves, such as donkeys and elephants. Although they usually log about four hours each day, these animals can get by without any sleep for long periods of time, sometimes even months.

Animals which must always be on the alert for enemies sleep very little, out in the open where they can watch for danger. Wild donkeys, for example, sleep in open grasslands. Wild guinea pigs nap above ground, as do rabbits, which doze lightly on and off — up to 20 short naps in one day.

When night falls, most birds sleep perched on tree branches, their feet locked into place, and their beaks tucked under their feathers until daybreak. Owls, of course, sleep by day, as do a few other birds.

Many birds have "slumber parties," says Ranger Rick. Quail roost on the ground in a circle with all their tails together. Goldeneye ducks sleep in tight, floating bunches on lakes and rivers on cold winter nights. Wrens and many other small birds sleep huddled together for warmth.

Reptiles also sleep, but amphibians and fish only "rest," explains Ranger Rick. That is, they are always slightly aware of what's going on around them. Insects are also resters, rather than true sleepers. At night butterflies hang their heads down on blades of grass with their wings tightly folded. Wasps and bees also rest in the grass, while ants huddle together in their underground nests. When ants become active again, they stretch and shake their six legs, and open their mouths widely, as if they were yawning.

Are other animals the dreamers that people are? Insects, fish, and other animals that aren't true sleepers don't dream, says Ranger Rick. Nor do reptiles. Birds dream only for a short time, but all mammals dream.

The mammal whose manner of sleeping and dreaming most closely resembles ours is the chimpaness. There are some differences, however. After sunset, a chimp looks for a good firm place in a tree, such as a fork or a branch. Then the chimp bends down nearby leafy branches to make a nest, often grabbing at a handful of leafy twigs to use as a pillow.

HOW LONG DO THEY SLEEP?

Lower Stress Tips Given For Family Vacation

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

It's an idyllic scene: Mom and Dad and the kids splash in the lake and picnic in the woods. When night falls, the family sings camp songs under the stars.

If you plan to brave the predatory gas pumps and mosquitoes to reach this dream summer vacation, you may be headed for disillusionment according to a University of Minnesota researcher.

"Don't idealize it. The family vacation is a delicate social event," said Paul Rosenblatt, professor of family social science at the University of Minnesota.

Too much togetherness on vacation can alter each family's balance of togetherness and apartness and create stress, according to Rosenblatt, who has surveyed vacationing families and done related research. During a vacation, the daily or weely opportunities to engineer some time apart by attending club or church meetings, disappearing into a hobby room, rising earlier or later than other family members, immersing oneself in household or yard chores, spending long periods of time in the bathroom, or commuting to and from work, are gone or reduced drastically.

The stress of too much time spent together can add up by the end of the vacation. Minnesota's biggest family agency often gets the largest number of requests for counseling the day after Labor Day, Rosenblatt said.

The family vacation is harder on some families than on others. Couples who are abrasive fighters typically need to be apart after a fight, and separation is hard to manage on a vacation. Some of these couples think more time spent together will solve the problems, but it will only aggravate the situation, he said. Families who blame arguments on "a bad day at work or school" also lose this excuse while on vacation.

Of course some families like combat, Rosenblatt said, and the only time a family vacation actually should not be taken is when no one wants to go.

In that case, couples might consider separate vacations. Although agreeing on this option can cause tension for some couples, separate vacations are reasonable solutions for those comfortable with the idea, he said.

Before heading in opposite directions, however, families might consider some ways to minimize stress on their annual holidays. Planning the right kind of vacation from the beginning makes a big difference, Rosenblatt said. Traveling as a nuclear family creates fewer problems than vacationing with one's friends or older parents, according to a survey. And spending part of the vacation at home can be more relaxing for everyone than driving back just before returning to work. (It creates fewer car and gasoline problems, too.)

Dividing up travel tasks ahead of time can also lessen stress, Rosenblatt said. That way the family doesn't have to fight over where to stop for lunch every day or hassle over who decides on the campsite. Couples who have trouble making decisions together might consider a package tour, or select one place to spend their entire vacation, he said.

Family members who protect their private territories at home would probably prefer a vacation in one place, where they can reestablish territories, Rosenblatt said. Those with tense relationships should try to maintain their ordinary degree of apartness.

Islands of apartness on vacation are important for many couples, Rosenblatt said. Listening to the car radio, reading, sleeping, watching TV, attending to other family members, and visiting a resort with separate programs for various family members, are typical tools used by family members to maintain some separation.

Even bad weather can minimize stress, Rosenblatt's survey showed. People may sleep through more of a rainy vacation or use the weather as a scapegoat for their problems, he said.

Conflict during a family vacation is not necessarily bad, Rosenblatt said. Families may be led to experiment creatively with their relationships and some may come to recognize the need for counseling. Others may feel they are fulfilling an important duty by visiting relatives, and without a vacation, some people would feel truly locked in.

Rosenblatt recommends that people avoid expecting too much from their family vacation. "Just remember how it was last year," he said.

State Patrol Chief Named IACP Officer

Col. James C. Crawford, chief of the Minnesota state patrol, was recently appointed treasurer of the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP), the world's largest and oldest organization of police administrators.

Crawford will serve through September 1980 as chief financial agent of the professional association of 11,600 police executives from 63 nations, said Col. Wilson Speir, IACP president and director of the Texas department of public safety.

Speir praised Crawford's "unique qualifications and experience," citing his "outstanding stewardship of the Minnesota patrol for the last six years" where he manages an annual budget of $20 million.

Crawford, 50, has headed the patrol since 1973 and before that, directed driver license and motor vehicle services, all divisions of the Minnesota department of public safety.

Crawford is also a member of the IACP board of officers as general chairman of the division of state and provincial police. A brigadier general in the U.S. Army Reserve, Crawford has a B.A. in public administration from Metropolitan state university and majored in accounting in Macalester college.

A 26-year veteran with the state patrol, he has supervised the Duluth and Golden Valley Patrol districts and served as patrol training director. He is a native of Forest Lake and lives there with his family.

MSU Given Special Ed. Grant Money

Moorhead state university has received a $52,000 federal grant to develop a special education program that will train teachers to work with children who are labeled emotionally disturbed.

The grant, issued through the Minnesota department of education, includes money to help pay tuition and fees for about 15 students a year.

Norm Buktenica, director of special education at Moorhead state, said that about two to three per cent of all school children can be labeled emotionally disturbed — normal in most other respects, but for some reason unable to adapt to school. Helping them, he said, is one of the top educational priorities in the state.

Only two teachers in the nine-county region surrounding Moorhead are licensed to work with emotionally disturbed children, he said, and none in the 11-county regions of northwest Minnesota. Across the state line in the Fargo school system three teachers are licensed to work with the emotionally disturbed.

Buktenica said that the MSU program is expected to attract about 15 students a year who will specialize in teaching emotionally disturbed children in addition to about 125 students from other educational fields who will take courses in the new program. Students studying under it will also be placed in regional schools for practical training and student teaching.

The university's program has been planned in cooperation with several regional education groups and with faculty at the University of Minnesota. To direct the program, Moorhead State has hired Dr. Paul Beare, currently the director of a crises intervention center for the Wellsville, MO., public school system. He is expected to take over in time to get the program into full swing by Septemer.

The grant is the third and special education program has received in the past two years from federal and state sources, amounting to nearly $350,000 in funding. For questions about the new program, contact Buktenica at 236-2297.

National Trails Symposium Set For Duluth

Fuel supplies, tightened budgets and expanding demands on the nation's trail system will be the topic of concern for the delegates to the National Trails symposium scheduled for Duluth September 4 to 7. The theme of the symposium is "Trails for the 80's."

The national meeting will bring together horsemen, bicyclers, skiers, hikers, snowmobilers and representatives of agencies from both the United States and Canada who build trails.

Don Ledin, chairman of the symposium and trails coordinator for the Minnesota department of natural resources, said representatives of the federal government will present the policies that they will follow during the next decade.

The federal trail plan will be presented by Chris Delaporte, director of the Heritage Conservation recreation service (formerly the federal bureau of outdoor recreation): Ledin said recreational trail users will tell state, local and federal trail builders what they want — and governmental trail specialists will respond.

The keynote speaker from Los Angeles will be Ralph Goodson, chairman of the California Trails committee. He will address the impact of state laws, such as Proposition 13, on the future of trail building and maintenance.

The symposium is sponsored by the Minnesota department of natural resources, the National Trail council and the Heritage Conservation recreation service. Information about the symposium is available from Don Ledin, Chairman of the National Trails Symposium, Box 39 Centennial Building, St. Paul 55155.

Expects Wheat Price To Drop

Transportation problems and news of short crops in the Soviet Union and eastern Europe may have increased the price of wheat more than the current supply warrants, Paul Hasbargen, university of Minnesota extension economist, says wheat prices could be near their peak.

Payments to farmers for storing wheat that is part of the federal grain reserve will stop at the end of June. This gives them an incentive to market some of the more than 400 million bushels of wheat from the long-term grain reserve. As of June 22, about 70 million bushels had already been delivered.

Plan 2 Exhibits As Part Of Art In The Park '79

Regional arts show will be presented during Art-in-the-Park, July 6 and 7, at Northland community college of Thief River Falls. The show, sponsored by the community arts council, will feature the work of two Thief River Falls artists, Alan Swenson and James Hoks.

Paintings of the local artists were award winners at the fine arts festival in May at East Grand Forks and this regional show consists of the winning entries selected from a large number of paintings submitted by area artists to the art committee in East Grand Forks. The show has previously traveled to Hallock, Lake Bronson, Roseau, Newfolden and Red Lake Falls.

A second Art-in-the-Park exhibit will be sponsored by the community arts council and Lutheran Brotherhood downtown at the Northern state bank lobby. Featured in this exhibit will be a traveling art gallery of college students' art work.

Youngsters Tell About Favorite Elderly Folks

During senior citizens month in May, the senior meals and activity program of Thief River Falls encouraged teachers of third graders in the local schools to have their students write about their favorite elderly person. Most of the third grade classes undertook the project and faculty members selected several entries which expressed the thoughts and attitudes of their students.

Students titled their comments "My Favorite Elder" or "My Favorite Older Person". The honest expression of youth is evident in the writings and should make a few elder citizens more than a little proud of what the younger generation thinks of them.

Some of the writings selected are as follows:

"My Greatgrandma is so darn nice you wouldn't believe it. She's up and around all the time. When we go down there she's got sandwiches ready for us in no time. She says we can go into the barn to feed the lambs and my brother and I fight like anything to see which one we want to feed.

"One time I got to feed the lambs all by myself and boy was that fun. I think she's 82 years old. We have a fort out there that my greatgrandma let us build. It took about an hour to build it. We still need rope to tie it. I hope she gives it to us."

—Errin Kolden

"My grandma taught me to plant a flower and tie my shoe. When I was little she took care of me. When she is at our house for dinner sometime she brings me a plant. When I am sick she comes over and we play games. When I do something wrong she scolds me but I still like her."

—Kris Oseid

"My favorite person is my grandma, because she lives with us, and she helps around the house, and she also babysits for my mom. I love my grandma very much, thats why I picked my grandma for my favorite person. My grandma and I play cards and she beats me. She also makes money by babysiting. My grandma is Super! And I love her too."

—Shila Howe

He has a special black chair he likes. When I'm at his house I go to him when I have problems. He fixes my toys when they are broken."

—Kersten Anderson

"This is about my Grandma. She did so many things that you could not beleve your eyes. She would take us up to the store anytime we wanted to. She would ask us if we wanted to sleep over and let us stay up till 10 o'clock. In the morning she would make us oatmeal. Than we would go down in the park and play and go up and draw pictures and talk a little."

—Greg Hall

"My favorite older person is my friend Hilda. She is 80. My mom met her when my aunt told my mom about her. My mom asked Hilda if she would babysit me. Now she has been babysitting me since I was a little baby. I like her because she is very nice to me. She never drove in her life. She lives at home. She was married before. Her husband died when he was in his late fifites. He died from a heart attack. Hilda never got married again. Hilda has blue eyes and gray hair. She always wears dresses. She never had children. She says that she will never get married again. She has never spanked me."

—Teresa Gunderson

"My grandma does not live very close to us, so we wait to visit her when we can. She hugs and kisses us and look at us and says oh my how you have grown. She brings out lots of secret toys and feeds us yummy things for girls and boys. When it is time to go she says come and vist me again. It is not hard to love a grandma who we all know is so very special. I love my Grandma."

—Siri Spong

"My favorite elderly person is my great grandma Scott. She is nice to be with. She is pretty and nice. She is my Grandma's mother. She gives my family things. She is very kind. I can't remember one time when she was mean. She looks like she is 20 years old. She is friendly. She is a good lady. When I visit her she makes really good lunches. She always sends us a Christmas card. She is 69 years old and still lives in her own apartment. She gave my Mom a big, antique, rounded top trunk."

NATIONAL GUARD motorized vehicles are not often called upon to move cargo like Anita Hanson. Her spare time this summer is being spent in preparation for the Miss Thief River Falls pageant July 28.

Anita Hanson In Queen Pageant

Athletic skills made Anita Hanson a top competitor during her school years at Oklee and her competition continues this summer into the Miss Thief River Falls pageant. There is more a spirit of fun than competition in the activity, she says, and she has enjoyed meeting and getting to know the other 10 girls participating.

Anita is the daughter of Mrs. Betty Hanson of Oklee and a 1979 graduate of Oklee high school. Her father died in a snowmobiling accident when Anita was in grade school. She is five feet three inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes. For her pageant talent number she will present humorous excerpts from a book entitled "It's Not Fair".

"We didn't have a team that was all that great or anything," she says about the Oklee girls basketball team of which she was a member. She was selected as the team's most valuable player as a junior, named to the all conference team as a senior and also selected as the most valuable girl athlete in the Oklee school as a senior.

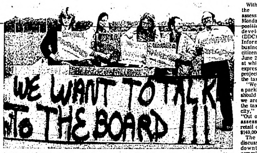
Oppose High Public Costs In TRF Parking Project



SIT-DOWN STRIKE was staged by a group of Best Western employees June 29 to protest management practices at the Thief River Falls motel-restaurant-lounge complex. When one bar manager at the business was fired Friday, 13 other employees, seven of which were working at the time, also walked out. After an executive board meeting held Sunday night the protesting workers were informed that they had voluntarily terminated their employment with the business. Claiming that they had not quit their jobs, strikers picketed Monday seeking an opportunity to appear before the board and state their grievances and defend their actions. Strikers pictured here are (left to right) Laura Stuart, Liz Lian, Gloria Merck, Rick Lian and Roger Golby.

With the official hearing on the proposed parking assessment district set for Monday, July 9, some opposition to the downtown development committee (DDC) project is surfacing. Informal meetings of businessmen and private citizens were held Tuesday, June 26, and Monday, July 2, at which those in attendance expressed opposition to the project because of the cost to the taxpayer.

"We recognize that there is a parking problem and that it should be worked on, but what we are opposed to is having the tax burden placed on the city," a spokesman stated. "Out of a total of $486,000 in assessments, the strictly retail contributions total only $140,000."

The project under discussion was planned by the downtown development committee with city personnel acting as resource persons. It would add up to 200 additional parking stalls to the downtown district at a cost of more than $500,000.

Originally the DDC proposed assessing the property owners within a district of benefit for $350,000 with the city of Thief River Falls to provide $150,000 of in-kind services. However, preliminary assessment roll for the project called for $486,000 worth of assessments to property owners. With the $150,000 in-kind city contribution, that would bring the total project cost to $636,000.

Assessment district for the project would include approximately 800,000 square feet of property in the downtown area with assessments to be made on the basis of a formula which takes into consideration square footage, use and benefit of a business. Credits would be given to businesses providing their own parking.

To finance the project, general obligation bonds would be sold by the city with property owners within the district to be assessed for their share over a period of 10 to 15 years.

Among the properties being considered for purchase and conversion into parking facilities are the Sjoberg parking lot, old Lind motor building, Credit Bureau property, Noreen house adjacent to Metz Baking Co., Northwestern hospital property, Israelson property on N. Horace Ave., Belto lot on N. Horace Ave., HUD site B, and the D & K Collision property.

Official hearing will be held on the project Monday, July 9, at 7:30 p.m. in the city auditorium. Members of the opposition plan to be present to testify.

Majority of those involved in organizing opposition to the project are outside the assessment district and feel that an unjust burden is being placed on the general public.

In the preliminary assessment roll Pennington county would be assessed $20,289 for the law enforcement center and the courthouse, school district 564 would be assessed 86,403; and Northwestern hospital would pay total assessments of $47,619. It is the contention of those opposed to the project that these are essentially public entities and that in addition to the city's $150,000 share the public is bearing at least an additional $154,311 of the assessments, or paying roughly half of the $636,000 project cost.

Spokesman for the opposition also stated that places such as Northwestern Bell telephone company and Inter City Gas are public utilities which must pass along operating costs to their consumers, thereby increasing the public share of the burden again.

What such a project would do to the tax mill rate is another concern of the parties speaking out against the parking project. With $19 million of accessible property in Thief River Falls, 29 mills are presently levied against the city. It would take five additional mills to raise $100,000 in the city, which would be a 17 per cent increase in the present mill rate, the opponents say.

Those opposing the project fear that a $150,000 estimate of city costs is low considering the properties that are being proposed for development. They also feel that there would definitely be some substantial

Best Western Employees Stage Sit Down Strike

by Kim Blaeser
Times Reporter

"These people put their job right out the window for me and for better conditions," commented Liz Lian, whose firing as a Best Western bar manager Friday spurred 13 fellow employees to walk off their jobs. "I asked them not to walk out. Then I told them to report to work on Saturday. They all reported for work and were told they were fired. Right after he (interim manager Merlyn Schroeder) said they were fired he tried to change it and say they quit. They didn't quit, they staged a protest."

Liz Lian was fired June 29 from her position as bar manager at the Thief River Falls Best Western by Schroeder. Schroeder had been promoted by the previous manager from head chef to assistant manager and when the manager resigned Schroeder temporarily assumed the duties of manager.

In a letter to the Best Western executive board Roger Golby, former senior bartender, stated, "Liz and your manager (Merlyn Schroeder) had a personality conflict. In spite of this problem Liz was very conscientious and endeavored to stay out of the manager's way while performing her duties as bar manager."

Lian, indicates that she performed a number of her duties after the bar closed in the evening in order to avoid contact with Schroeder and always addressed him respectfully. She was fired, she stated, because she allegedly spoke disrespectfully to the secretary to the manager, Schroeder's wife, Jodi.

However Lian claims "I did not smart off. I refused to hire someone (who happened to be a relative to the assistant manager) as a bartender because, in the first place, I didn't need a bartender and because I have to watch who I hire since a person in that position is under a lot of pressure and I can't have anybody who would fall apart during a rush."

Lian and the other protesters have sought advice from several attorneys and, she stated, were informed that under Minnesota statutes an exchange of words, such as had allegedly taken place, would still not be a legitimate reason for terminating an employee.

Roger Golby's letter to the executive board on behalf of the protesters also outlined various other circumstances

Offer Services To Area Victims Of Epilepsy

ANN EVENSON

Individuals and families living in region I who are affected by the disorder known as epilepsy, are now being served by a new outreach service. Residents of Marshall, Polk, Kittson, Roseau, Pennington, Red Lake and Norman counties are eligible for services offered by Mrs. Ann Evenson, who may be reached by calling 964-5544 in St. Hilaire.

Funding for the new service to those suffering from epilepsy is provided in part by the Bremer Foundation, the Crookston First National bank, the State Bank of Warren, Polk County State bank, and the State Bank of Shelly. The Minnesota epilepsy league, a statewide United Way member agency, has provided training for Evenson and will match the funded amount in order to make this project possible.

Services available include information and referral, counselling, and self help programs. Films and programs are available to schools, clubs, civic groups and other organizations. Since epilepsy is a disorder affecting two per cent of all citizens in Region I, the same proportion as for the nation, there is great need for public information in order to overcome the unjust stigma often associated with the problem, according to Evenson.

A lifelong hearing impairment has made Evenson sensitive to the feelings of persons who have been rejected socially or for employment because of a physical problem that is misunderstood by society.

Epilepsy affects approximately 80,000 Minnesotans and 4,000,000 Americans. It is not a disease and it is not infectious. It is a dysfunction of electrical impulses emitted by the brain, the cause of which is not possible to identify in 70 per cent of all cases. However, epilepsy can come to anyone, at any point in life sometimes as the result of a head injury such as in a motorcycle car accident. It may be related to a prenatal or birth condition, to toxic factors, to a brain tumor, or to a high fever sustained during an illness, etc.

In 34 per cent of cases, onset of epilepsy occurs during elementary school years, making it imperative that teachers and parents are aware of manifestations. There are many forms, some of them far less easy to recognize than the dramatic, grand mal type with falling down seizures. With referral to a neurologist or other physician for proper diagnosis and medication, epilepsy can be controlled in the majority of cases, Evenson states.

One of Evenson's priorities is to establish self-help and social groups to permit individuals and families to meet other with similar problems. Otherwise the person who has epilepsy often feels alienated and without support, according to Evenson.

Before assuming her work on behalf of epilepsy, Ann Evenson's most recent employment has been in the Thief River occupational development center. She and her husband Erving have six children, all of whom are now grown. Erving Evenson is a retired former employee of the Detroit Mobile Home company

by Richard L. Lesher, President U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Small Business — Our Passport to the American Dream

The 67th Annual Meeting of the National Chamber of Commerce has ended and I would like to share with you one of the biggest stories to emerge. Through no fault of their own, Americans have never fully known and understood the business community — who it really is, what it stands for and what it does.

Perhaps that's understandable. In recent years the increasing press coverage of our economic problems and depressing economic statistics has conditioned much of the public to view business as a mostly huge, impersonal and often invisible presence in our society. I know that perception is inaccurate, and let me tell you why.

At our Annual Meeting I met with the broadest possible cross-section of American business leaders from every area of this country. I spoke to them, but mostly I listened and observed as they described to me the problems of their communities as well as their own frustrations and dreams. Who were they? There were some representatives of big business, but there were far more from small business; they were often your neighbors and mine — sometimes they were even the man and his wife who own the store next door.

One of the smash hits of this year's meeting was a truly remarkable film, "Small Business Keeps America Working," produced by the Center for Small Business of the National Chamber. I normally would avoid using this column for promotional purposes. However I feel so strongly about the quality of this film that I want to say, without any apology, that it belongs in every high school in America.

It is a splendid story about the role of small business today, but it is also much more. For example, the film provides a key lesson in our nation's history. We are reminded that the Founding Fathers, in their unparalled wisdom, realized that our cherished political, social and religious freedoms would not endure unless they were inextricably tied to our economic freedoms.

It was precisely this idea of protecting the individual and limiting the power of the state that is the very essence of the American Revolution. That is what made it unique; that is what made it succeed.

The film allows us to relive the American dream of unprecedented opportunity that attracted millions of people to our shores — that traveled with them as pioneers to the West, that became the foundation of our Industrial Revolution and, that remained throughout, the most important factor in our country's unbelieveable growth.

Result? Today in America there are 13 million small businesses and they form the backbone of our entire economy. They represent 97 per cent of all individual business firms, employ more than half the labor force, provide the livelihood for 100 million Americans, create half the gross national product and most of the new jobs.

And let's not forget that all this is happening despite tremendous odds — four out of five small businesses fail. Those who survive sometimes grow to be our most successful large firms that provide thousands of jobs, useful products and contribute greatly to enhancing our standard of living.

I suggest that record speaks for itself. It proves the American dream is alive and well and demonstrates small business can produce big progress.

But this film goes even further, for it takes us inside the lives of so many different people — a man and wife who own a pizza shop, an insurance agent, an industrial screen manufacturer, a scientist and farmer to cite a few. What emerges are common principles and strengths of priceless value that these leaders are each giving to our country.

One businessman cites the integrity of his product and his word as the key to success in a small community where even one lost customer can result in a lost reputation. A farmer admits that his life is difficult, but being near his family gives him a happiness few others enjoy. A printer recommends that people go into business who have it in their heart. When they do, and they serve their communities, they won't have to worry about making money.

It's thanks to people like this that America has retained its will to achieve, improve, create and excel. And that's why products from ballpoint pens to FM radios, automatic transmissions and helicopters all originated in the minds of small businessmen. Albert Einstein, unsurpassed in his ability to understand the dimensions of space, also summed up best what has remained true throughout time when he said: "Everything that is really great and inspiring is created by individuals who labor in freedom."

And so when you consider these contributions, but you also realize how defenseless small businesses are to the ravages of inflation, regulation and taxation, doesn't it make sense to extend a hand and to try to ensure the survival of the most productive group of people our society has even known? Isn't it about time that the story of small business finally be told?

Oppose Public Costs In DDC Parking Plan future costs in maintenance such as snow removal, striping and policing.

"In comparison to other cities," the opposition spokesman stated, "Thief River Falls presently provides a substantial amount of parking at public expense and maintains it at public cost. We have no objection to them (downtown businesses) having additional parking, but we feel they are getting the direct benefit and should pay accordingly."

Best Western Employees On Sit Down Strike

that prompted the walkout including some employees allegedly being shorted in pay, unclear management practices, unwillingness of management to hear the complaints of employees, implied accusations that the employees were responsible for the disappearance of liquor.

Best Western executive board met Sunday, July 1, to discuss the firing and protest. Only comment of the board or Schroeder was that "the board did review the complaints made and were satisfied that the matter was handled properly by the management." Serving on the executive board are Norris Melander, Bud Evans, Otis Miller and Dr. H. P. Wendt.

Contention of the board was that the employees voluntarily terminated their employment with Best Western when they walked off their jobs Friday night. In Golby's letter to the board he states, "We would like to point out that we have not quit." Lian comments, "We secured the bar until the assistant manager arrived, handed him the keys to the cash register and, informed him that we were staging a sit-down strike to protest the management policies. They fired every lounge employee even though every lounge employee was not working that night although they did sign the petition to the board."

Monday some of the 13 protesters picketed the entrance to the Best Western service road with signs reading "Unfair Management" and "We want to talk to the board." The strikers stated that they had a petition with over 100 customer signatures protesting the firing and all they wanted was an opportunity to appear before the board, state their grievances and defend their actions.

Norris Melander, chairman of the executive board, indicated that as far as the board was concerned the issue was closed. Protestors, however, have contacted the civil liberties board and plan to engage a lawyer.

Horticultural Meeting Set For Marshall

Full day of garden workshops covering nearly all aspects of gardening, tours to private gardens and a prairie preserve, and a flower show with the theme of gardening on the prairie will highlight the 1979 Minnesota state horticultural society convention scheduled Friday-Sunday, July 13 to 15 at Southwest State University at Marshall. The meeting is open to the public.

Rodney Searle, Waseca, speaker of the Minnesota House of Representatives, will be the featured speaker, addressing the society awards luncheon at noon Saturday, July 14.

The convention will begin Friday afternoon, July 13, with business meetings, a program demonstrating the art of flower arranging and the opening of the flower show and a garden bazaar.

Saturday workshops, conducted by both professional and amateur horticulturists, will cover a variety of topics, including flowers, fruit, vegetables, herbs, lawn care, landscaping, and flower arranging. A class on the prairie and a trip to Hole-in-the-Mountain prairie preserve in Lincoln county, also is scheduled for Saturday afternoon. A barbeque and old time dance will be held Saturday evening at the university.

Registration fee is $5 for society members, $7.50 for non-members, and $1.50 for students. Persons may register at the door or in advance by writing the Minnesota State Horticultural Society, 161 Alderman Hall, University of Minnesota, St. Paul, 55108.

Safe Driving Asked For Over Fourth Of July

Minnesota roads will be heavily patrolled over the Fourth of July holiday weekend as law enforcement officers make a special effort to convince motorists to drive safely.

"But for a truly safe Fourth of July holiday period, we need the cooperation of every motorist to hold highway crash deaths and injuries to a minimum," said commissioner John P. Sopsic of the Minnesota department of public safety.

"Keeping your speed at 55 miles per hour or below is one of the best ways you can help our state and nation save both precious lives and gasoline," he said.

"Always fasten your safety belt, even on short trips, because in a crash, wearing a safety belt can cut your chances of death and injury by more than half. And make sure to avoid alcoholic drinks if you are driving," advised Sopsic.

The State Patrol will have extra troops covering the interstate freeways and selected state trunk highway as part of "operation CARE" (Coordinated Accident Reduction Enforcement), a cooperative enforcement program by 48 states.

During the peak weekend traffic hours, paramedics will be riding in the State Patrol's new jet-turbine helicopter on traffic airwatch flights over the Twin Cities metro area.

The helicopter and paramedic combination will offer quick emergency medical aid if a traveler is seriously injured or ill, said Sopsic. "If necessary, the helicopter can become an airborne ambulance to fly the victim to a hospital."

The paramedics are trained to handle all kinds of medical emergencies, from traffic accident injuries to cardiac arrests, and are qualified to give medicines and intravenous treatment, said Bill Myers, president of the Minnesota emergency paramedics association.

Sopsic recommended that motorists give their vehicles a thorough checkup before starting any long trips. "Make sure all lights are working well and replace cracked and broken lenses. Check that brakes and steering system are in good condition."

Keep your tires properly inflated at all times and replace those that are defective or worn. Be sure that the cooling system is operating efficiently to avoid the possibility of an overheated engine and expensive repairs, he said.

"Start your trip well rested," said Sopsic, "and take frequent breaks during the trip to relax from the strain and monotony of driving."

Two Business Seminars Set Through UMC

Personality and attitude counseling will be offered in a pair of short courses under the auspices of the business division of the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC).

The one-week class will open with a seminar on "personal effectiveness" on Monday and continue Tuesday through Friday with a program titled "Adventures in Attitudes." The dual seminars, taught by Dr. Larry K. Christiansen, business division chairman, will meet from July 9-13 at the Red Apple cafe in Mahnomen. The following week (July 16-20) the UMC campus will be the setting for the combined short courses. Participatns will meet from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. during the week, with sessions the second week at UMC scheduled in Dowell hall 103.

The personal effectiveness seminar may be taken for one credit at a cost of $40 for the day or for non-credit at $25. The fee for Adventures in Attitudes is $120 if enrollees wish to receive four credits or $80 if they register for non-credit. Additional information and registration may be gained by calling the business divison of UMC at (218) 281-6510, extension 210.

According to Christiansen, the two programs are designed to help induvuduals "release their talent potential and mind power." Registrants will learn thought techniques of influencing, pleasing, attracting and getting recognition from people. Presentations will also be geared, Christiansen indicated, to fostering more self-confidence and to helping participants overcome feelings of inferiority and helping them to "conquer moods of depression, doubt and frustration." Another of the seminar objectives is to enhance the ability to "handle daily problems with ease and assurance," the instructor stated.

MN Taxpayers Group Holds Annual Meet

Members of the Minnesota Taxpayers association held their 53rd annual meeting Monday, June 25, aboard the Jonathan Padelford river boat on the Mississippi river to elect officers and directors and celebrate the legislature's passage of $711 million in tax relief for Minnesotans.

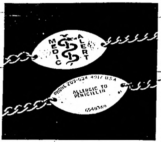
Wilfred Viitala, Bloomington, was elected to a two-year term as president of the association. He replaces Edwin C. Kraus, who has served as president for the past two years.

In order to reflect the association's growing membership and diversity, the board of directors has increased to 29 members. New directors are: Jean Thorne, St. Paul; Gene Mason St. Paul; James Hepp, Duluth; Paul Horn, Moorhead; Tom Thompson, Minneapolis; and Lloyd Cherne, Minneapolis.

Clyde Allen, commissioner of revenue and former research director for the MTA, was guest speaker. Allen discussed the new tax bill and its effect upon Minnesotans.

The MTA, a non-profit, non-partisan, statewide taxpayer's group, dedicated to efficiency in government and the furtherance of sound fiscal and tax policies, is known as the "watchdog" of governmental spending and taxation in Minnesota.

The association celebrated passage of the largest tax relief package in the history of Minnesota.



MEDIC ALERT SYSTEM of emergency medical identification and information was directly credited with saving 2,000 lives during a recent 12 month period. Medic Alert, a non-profit, charitable, and tax exempt organization, provides a 24-hour emergency information system for the one out of five people who have a hidden medical condition, such as heart problems, diabetes, epilepsy, allergies to penicillin and other medication. In case the member is unable to speak or communicate due to an accident or sudden illness, the emblem will alert emergency personnel and trigger the system of protection.

Use Caution In Using Chemicals In State Lakes

Use of copper sulphate and other chemicals for treatment of algae and vegetation in lakes can be done safely — if it is done correctly, the Department of Natural Resources said this week.

Howard Krosch of the DNR's ecological service section said the department does not promote the use of chemicals in lakes but recognized that serious nuisance conditions occur.

"Use of the chemicals is allowed providing their use will improve recreation and so long as no significant damage is done to the lake's fish and wildlife populations," he said.

"Chemicals, like other tools, are safe if used correctly but can be dangerous and destructive if used improperly," he emphasized.

Use of any chemicals in Minnesota lakes and streams requires a permit from the Department of Natural Resources. When an application for chemical use is received, several pages of instructional material are sent along to the applicant.

One of the most commonly applied for permits is for use of copper sulphate to control algae. Detailed instructions are provided by the DNR regarding the correct method of applying this chemical so as to achieve the desired result without damaging fish life.

"Most problems resulting from chemical application occur because the person using the chemical does not read the label on its container and is carless when applying it," said Krosch. He added that use of any pestide chemical in a manner incositent with label instructions is a violation of federal law.

Chemical Waste Threatens U.S. Water Supply

Water is a most pervasive necessity, covering 75 per cent of the earth's surface and consituting 80 to 90 per cent of human blood. The average person consumes about 16,000 gallons of water in a lifetime. In the lower 48 United States, 4.2 trillion gallons of precipitation fall daily.

And yet we face a shortage of safe, clean water, according to a new publication from the National Wildlife Federation, the nation's largest conservation education organization. "What Is Happening to Our Water?" gives a brief history of waterworks and pollution, tells of the effects of water pollution on the health of humans and wildlife, and gives a concise guide to federal water-pollution laws and how to use them to help plan for clean water supplies.

The pamphlet also devotes a section to a problem unique to the 20th century: chemical pollution of our waterways. Pesticides, oil, grease, air pollutants and toxic substances buried in landfills are all either leaking into our water or being washed in by rain.

"What Is Happening to Our Water?" concludes that we have come along long way from the "foul-smelling gutters" that were the sewers and waterways of earlier centuries. But if we are to meet the goal of swimmable, fishable, drinkable and bountiful water, the public must strongly support federal and local clean-up and conservation efforts. Single copies of the 16-page pamphlet are available free from the National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Additional copies are 15 cents.

See Fireworks Safely At Public Display

Best way to celebrate the Fourth of July, safely and legally, is to enjoy your fireworks at an authorized public display, advised state fire marshal Wes Werner of the Minnesota department of Public Safety.

He reminded Minnesotans that "the use or purchase of fireworks is illegal under state law. Even sparklers are unlawful because they can easily set fire to a person's clothing."

State law forbids using or selling anything that makes an audible or visual effect through explosion or combustion, and that includes firecrackers, roman candles, torpedos and skyrockets, he said.

Sale or use of these fireworks items is a misdemeanor. Conviction of a misdemeanor can bring a maximum penalty of $500 fine and-or 90 days in jal.

Job Safety Seminar Set In TR Falls

Course designed to show supervisors how to control and handle hazardous materials is scheduled for Thief River Falls at the Best Western Inn Thursday, July 12 according to the Minnesota safety council, sponsor of the one day seminar.

Hazardous materials may injure employees, affect employee's health or may destroy a plant or property, resulting in costs to the business owner, said Arthur E. McCauley, manager of the occupational asevices for the safety council.

The course is designed to give supervisors information on what hazardous materials may be in a department and plant, what the proper methods of storage are, what the safe methods of handling are and how to safely dispose of these materials.

Course details and registration firormation may be obtained from the Minnesota safety council, 145 Hamm Building, St. Paul, MN 55102.

Early advance registration is requested.

Guidelines For Safer Boating Are Suggested

Minnesota safety council reminds the public of a few important boating rules for the summer season:

(1) Don't overload — be sure the size of the motor matches the size of the boat. And — be aware that the number of seats does not indicate the capacity of the boat.

(2) If you must change seats, keep to the center, with hands on gunwales. Keep low and don't stand up.

(3) Never make a sharp turn at high speed.

(4) Keep watch for rocks, logs and other boats, swimmers and water skiers.

(5) Watch the weather — get off the water if skies look threatening.

(6) Always wear personal flotation devices (PFDs) and insist that all passengers do, too.

One more important reminder — national studies indicate that alcohol is a factor in at least half of boating fatalities and that the effects of alcoholic beverages on the human system are magnified by the heat and sunshine of a summer day. As with driving an automobile, it's not a good idea to take the wheel of a boat if drinking. Allow at least one hour to pass for each drink consumed before taking to the water.

For a free pamphlet on boating safety, or to schedule a water safety film, write to the Minnesota Safety Council, 145 Hamm Building, St. Paul 55102.

State Safety Groups Join In New Campaign

Minnesota safety council, Minnesota department of public safety and Minnesota energy agency have announced the kick-off of an intensive campaign to encourage compliance with the 55 mph speed limit as a way to save gasoline and lives.

The theme for the campaign, which will involve business and industry, government and civic organizations on its activities, is "Save Lives, Save Gas. . .55 mph Makes Sense".

"Driving 55 mph does make sense. It is one of the simplest, most positive steps a driver can take to cut fuel consumption and maybe, to save his life", said Donald B. Shank, vice president of the Duluth, Missabe and Iron Range Railway company and president of the Minnesota safety council.

"Test after test has proven that decreasing vehicle speed to 55 mph can save as much as 30 per cent in fuel usage, and with $1 a gallon gasoline on the horizon, that means savings in dollars as well as fuel. 55 mph has shown that it is a life-saving measure, too. Although Minnesota traffic fatalities increased in 1978, they are still almost 20 per cent below the record highs posted before the inception of the 55 mph speed limit in late 1973."

The joint 55 mph campaign will feature free loan of a training film on energy saving and life-saving driving styles. The film is entitled, "Featherfoot". Employers will be urged to distribute paycheck handouts describing the saving benefits of 55 mph as well as bumper stickers. Table tent cards, posters, coffee cups and place mats using the campaign slogan for company cafeterias and organization meetings.

To obtain samples of items to be used in the campaign, or to book the "Featherfoot" film, write or call the Minnesota Safety Council, 145 Hamm Building, St. Paul, 55102, telephone (612) 291-9150.

Farmers And Bankers Show 1979 Optimism

According to the January agricultural credit conditions survey of rural bankers conducted by the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis, 1979 seems to have started out as a pretty good year for farmers in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana and northwestern Wisconsin, and they and their bankers are optimistic.

Farm earnings have improved dramatically since last year. In January, 83 per cent of the bankers say the earnings of farmers in their areas are better than a year ago, and 97 per cent say they are at least as good. These are the largest percentages reporting such strength since early 1974. Bankers say the improvement is mostly due to higher prices for farm commodities, especially livestock.

Also up significantly in January are interest rates on loans, which are following national trends. Bankers report that since October the nominal rates farmers have been paying for short, intermediate, and long-term loans have jumped 73, 85, and 44 basis points, respectively, the biggest increases ever reported to the survey.

Neither high interest rates nor good earning seem to have dampened farmers' demand for cash, though. About 70 per cent of the rural bankers responding in January say both short-and long-term loan demand has been about usual for this time of year, and 30 per cent say short-term demand has been heavier than usual. Farmers are reportedly borrowing primarily to buy machinery, equipment, and livestock.

This kind of investment in the face of high interest rates indicates that many farmers are optimistic about farm prices and income, and bankers seem to share that optimism. All but a few reporting in January expect income to be as good as or better than a year ago in the first quarter. And although most see interest rates trending upward, most also see loan demand remaining strong. Usual or heavier than usual demand is expected for short-term loans by 97 per cent of the bankers and for long-term loans by 82 per cent. As many as 20 per cent think short-term borrowing will be exceptionally strong.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics collects, analyzes and publishes data on the labor force: employment, occupational outlook, unemployment, wages, industrial relations, family budgets, consumer expenditures, economic growth and occupational safety and health.

Fire Marshal Warns Against Storing Gas

With the prospect of fuel shortages in Minnesota and possible gasoline hoarding, the state fire marshal recently issued a stiff warning to emphasize state regulations governing the storage of gasoline.

"Only metal containers are legal for storing gasoline and other flammable and combustible liquids in Minnesota," said state fire marshal Wes Werner. "No containers of plastic or glass are permitted for storing gasoline."

Metal cans must have prominent markings to indicate the flammable product, he said.

Regulations also require that the portable metal containers must have a tight closure with screwed or spring cover, and a spout so the liquid can be poured without spilling.

"Containers of plastic or glass are illegal for gasoline storage," said Werner, "because these materials can burst, burn and break and seriously endanger the user or persons nearby."

Containers full of gasoline are especially hazardous if carried or stored where heat may build up, he said.

"For example, you could wind up destroying your car and yourself by keeping a container filled with gas in your car trunk during the warm, summer months. Heat expands liquid and the released vapors can cause a serious explosion and fire."

Werner said some two-and five-gallon plastic gas containers were recently ordered removed from the shelves of retail stores in Minnesota.

He urged consumers to call if they notice any plastic containers being sold for storing gasoline. Call the state fire marshal's office, 612-296-7641.

Persons storing gasoline in residential areas are in direct violation of state law if the gasoline is stored in aboveground drums, barrels or tanks with gravity-feed spigots. Regulations prohibit gas from being filled directly into vehicles from aboveground tranks.

Pennington Co. Top Dairy Herds Listed

Jerry Hamre, supervisor of the Pennington county dairy herd improvement association puts the following herds as top in the association for the month of May, 1979 with number of cows, milk produced, and pounds of fat listed respectively:

Pearson Bros. Farm, 38 cows, 55.3 lbs. milk, 3.80 test and 2.10 lbs. fat; Robert Rausch, 40, 54.9, 3.62 and 1.99; Knute Nesland, 35, 54.8, 3.72 and 2.04; Darrow Lundeen and sons, 37, 51.6, 3.31 and 1.71; Merle Lundeen, 34, 50.2, 3.53 and 1.77; Orlan Stolaas, 35, 49.8, 3.31 and 1.65; Duane Krohn, 38, 49.5, 3.66 and 1.81; Warren and Lowell Hamrich, 69, 49.1, 3.85 and 1.89; Duane Vatsaas, 48, 48.7, 3.72 and 1.81; and Mylo Carlson, 60, 48.6, 3.79 and 1.84.

The herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. The amount of milk or butterfat produced is averaged out over all the cows, giving the farmer a record of the earning power of his herd for the month.

If too many dry cows are included in the herd, then the average for the month may be too low, even though cows which are milking produce a lot of milk.

There were 28 DHIA herds on test and four owner-sampler herds in the month of April with a total of 1,420 cows. There were 14 cows with records of 600 pounds fat in 305 days or less.

Barbecue Can Be Safe With Proper Care

Minnesota safety council offers the following pointers for cooking out over a barbeque fire with greater safety.

(1) Use a commercially prepared special liquid, solid fire starter, wood shavings or an Underwriters Laboratories listed electric starter. Don't substitute gasoline or cigarette lighter fluid for commercial products designed for the job.

(2) If you use a liquid starter, let it soak into the coals for a couple of minutes before igniting it. Avoid pouring more fluid on the coals once they're lighted — a vapor explosion is the possible result.

(3) Use your outdoor grill away from flammable materials such as that stack of wood for next winter's fire or the can of gasoline for your power mower.

(4) If the weather threatens to dampen your cook-out, don't be tempted to use the outdoor grill inside. Coals give off deadly carbon monoxide. It's best to postpone your barbeque to a sunny day.

Grain, Oilseed Water Exports Are Reduced

An estimated 38.9-million bushels of grain and oilseeds with a farm value of over $120.1-million was exported by barge from Minnesota grain terminals on the Mississippi waterway through May, agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin reported recently. That is lower than the 42.3-million bushels worth $134.5-million shipped by barge from Minnesota terminals through May of last year.

Commissioner Seetin pointed out that a reduction was anticipated, due to the 13-day later opening of the Mississippi waterway this season than in 1978. He added that the diesel fuel shortage currently being experienced by all surface transportation modes may have a continuing impact upon Minnesota grain and oilseed exports.

"Farmers have the markets, and current prices on most grain and oilseed commodities are the most favorable levels that Minnesota producers have seen in two to five years. The availability of energy resources and commercial transportation equipment will determine the volume that our farmers will actually be able to sell this year," commissioner Seetin stated.

The estimates of barge movement into export marketing channels of grain and oilseeds from Minnesota terminal elevators on the Mississippi waterway are based on official inspection records of the state-federal grain inspection service of the Minnesota department of agriculture. It does not include commodities barged down the river without official export inspections.

A 25 per cent drop in barge shipments of soybeans accounted for most of the overall reduction in barge movement of crops. However, the 9.46-million bushels of soybeans moved, at a farm value of $58.7-million, accounted for nearly half the total export value.

Corn continued to be the highest volume farm commodity exported by barge, 20.7-million bushels valued at $39.25-million and wheat exported by barge this season totaled nearly 7.1-million bushels. Oats chalked up the biggest gains this season compared to 1978, a 111 pee cent increase in volume and a 130 per cent increase in value, while completing the scorecard on barged Minnesota exports for the first six week of this river transportation season were 146,400 bushels of corn screenings and 48,000 bushels of rye with an estimated farm value of $377,000.

Vacation Tips Offered To MN. Campers

If you're planning a summer camping vacation, the Minnesota safety council passes along some tips for a safe and successful venture.

Plan your camping trip carefully before you start. Consult a map and campground guide to decide the best route to travel and the best places to stop. Call ahead, if you can, to be sure there is space available at the campground you select — it will save you time, gasoline and frustration wasted on campgrounds full to overflowing. Don't try to travel too many miles in one day. Choose your campsites so that you can drive a leisurely 55 mph along the way. It's a safer speed, more economical and will get you to your destination rested and alert.

Make a list of equipment you'll need on your camping expedition. Include a first aid kit and first aid manual as well as a flashlight and fire extinguisher. Pack your gear so it is easily accessible. Be sure the luggage carrier is tightly fastened and proper trailer connections are made. Avoid using the rear window shelf of your car for storage. Items stored there can become flying missiles in the event of a collision or sudden stop.

It's a good idea to stop at your selected campsite by mid-afternoon so that you can get settled before dark. Choose a campsite that is well-drained, where there is air circulation and combination of sun and shade, and where there is a good water source. Keep the area clean. Instruct the kids on how far from the site they can venture. Give them reasons for the limits so they'll understand the dangers.

Since water activities are probably the most hazardous ... campers, be aware of basic water safety rules. Never swim alone or when overtired. Stay in designated swimming areas. Know your physical limitations. Don't dive into unexplored water. Have an adult present when children are in the water. Know artificial respiration methods. If you're in a boat, make sure all people wear approved personal flotation devices.

If your camping community will cook over an open wood fire (or any outdoor fire) remember to keep the fire small for safety and for comfort. Build it on a small mound to provide drainage and to help keep it going in a shower. If it is windy, build a trench in which to make your fire. Keep children away from the fire. And, chaperone your fire — don't let it go out alone. Let it die down, break up the coals, spread partly burned pieces, soak them thoroughly, stir and soak them again. Cover with dirt or sand. Fire can travel underground unless completely out. Take a few extra minutes to be sure your campfire has been extinguished.

Safe family camping is a combination of good sense and good fun. The Minnesota Safety Council urges your to use your safety knowledge to make your camping trip safe and enjoyable.

Mark Larson Collects Eagle

Mark Larson collected a rare two-under-par Eagle 2 on the 367-yard par 4 seventh hole Sunday while golfing at the Thief River Country Club.

Larson, golfing with Greg. Larson, Steve Easton and Bob Evans, used a 5-wood from about 175 yards to master the feat.

TRF, Crookston Shooters Tie

As unlikely as it sounds, 87 trap shooters from Thief River Falls and Crookston shot to a draw recently when the two clubs got together at Crookston for the first of their two summer matches they arrange each year.

The Thief River Falls-Crookston inter-city shoot began in 1971. Since its beginning, Crookston has earned possession of the traveling trophy five times while Thief River Falls shooters claimed the hardware 11 times, sweeping both matches in 1972, 1973 and 1978.

But this year, with 40 shooters from Crookston and 47 from Thief River Falls on hand at the Crookston club, both squads hit a total of 1,302 clay targets.

"The odds of that happening ard astronomical," Crookston spokesman Con Schulz told Lori Mateer of the Crookston Times. "With the number that we had participating times 50 shots each, the chances of the score coming out dead even are just unthinkable."

A tie-breaking procedure couldn't be decided upon, so members of both clubs agreed to leave the match a tie and put the trophy in limbo until the next shoot — scheduled to be held later this month at the Thief River Falls home base Marshallton Gun Club located 12 miles north of town on highway 59.

TRF Legion At RLF Thursday

A change in the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball schedule, caused by last week's rainy weather, will find Thief River Falls playing at Red Lake Falls Thursday at 7 p.m.

The game was originally scheduled to be played in Thief River Falls as the second half of a home-and-home set between the two teams coached by brothers Terry (TRF) and Pete (RLF) Sullivan. But the first Thief River Falls-Red Lake Falls game, played last Friday, was moved from Red Lake Falls to Thief River Falls because of the weather.

Scott Sabo held Red Lake Falls to just one hit and struck out 11 that night, but was the losing pitcher as Red Lake Falls snapped Thief River Falls' five-game season-opening winning streak with a 2-1 victory. Thief River Falls, after playing a make-up Northwest League game at Crookston Tuesday, will return to Crookston this weekend to participate in a Saturday-Sunday tournament.

DIANE ANDERSON, First Federal Savings & Loan Association shortstop, completed a fielder's choice force play on the Ridge Runners' Rhonda Belto by stepping on second base during Monday's Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league game played on the East Side diamond. The Ridge Runners won the game 10-5 to improve their season record to 8-1.

Elks Third In Bemidji Event

Sandwiching wins over Red Lake Falls and Park Rapids around a loss to the host Bemidji Braves, the Thief River Falls Elks claimed a third place finish in the annual Horace May baseball tournament for 14-year-olds.

Thief River Falls opened the eight-team Bemidji tournament Friday against Red Lake Falls, winning a 7-3 extra inning decision with a four-run ninth inning that was highlighted by a two-run Tim Bergland single. Winning pitcher Rick Langlie pitched a two-hitter.

Bemidji Braves out-scored the Elks 15-13 in Sunday's semifinals, benefiting from 12 hits, 11 walks and five errors. The Elks opened with a 2-0 led, fell behind 8-3 in the third and battled back to gain a 9-8 lead in the fourth before faltering again. Mark Harder was the game's losing pitcher.

A four-run first inning provided the winning margin in the Elks' 7-3 Sunday afternoon third place game victory over Park Rapids. With one out in the first, Brent Schmitz and Lonnie Aune both came up with two-run singles. Greg Harder pitched a two-hitter for the victory.

Staples beat the Bemidji Braves in the title game.

Thief River Falls Elks, 12-5 for the year, will be at East Grand Forks Thursday for a split doubleheader against the East Grand Forks Red and the East Grand Forks Blue starting at 1 p.m.

Coached by Paul and Bruce Williams, the Elks will host the 11th annual Thief River Falls invitational Babe Ruth baseball tournament Saturday and Sunday, using both the Thief River Falls fairgrounds and Northland community college diamonds.

TRF Merchants Sweep Twinbill Against Roseau

Scott Johnston was the winning pitcher in both games Friday as the Thief River Falls Merchants youth baseball team for 13-year-olds swept a doubleheader at Roseau.

Thief River Falls won the opener 6-3 by breaking a 3-3 tie with a three-run outbreak in the top of the fifth and final inning. Tim Bottem led off the inning with a double, scoring on a sacrifice and an error. Gary Cornell and Rick Spong followed with RBI singles.

A 10-run first inning was the winning margin as Thief River Falls took the second game 19-9. Johnston, after pitching a three-hitter in the first game, followed with a four-hitter in the nightcap when he also led an 11-hit Thief River Falls offense with a 3-for-3 effort at the plate.

July 10-11 have been chosen as the dates for the famous muskie days at Nevis, a fine community located between Park Rapids and Walker and in the middle of some of the finest fishing in the state.

"Wise Fishermen's Encyclopedia" has this to say about the area:

"The Park Rapids section, in Hubbard county, has more fish species and varieties of fish represented in its midst than had any other like area in the world."

Nevis is in the midst of this area.

The muskie days fishing contest begins July 4 and runs through July 11. The contest is for all species.

Parade for the celebration will take place at Nevis at 7 p.m. July 10. The coronation of the queen will take place in the evening of July 11. There will be a street dance on the final day of the celebration. Many thousands of people enjoy this celebration each year.

Fishing News

Largest muskie taken in the Leech Lake area so far this summer was caught by Dick Pearson of St. Cloud in Little Boy Lake using a Stump Hawg. The fish weighed 32-pounds, 8½-ounces.

In the Baudette area, fishing has slowed some at Morris Point Gap and Lighthouse Gap on Lake of the Woods but limits of walleyes are still being caught. It just takes a little longer. Fishing is excellent along Sable Island and the walleyes are running in the 1½ to two-pound size. Big Island was the hot spot for the week with limits being caught in a short time in 10 to 12 feet depth. The largest walleye for the week weighed seven-pounds, 12-ounces.

TROPHY WINNERS in the first annual Minnesota state buddy shoot team championship trap competition Saturday and Sunday at the Marshallton Gun Club north of Thief River Falls included, left to right, resident women's champions Pam Johnson and Mary Tri who hit 83 of 100 targets; and junior champions Jeff Heckroth and Kari Helm who hit 80 of 100.

MINNESOTA TWINS shortstop Roy Smalley posed with Anne Papenheim, state poster child for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, to help promote the Labor Day "Twins Run for MD" on Mon., Sept. 3. Smalley and his wife, Christine, are serving as co-chairpersons of the event that will feature a pair of pledge-producing races in the Metropolitan Stadium parking lot in Bloomington. A $3.50 race entry fee will also buy a runner a general admission ticket to the Twin's Kansas City Royals game that day.

Twins Run For MD Set For Labor Day

Minnesota Twins, in conjunction with the Muscular Dystrophy Association, are sponsoring the "Twins Run for MD" on Labor Day, Mon., Sept. 3, at 9 a.m. Two hours later, the Twins will square off against the defending West Division champion Kansas City Royals.

Two races, a four-kilometer fun run for the non-competitive runner and a ten-kilometer race for the more serious athlete will be held, both runs beginning in the Metropolitan Stadium parking lot. The ten-K race will end on the field inside the Met, while the four-K event will finish up in the parking lot.

Those entering should send $3.50 to Twins Run for MD, Minnesota Twins, Metropolitan Stadium, Bloomington, Minnesota 55420, clearly specifying which run the individual will be involved in, the ten-K or the four-K. In addition to race administration, the fee includes a general admission ticket to the Twins-Royals game, parking and a certificate from M.D.A.

Entries must be received by August 20. A limited number of late entries will be accepted the day of the race at the stadium from 7 to 8 a.m.

Applications and further information is available through the Twins, the Muscular Dystrophy Association and many Twin Cities area athletic footware outlets.

After pre-registering, the runner will receive some pledge sheets in addition to the aforementioned fee inclusions. It is hoped that individuals will then ask friends, acquaintances and local businesses to pledge a minimum of 25 cents per kilometer run, designed to help MD's Labor Day drive achieve unprecedented success.

Also, the Twins have pledged 50 cents of each ticket sold that day to MD, subsequently enabling each person attending the game. . . runner or non-runner. . . to become a contributor in the fight against 38 muscle-destroying diseases!

A special runner recognition ceremony will take place at home plate immediately following the Monday morning contest, including the presentation of a bevy of awards. For those placing in the various age brackets of the ten-K race (men and women), 30 specially engraved Louisville Slugger bats will be awarded. The overall winner of the ten-K race will also receive a silver engraved champagne cup.

Special bronze, silver and gold medallions will be awarded to those collecting and returning $50, $100 and $250 in pledges respectively, in recognition and appreciation of the runner's work on and off the race route.

Twins' all-star shortstop Roy Smalley and his wife Christine are serving as co-chairpersons of the run.

Weed Control In Lakes, Streams Requires Permit

Those planning to control vegetation in lakes, streams or other public waters were reminded by the Department of Natural Resources that permits are required for most such work.

The DNR also said that all these permits are issued from the department's six regional headquarters — located in Bemidji, Grand Raids, New Ulm, Rochester, Brainerd and St. Paul (fish hatchery, Warner Road).

Permits are required, said officials, because the unregulated use of chemicals or cutting of vegetation is a potential threat to the aquatic environment, including fish habitat, and to public health.

A fee is charged for most permits, the amount dependent on the nature and extent of the proposed work. The minimum fee, where one is required, is $1 and the maximum is $50.

Lakeshore property owners do not need a permit for cutting or pulling of aquatic vegetation on a maximum area of 2,500 square feet. The control site may not extend more than 50 feet along the owner's lake frontage or one-half the length of the frontage, whichever is less.

Property owners may also include a 15 foot wide boat channel to open water but must not increase the 50 foot width limitation of shoreline frontage.

Such work is restricted to the use of hand or power operated cutters, rakes and similar tools but may not be done with draglines, bulldozers, hydraulic jets, suction dredges or other power operated earth moving equipment.

After cutting or pulling, the vegetation must be removed from the water.

Officials said that persons who are in doubt as to whether they need a permit should contact the nearest DNR fisheries office.

Now Scorned, Future Foods May Someday Feed Hungry Millions

Ever dine on an amaranth leaf salad? Or feast on a winged bean casserole?

These are just two of the earth's little-known edible plants that may soon find their way onto our supermarket shelves, according to the current issue of International Wildlife magazine.

These and a dozen other "foods of tomorrow" — now available but little used — may also help relieve the world's food shortage, says the bimonthly publication of the National Wildlife Federation.

There is no reason we should confine our menus to the couple of dozen vegetables Americans now eat, according to several scientiests quoted in the report.

"You can't tell me we're getting the best foods available by concentrating on corn, rice, wheat and a few conventional vegetables," says the Smithsonian Institution's chief botanist, Edward Ayensu. "There are many other edible plants with high protein content that we've never tried and know nothing about."

Perhaps 80,000 species of the earth's 350,000 known plants are edible. Over the course of history, people have used just 3,000 species for food, and today 95 per cent of all our calories and protein are supplied by just 30 species.

Why have so few plants been exploited? In the U.S., the highly mechanized agribusiness has concentrated on wringing tremendous yields from a small number of crops primarily for economic reasons, explains International Wildlife. History played a part, too. Europeans who administered the new world colonies introduced the crops and foods they were accustomed to — potatoes, cabbage, barley and so on. And today's Americans are reluctant to accept new foods.

In order to feed an ever increasing glut of people, scientiests are urging that we broaden our horizons. Biologically, they say, there is safety in diversity. Whereas bad weather, disease and long-term climatic changes can play havoc with a few conventional crops, many different crops can provide a hedge against natural disasters.

They might also mean better nutrition for more people. Many of the new crops can grow in difficult environments where traditional crops cannot.

While the need for new foods may be more urgent in other parts of the world, the U.S. is interested, too. A recent national science foundation study came up with 54 potential new crops for the U.S. The most promising included the pigeon pea, buffalo gourd, tepary bean, pinyon pine, Chinese water chestnut, black walnut, wild rice, cattails and amaranths.

In the humid tropics, the rising star of the new crops is the winged bean, a slightly sweet begetable resembling green beans, says International Wildlife. A few years ago the winged bean was virtually unknown despite the fact that every part of it is tasty and nutritious. Thanks to some pushing by Noel Vietmeyer, a chemist with the national academy of sciences, the winged bean is now grown in more than 70 countries.

It may now be at the point where the soybean was in the U.S. 50 years ago, when it suddenly took off to become the most important new crop of this century. A native of China, the soybean was brought to this country from France by Benjamin Franklin. It received little attention until the 1920s.

Vietmeyer points out in International Wildlife that many of the new crops, including the winged bean, "may not, in a global sense, ever be huge crops." But, he contends that some of these new foods may be crucial for a particular region with a difficult environment. "It's time," he insists, "that we begin to capitalize on the global wealth of nature."

Remember that the next time someone offers you a plate of fried cocoyams.

The promising new crops

Will one of these obscure plants become the next superstar of world food production?

Winged Bean A dried, pealike bean which contains up to 37 percent protein. The pod tastes like green beans, the leaves like spinach, the flowers (when cooked) like mushrooms, and the roots, eaten like potatoes, are nutty in flavor. The vines are grown in parts of New Guinea and Southeast Asia.

Tarwi First grown by the Indians 1,500 years ago, the protein-packed seeds also yield a fine cooking oil. The seeds are bitter and must be soaked in running water. It's a tough plant that grows in various kinds of soil, resists pests, and withstands frost and drought.

Quinua Another grainlike crop grown by the ancient Incas, the plant is still a staple for the Indians and campesinos of the High Andes. Hardy and adaptable, the plant is rich in protein and could become an important crop in the tropical highlands of other continents.

Buffalo Gourd Indians of the American West have eaten the seeds, which contain 35 percent protein and 34 percent oil, for centuries. The wild-growing plants are hardy perennials which thrive on semi-arid, otherwise marginal land. It is being cultivated in Lebanon and Mexico.

U.S. Hockey Shrine . . .

Hall Of Fame Adds Two New Members

Squaw Valley, 1960. An underdog American team stuns the hockey world by defeating the great ice powers —Canada, Russia, Czechoslavalia and Sweden—to capture this country's only first place finish in international competition.

It is an event often talked about among American hockey people as the Lake Placid Olympics loom but a scant seven months in the future. But before that time the man who coached that memorable team — West Point's Jack Riley — will be installed along with Minnesota's Bob Dill as the 49th and 50th enshrinees in the United States Hockey Hall of Fame, it was announced this week.

Riley and Dill will join the American ice shrine on Sat., October 20, at Eveleth as his hotbed of U.S. hockey conducts its seventh annual enshirnement ceremonies. Fittingly the U.S. Olympic team will play the University of Minnesota-Duluth in the enshrinement game.

Bob Dill began his hockey career as a forward, but was converted to defense while the Baltimore of the Eastern League. Things worked out so well on the blueline that a defenseman he remained for his nine years in professional hockey. After two and a half years with Springfield and Buffalo in the American League, the St. Paul native advanced to the NHL New York Rangers. Following the 1944-45 season Dill returned to his native Minnesota where he played five seasons with the U.S. Hockey League St. Paul Saints. Always an offensive minded defenseman, Dill enjoyed his finest goal scoring season in 1948-49 when he put 15 pucks in the net for the Saints. In both 1946-47 and 1949-50 he was a first team all-star.

Retiring after the 1949-50 season, Dill has in later years served as a scout for the Minnesota North Stars. One of those rare two sport athletes, he also played professional baseball in the American Association.

Jack Riley was an outstanding college player at Dartmouth, graduating in 1944. While there he teamed with Dick Rondeau and Bill Harrison to terrorize Eastern college goaltenders. The Medford, Massachusetts native competed in the 1948 Olympic team which finished fourth at San Moritz, Switzerland and was a player-coach on the 1949 National team. The later squad gained a third place finish at the World tournament in Stockholm, Sweden. Two Pennington 4-H Members To Visit D.C.

"Citizenship - Washington Focus" will take two Pennington county 4-H members to the nation's capital city during July.

The short course in citizenship is sponsored by the national 4-H council. This year, 500 Minnesotans will use Washington as their classroom. The one-week course is held five times from June 30 to August 4. Extension agent, Deborah Matero reports that the teens participating from Pennington county are Sue Spengler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verne Spengler and Jim Rooker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rooker. Sponsoring these trips is the Pennington county 4-H leaders council.

"These 4-H'ers will see their nation's government in action," Matero says. "They will visit with Minnesota's senators and congressmen, view historical sites and discuss their views and concerns with other 4-H members from throughout the U.S."

The agent adds, "This is a chance for our 4-H members to open their minds to new citizenship and community development ideas for their clubs and communities. They will each develop a 'citizenship action plan' to use when they return to Pennington county."

Assemblies and workshop sessions will focus on several aspects of citizenship, starting with the individual, and continuing with community involvement, 4-H projects and a look at national issues. Participants have been asked to study a national problem that affects their local communities before attending the course.

Safety Council Gives Holiday Safety Tips

Nine-day period beginning the Saturday before the Fouth of July and ending the following Sunday could claim the lives or more than 30 Minnesota motorists unless special caution is exercised in holiday travel, warned the Minnesota safety council.

There were 34 people killed in the nine-day period surrounding the Fourth of July in 1978.

The safety council estimates between six and nine Minnesotans could lose their lives in automobile crashes during the 30-hour Fourth of July holiday period and 240 to 260 more could be injured.

July has traditionally seen the largest number of motor vehicle fatlities of any month in the year in Minnesota. Reduced travel due to gasoline shortages and extra driving care by motorists could combine, however, to substantially reduce fatalities over the upcoming holiday period and throughout the month.

The safety council suggests some tips for safer automobile travel:

Be sure your car is in good repair before taking to the road. Not only will you have a safer trip, but your car will use gasoline more efficiently, too.

Fasten your safety belt — and insist that passengers buckle their belts as well.

It's a good idea not to drink if you're going to drive. But if you do, allow an hour to pass for each drink you consume before you get behind the wheel.

Start your trip early enough or late enough to avoid the rush hour when leaving and returning.

If you trailer a boat or other vehicle, use extra care in changing lanes, entering and exiting from high speed roadways and in passing. Remember to allow extra room between you and the vehicle ahead — you'll need more stopping distance with that extra load.

Most important — observe posted speed limits wherever you travel. On freeways and other high speed routes, remember that 55 mph can save gas and might even save your life. Travelling 55 mph makes sense.

Keeping Cool Today Is A Snap

How to keep cool in the summer has been of burning interest to man since time began. Not too long ago man had to work hard to beat the heat; today it's a snap, the snap of a switch on a central or room air conditioner.

Five thousand years ago, for example, a rich Assyrian merchant cooled his courtyard by having servants spray water into a room below it, taking advantage of the cooling effect of evaporating water. A simpler method was employed by King Xerxes of Persia; he kept dozens of slaves around waving fans.

Snow was hauled down from mountaintops by Roman slaves to cool their masters. The Caliph of Baghdad, around 775 A.D., built a summer house with hollow walls that were packed with imported snows.

"Around the 16th century some improvements were made," says John P. Farrell of York Heating and Air Conditioning. "A hand-operated bellows was rigged to blow air through a cave and into a home. Use was limited to the very rich . . . or very energetic."

A lazy man's means of cooling turned up in an "improved" rocking chair, patented in 1869. As a person rocked, a bellows was activated beneath the chair, forcing air out of a pipe over the person's head. Pneumatic ventilating systems were used in offices in the 1890's, and while it was not cool air, it was welcome relief.

Mechanical refrigeration, the forerunner of air conditioning, was developed for ice-making machinery, not comfort cooling. In 1885 York began producing ice-making machines, and by 1903 the firm had learned to transfer the principle of mechanical cooling to industrial processes.

In 1914 it unveiled the first combination of mechanical refrigeration with "air washing" and ventilation—air conditioning—at the Empire Theater in Montgomery, Ala. The San Joaquin Power and Light Company's office building was air conditioned in 1923, marking what is believed to be the first completely air conditioned office building in the world.

The nation's first successful room air conditioner was offered by York in 1935. Although the unit weighed 600 pounds, it was considered portable because it could be moved on casters. Regardless of its weight, it did provide homeowners with welcome relief from heat and humidity.

"Today it seems that everything is air conditioned," Farrell says. "It is hard to find a store, office or other public building that is not air conditioned. And that trend is spilling over into the home: Last year more than 50 percent of the houses built in the nation had central air conditioning."

Air conditioning at home is no longer a luxury, but a necessity for most people. Improved engineering has made whole-house air conditioners economical to install and operate, in spite of increasing utility rates.

Many Deaths Caused By High Blood Pressure

High blood pressure figured in roughly one out of every 23 deaths in Minnesota between 1968 and 1973, according to a new study by the state center for health statistics.

Out of over 200,000 deaths which occurred during the period, the center's investigators found that nearly 9,000 involved high blood pressure, either as a direct "underlying" cause or an indirect "contributing" cause. High blood pressure was involved in roughly one death out of 30 among men, and one death in 18 among women.

Hypertension was frequently involved in deaths caused by heart disease and stroke. Hypertension-related stroke deaths were more common among women, while hypertension related heart disease deaths were more common among men.

Jan Papra, of the state health department's hypertension unit, believes the number of hypertension-related deaths in the state may have decreased since the period covered by the study. "A major hypertension education program has been underway nationally since 1973," he noted, "and there is already some eveidence that it's having an effect on the problem. Death rates for some of the diseases associated with hypertension have dropped significantly, and it's been argued that at least some of that progress may be attributable to the education program."

Papra cited federal figures which show an eight per cent decrease in heart disease deaths between 1973 and 1977, compared with a three per cent drop during the preceeding six years. Stroke deaths declined nearly 17 per cent during the same four year period, compared with two per cent during the previous 11 years. Papra said public health authorities in Minnesota have screened over 300,000 people for hypertension since 1973, and over 30,000 of them were found to have elevated blood pressure readings. "Nationally, it's been estimated that the number of adults who've succeeded in controlling their high blood pressure has doubled since 1972," he said.

Papra stressed, however, that the fight against hypertension is not over. "It's been estimated that there are about 25 million people with borderline high blood pressure in this country, and 35 million with definite hypertension. Of that 35 million, maybe 10 million are being treated. The others either don't know they have high blood pressure, or they've dropped out of treatment. So we still have a lot of work to do."

The Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act restricts the use of trusteeships by unions; restrictions cover reasons for taking control of a subordinate union, transfer of funds, and filing of reports.

. . . Our American heritage has its roots deep in our homes and hearts.

. . . To understand it we must behold the light of hope it kindles in the hearts of enslaved men.

. . . To honor it we must revere the institutions and beliefs upon which it is founded.

. . . To preserve it we must exercise faithfully its privileges and opportunities.

. . . To perpetuate it we must keep its vision bright before the eyes of our children.

. . . To enshrine it we must thank, worship, serve and love the divine Author of Liberty.

Freshwater Study Part Of Program For Elderhostel

by Bonnie Paradis
UMC University Relations

"Elderhostelers have seen water when it was of better quality than now, and they've seen it when it was worse, within the last five years. They can be encouraged by the changes that have occurred, due in part to the Minnesota freshwater act of 1972," comments Wendell Johnson, associate professor at the University of Minnesota — Crookston (UMC).

He feels the over-60 group is especially suited for the class he's teaching during session I of Elderhostel, July 15-21, on the UMC campus. The class involves study of the physical and biological composition of freshwater in Minnesota.

Activities planned for the course include lecture-discussions, films, field trips to lakes, streams and ponds which will serve as study areas, and possibly a picnic.

Asked his opinion of the Elderhostel program, Johnson answers thoughtfully, "It's an excellent opportunity for people with varied backgrounds to study and share experiences. . .the large wealth of knowledge the Elderhostel generation has become more apparent. . .they're stimulating to teach."

Johnson points out differences in Elderhostel and regular teaching. "It's more comprenehsive (the Elderhostel); there's less outside classwork, the students have a vast amount of experience, come from many parts of the country, and are eager, intelligent and inquisitive."

Instructors have to be well prepared with challenging information for this critical but appreciative audience. But Johnson says he'd definitely be willing to teach another one. . ."I look forward to it each summer. They're professionally stimulating as well as fun," the biologist observes.

Steve Kraatz, coordinator of UMC's Elderhostel program, is also looking forward to the week. He comments "It's more fun than any program I've worked with. . .it gives you a 'warm fuzzy' feeling inside." Kraatz feels there are four reasons for the Elderhostel program's success: hostelers want to meet new people, learn something new, spend a week at a college campus, and the cost is marginal when compared to a vacation at an elegant resort or spa. (Just $94 covers room, board and tuition in the state of Minnesota.)

What if Elderhostelers didn't live on campus? Kraatz believes that the whole experience "wouldn't have quit the flavor of college life, and the hostelers probably wouldn't get as close to one another as they do."

Activities outside of class serve special purposes during UMC's Elderhostels. According to Kraatz, the program is tailored to maximize the participants' needs, encourage them to have a good time while learning, and provide a setting for dialog with other hostelers. Crookston's campus forms a unique backdrop for these events because there aren't many "big town" distractions to lure the hostelers into separate activities during evening hours. The absence of civic events and entertainment that appeal to senior citizens combined with the fact that there aren't many summer students, provides for a spirit of togetherness found more on this campus than a larger one, says Kraatz as he quotes evaluations by last year's hostelers.

UMC achieves this with plentiful leisure-time activities for the hostelers — picnics, nature walks, trips to the local theatre, visiting area businesses including a sunflower factory, a trip to the Manitoba Stampede, a lecture on edible wild plants, English garden slides, demonstrations, a performance by the Crookston Squarenaders and countless other offerings.

For more information about this summer's Elderhostel program at UMC, interested persons may contact Steve Kraatz, University of Minnesota-Crookston, telephone (218) 281-6510, extension 243.

What's In It For You???

You may be able to save when you shop if the country is saved from some laws.

Lower prices and a better environment can come from avoiding some legislation.

Many have discovered that the much-touted "bottle-bill" requiring beverages to come in deposit cans and bottles can have an effect opposite to what its proponents claim.

In Michigan, the most heavily populated state to implement the controversial law, consumers pay an average of 36 cents more per six pack for soft drinks and 30 cents more per six pack for beer than consumers in Wisconsin, Indiana and Ohio. About 300 good jobs have been lost so far and many community recycling centers closed as a direct result of the bill.

Since people create litter, and only people can solve it, many suggest alternatives to forced deposits. One is the program in the State of Washington which attacks all litter, not just bottles and cans. It requires litter bags in all cars and boats at all times. Violators face a $10 fine. The law also requires all public places to provide litter receptacles that meet specifications making them uniform and easy to identify. Widespread signs on the highways reinforce an anti-litter ethic. This "people program" can pay off. The State has reported growth of a 27 million recycling industry and 1,000 new jobs.

What's in it for you? A better looking neighborhood, rather than higher prices at the neighborhood store.

55 MPH Speed Limit Conserves Fuel, Money

Federal 55 mph speed limit law is a good idea, say many Minnesotans. Recent conversations with Minnesota drivers through efforts of the Minnesota energy agency, indicate that many are in favor of the speed limit and agree that holding down highway speed helps conserve fuel.

"I think the 55 mph speed limit is great! It saves fuel and it saves lives," said Karen Martin, St. Paul. "I'm afraid to drive faster than that. I can't imagine how we ever drove 70," she said.

Gunder Pearson of Aitkin, Minnesota, noted that he ever drives more than 55 mph. "I drive 50 more than I drive 55. It conserves gasoline, saves lives... it saves on the car too."

A St. Peter man reports that he's started driving 55 instead of 60. "I used to drive 60, 62 mph, whatever I thought I could get by with. Now I drive 55 and I don't have to worry about getting a ticket. And I find it makes a lot of difference in the mileage."

A Minneapolis man who often drives over a hundred miles to his cabin on weekends says driving 55 is more comfortable. "Before they reduced the speed limit, the trip took me two hours and 20 minutes. Now it takes me 15 minutes more. It's worth it for the gas savings and," he added, "for the peace of mind."

Staples businessman Ed Perry agrees. "I think the 55 mph speed limit is a good thing. I feel much more relaxed and safer at 55." "However," added Perry, "I can't see a big difference in mileage between driving 55 and say 60 or 65 mph."

Another Staples resident, Eric Duus, expressed skepticism too. "I think the 55 mph speed limit is just another Mickey Mouse way of trying to save energy. Automobile companies should be leading the way on this issue. They can and should build more efficient cars to help save energy."

Mark Monson, the Minnesota energy agency's transportation planner, thinks it's important for the automobile companies to produce more efficient cars. But he said it's also important for drivers to do their part.

"There is no doubt," said Monson, "that speeding wastes energy. Driving at 55 will give the average driver about three more miles per gallon than driving at 70. And you save four more miles per gallon driving at 50. Most cars get about 20 per cent better mileage at 55 than at 70.

To many Minnesota motorists, a major benefit of the 55 mph speed limit is the lives saved. Federal studies show that there has been a dramatic reduction in loss of life through traffic accidents nationwide since imposition of a slower speed limit. Conclusions are that 4,500 to 6,000 lives are saved each year as a direct result of slowing drivers down.

It's also important to drive 55 because if we don't, Minnesota stands a chance of losing some of its federal highway funds. If the state does not have at least 70 per cent of its drivers observing the speed limit by 1983, it will lose some funds.

During the first three months of 1979, over 60 per cent of Minnesota cars were still exceeding the speed limit. But the state is encouraging drivers to observe the speed limit, both by getting information to the public and by increasing the number of patrol cars.

For more information on how to save gasoline, call the Minnesota energy agency at 296-5175 or toll-free 800-652-9747.

Commission On Health Costs Gives Report

Independent commission on health care costs established by the Minnesota medical association 22 months ago recently presented its report containing 41 recommendations to Governor Al Quie. Presenting the report was the commission's chairman, Dr. Richard J. Frey, a Minneapolis internist who said that implementation of the recommendations will serve to place a lid on health care costs in Minnesota.

The report points to the lack of incentives within the health care delivery system for keeping costs down. Consumers are unrestrained in the care they seek because the insurance company or another third party generally pays the bill. Physicians feel little constraint in ordering tests and providing treatment since they know a third party will be picking up the tab. Hospitals offer the latest equipment and services to keep doctors on their staffs and patients coming in for treatment. Insurance companies offer more coverage to be competitive with other companies and pass the added cost along in the way of additional premiums.

Recommendations in the report include:

1. All insurance plans or health care plans offered in the state of Minnesota should have cost sharing provisions specifically directed toward discouraging immoderate or indiscriminant use of services.
2. Major employers in Minnesota should exert pressure on insurers to take steps to reduce inappropriate utilization of services.
3. Major industries should experiment with health promotion programs and the health insurance companies should conduct pilot studies in an attempt to reduce premium charges for individuals who reduce risk factors and improve their lifestyle.
4. Hospitals and physicians should be at risk if care already rendered to patients should be found to be inappropriate.
5. Health care regulations should have a time limit such as five years after which a regulation becomes null and void unless a review process which includes public hearings reaffirms the need for de-regulation.
6. Multiple choices for health care coverage should be offered to consumers to increase competition and reduce costs.
7. Health care coalitions should be established to implement the recommendations of the health care cost commission and monitor health care cost trends in Minnesota.

Twenty two members of the commission on health care costs represented government, labor, industry, the insurance industry and health care providers. While the commission was established and staffed by the Minnesota medical association the body and its report was completely independent of the association.

Leila Trawicki left for her home in Milwaukee Friday after visiting her mother, Nannie Lefrooth while attending the 75th anniversary celebration.

Senior Citizens

The senior citizens met on Tuesday, June 19, for a meeting. By now our carpet had been layed and we met to arrange and put items on display for the sale we were having when we had our center open June 22 and 23 during our village's 75th anniversary celebration.

Eleven registered on Tuesday and Mabel Stromberg was our visitor. The center served the lunch.

We opened our center at 1 p.m. on Friday until 5:30. On Saturday we opened at 10 a.m. and stayed open until 6:30.

Almost 300 people registered in our record book, but we know there were many more who did not sign our guest book. We had visitors from many states, Canada and Sweden.

Thanks to all who visited our center and patronized us. Thanks to Leila Trawicki of Milwaukee for the $2 she gave us and to Laurel Lefrooth for the $20 he gave us.

Thursday, June 28, we met for our regular weekly meeting. Nineteen registered. Sophia K. Benson and her grandchildren, Greg and Deanna Benson and Ida Bruce were our visitors and Esther Storeby and her workers, Don, Julie, Connie, Jean and Joyce were lunch guests.

We played bingo and all players won two prizes each. We finished by playing blackout and Evelyn Kline won the prize for that.

Mabel gave a door prize Mildred won, Ida Bruce won the prize Ruth Harper donated and Mabel Borsvold won the prize Irene donated.

We will try and sell a few more tickets on our quilt before we raffle it off, so if you don't have a ticket, ask us for some.

The center furnished the lunch Thursday.

STAYING IN TOUCH!

Congressman
Arlan Stangeland

The Energy Crunch

During my visits to the Seventh District on weekends and while Congress is not in session, I am constantly asked about what can be done to cure the energy problems that are changing the lifestyles of Americans, and lowering the morale of our nation's people. We have all pondered this question recently as we've sat in gas lines, or wondered if there would be enough fuel to plant our crops, or transport them to market, but, the fact is, there are no immediate answers that will bring a sudden cure or remedy to the overall energy problem.

What must be understood is that our energy problems have been caused by years of energy use without sufficient foresight as to the future of our energy supplies. Ever since cars and gasoline vehicles have been in operation, America has taken the attitude that our fuel supplies will last forever. Unfortunately, we are now finding out that this is not true.

Over the years our easily accessible sources of domestic oil have been depleted to the point that they alone will not meet domestic demand. It has become necessary to increase oil imports from foreign countries, primarily those belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cartel. With greater domestic demand, we are forced to increase imports even higher, and we have now reached the point that OPEC virtually has the power to control the amount of oil we receive and the price that we must pay.

Action must be taken now to curb our energy problems, but we must keep in mind that we cannot turn the tide on reduced energy supplies and higher prices overnight. The solutions initiated now are only temporary, and even though they may lessen lines at the pump, they alone will not cure our major energy problems in the future. We must find ways to provide greater allocations to those areas of the country that are hit the hardest, while at the same time making sure our farmers and independent truckers have sufficient fuel supplies.

The future of our nation depends on adequate supplies and it is for this reason that I strongly advocate increasing domestic oil production and exploring other methods to reduce imports. I have introduced a resolution (Dole-Stangeland Concurrent Resolution) that seeks to unite Canada, Mexico, and the United States in the battle against foreign oil imports (OPEC) by developing a North American energy policy. A combined effort will enable us to more effectively use the abundant energy sources located throughout our continent such as coal, oil shale, Canadian tar sands, and more traditional supplies of oil and natural gas. Each country will benefit if we work closely to improve North American energy supplies and technology, and if action is taken, our dependence on OPEC will be greatly reduced and our energy policy will be stabilized.

In the meantime, we must also continue to explore the development of alternative energy sources such as gasohol, that can be easily produced from unlimited and renewable natural sources. These fuels will not solve the problem, but their use will reduce imports and stretch current supplies.

The energy situation is one that can be cured in time, and I think people should look at this period as a temporary setback and not as a long term defeat. We should keep in mind that this problem faces people all over the world, and that as individuals, and as a nation, we must do everything possible to conserve our energy supplies and reduce waste.

Why Wear A Motorcycle Helmet?

If you ride a motorcycle, a helmet can be the most important piece of equipment you own, not only protecting your head from injury but also helping to make you more visible on the highway.

Statistics show the head is the most vulnerable part of the body in accidents.

A helmet can be the most important piece of equipment you own.

You can help keep yourself from becoming one of those statistics by reaching for your helmet as automatically as you reach for the ignition key, the Motorcycle Safety Foundation points out. And, the helmet you select should bear a label from the U.S. Department of Transportation, American National Standards Institute or the Snell Memorial Foundation.

For the greatest comfort and protection, a helmet should fit snugly but not tightly. Avoid one that's loose, and remember to fasten the chin strap securely.

It's a good idea, too, to affix reflectorized materials to the back and sides of your helmet and wear bright colored clothing that will make you more visible to other motorcyclists and drivers. You might want to apply reflective tape to your gloves and jacket for night riding.

It's common sense to wear a helmet and other protective gear.

Shriners Say Help Available At Hospital

There's plenty of free help for children who have serious orthopedic problems caused by birth defects or such conditions as scoliosis (curvature of the spine), according to the Twin Cities Shriners hospital.

"There is no waiting list at the hospital where children have been treated for bone and muscle disorders since 1923," says Harold Hotchkiss, administrator.

The hospital offers total care, including surgery, application of casts, artificial limbs and physical therapy. The staff includes orthopedic surgeons, physical therapists, plastic surgeons and other specialists who work with children to help them overcome their handicaps.

Recently, the hospital staff provided a total hip replacement for a nine-year-old girl, Hotchkiss said. She will be "followed" until her recovery is complete.

There was a time when the Minneapolis hospital was crowded to capacity, Hotchkiss said. That was during the polio epidemics and those youngsters who survived the acute stages of the disease needed extensive rehabilitation.

But the development of polio immunization changed all that, Hotchkiss said, and the hospital's census began to decline. Today, about 40 of the 60 beds are in use.

The development of federal programs such as medicaid also has an impact on the Minnespla hospital. More children are treated in a general hospital setting, although they may be eligible for the help the Shrine provides. This help, according to Larry Bachman, chairman of the local hospital board, includes transportation arranged through the patient's home unit

"There is no cost to a child or family," Bachman said. "Expenses, including braces and artificial limbs, are paid."

The Minneapolis hospital is one of 18 Shrine hospitals specializing in the care of children with orthopedic problems. Three other hospitals provide advanced care for children suffering from severe burns.

The Minneapolis unit opened in 1923 and is the third oldest in the hospital system. It is located on an 11-acre site next to the Mississippi river. A new wing was added in 1955 to provide outpatient facilities.

Children attend school in the hospital, taught daily by teachers provided by the Minneapolis public schools. They picnic in the woods in good weather, take part in a wide array of recreational activities including a full Boy and Girl scout program, and celebrate holidays with special guests, including members of the Minnesota Vikings football team or their favorite clowns.

All that is required for admission to the hospital is evidence of financial need and the recommendation of a member of the Shrine club.

For more information, write the Twin Cities Unit Shrine Hospital, 2025 E. River Road, Minneapolis, Mn 55414, or phone (612) 339-6711.

Press Views On Truck Strike

Many Minnesota newspapers are commenting editorially on the truck strike with both sympathy and criticism being expressed. Some of the comments from papers around the state include the following:

The Hastings Star commented recently, "We sympathize with and support the truckers in their current strike and withholding action. They'll have to bear the price of gas like the rest of us but they should also be able to pass along this increase of doing business. This brings us mainly to state and federal regulations regarding trucking. This, in our mind, is the prime problem and needs to undergo a major overhauling."

But the Star went on to say, "However, we do not hold with the truckers forcing others off the road or closing stations. If all this is voluntary action. . .fine. But when threats, and force come into play, it ceases to be the right thing to do. Truckers, like other Americans, have no right to 'force' their views on others."

The Swift County News, Benson, also expressed sympathy with independent truckers' plight concerning diesel fuel prices, but went on to note that demands have inflated to include other items, such as higher speed limits, less weight control and easier interstate transport.

The News went on to blast the attitudes of the truckers. "There was a time when a semi driver was considered the 'gentleman of the road', willing to assist motorists with problems and drive with courtesy. But, with the tremendous increase in the number of independent truckers over the years, this image has turned into the 'bully of the highways'.

"Too many of the independents will tailgate a driver going slower than they want, pass where they shouldn't, use the brutes they drive to intimidate anyone else on the highway. This doesn't apply to all independents; there are many fine courteous drivers among them."

The News warned that the striking truckers are illegally blocking refineries, truck stops "or whatever" and concluded the editorial by stating, "Operating these huge rigs would tend to produce a certain arrogance sitting high above the highway in control of tremendous horsepower and a huge load. This can't be allowed to be translated into an effective method of bringing our economy to a halt."

The Grand Forks Herald pointed out, "It's perfectly legal, of course, for a man who can't make a living driving his truck to stop doing it. But it is not legal to prevent others from continuing to eke out at least a meager profit from continuing to drive."

Besides, added the Herald, "if the strike leaders' estimates of 70 per cent participation in the protest is correct, they don't need to resort to illegal actions. What they need is patience. It won't be long before the situation in grocery stores will be such that public demand will see to it that they get a fairer shake."

But, truckers, noted the Herald, appear to be suffering from the same lack of organization as the participants in the abortive farm strike 18 months ago.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press offered some suggestions to the truck strikers, some critical and some meant to help.

The Press stressed that truckers have to face the fact that high energy prices are here to stay. "Truck operators. . .are fooling themselves if they think their protests will bring down the price and increase the supplies of diesel fuel," stated the Press.

The Press added that truckers can also forget about attempts to get Congress to raise the speed limit to 65 for trucks. "Statistics prove two things," said the Press, "trucks do not operate more efficiently at 65 than they do at 55. . .and the number and severity of accidents increase as speeds increase. Truckers ought to be able to earn a living at their trade, but not at the expense of the safety of automobile drivers and passengers. . and themselves."

The Press criticized that while the strike is getting a lot of media attention, politicians are doing their best to ignore it, mainly because they have no "magic solution."

"The best truckers can hope for," stated the Press, "is a total revamping of the rules and regulations governing their business. It's an extremely complicated area, especially for long-haul operators who must strive to comply with an assortment of regulations and fees that often change drastically and dramatically from one state to the next."

The first step, suggested the Press, is to get the sides to the bargaining table, where demands and expectations can be worked out. "Sitting across the table from angry truckers should be the government regulators, key politicians responsible for overseeing regulatory agencies, members of the Department of Energy and representatives of the oil industry."

A recent Pelican Rapids Press editorial pointed out some of the truckers' problems: fuel shortages, high fuel costs and higher living expenses. Some solutions that have been suggested are: establishing a uniform 80,000 pound maximum weight on interstate highways and a uniform maximum tractor-trailer length of 65 feet. "A Farm Bureau spokesman notes that these two steps could save a quarter billion gallons of fuel a year, which amounts to a *savings of one-third in fuel con*sumption on the interstate network," related the Press.

The Press then concentrated on farmers' need for diesel, noting, "the ability to transport grain from farm to market is vital, since roughly one of every four acres of cropland produces grain for export."

The truckers, said the Press, have made their point

Defining Environmentalism

Following editorial is from the Morris Sun:

One uses the term "environmentalist" with perhaps a touch more caution nowadays than when it first came into wide usage.

The label would have been accepted as flattering by almost anyone in the years when Rachel Carson's bestselling "Silent Spring" symbolized the public's growing awareness of environmental concerns.

How, indeed, could anyone find fault with a concept which rang so resolutely of humanitarianism and promoted such laudable goals as mercy toward nature and restraint of unchecked technology? How could activism directed against use of harmful pesticides and pollutants be considered anything but virtuous?

When this simple, heartfelt concern on the part of the general public for the natural environment evolved into a complex issue with political ramifications in the tempestuous era of the late sixties, confusion arose over what constituted a truly environmental stance — an unfortunate situation.

Suddenly, a host of irrelevant questions clouded the issue. Could an environmentalist believe wholeheartedly in capitalism? Could he be a sportsman? Could he be a proponent of nuclear energy?

"Environmentalism" became a dirty word to many on the right side of the political specrum while those who used it proudly became wrongly caricatured as revolutionaries who wouldn't rest until windmills dotted the landscape and all firearms were confiscated.

When environmentalism first grabbed the national consciousness through books such as Carson's, the scenic damage caused by hydroelectric plants was a prime concern and nuclear energy was ironically considered by organizations as the Sierra Club as a means or eradicating the problem. Many lawsuits brought against dams and coal-burning generators stated nuclear power as a healthy alternative.

Obviously, the complexion of the battleground has changed greatly.

What should be considered the salient point as the hue and cry continues is that environmentalism is simply a desire to understand and show respect for nature. That definition should attract all of us.

A Nation Which Does More

"I remember a morning in church when I was a little kid, maybe nine or ten. It was a couple of years after World War Two had ended, and there was this family of Latvian refugees who our church had sponsored to come and live in our town. I remember watching as they came up the aisle and sat down. The father was a big, powerful-looking man, but his shoulders were shaking and he had tears running down his face. It was the first time I'd ever seen a man cry. I looked over at my dad. He was crying too. That was the first time I relaized what things like freedom of religion meant to people who hadn't taken those rights for granted ever since they were born. Things we'd been studying in school about our Bill of Rights. America being a melting pot, the poem on the Statue of Liberty started to come alive for me that morning."

The above story was told to me this week, shortly after overwhelming approval of an amendment I'd introduced in the Senate to provide the funding that allows us to bring into this country our full quota of Indo-Chinese refugees.

The tale symbolizes my own feelings in pushing hard for this measure.

I wish that the rest of the world would take a larger share of responsibility for the tragedy of the "boat people" of Indo-China. And I will continue to urge other nations to do so.

However, I believe it is the essence of the spirit of America to lead the way and set a humanitarian example for the rest of the world. Our history as a nation has been the story of a people whose arms are open when those of others were tightly shut.

My own involvement with the tragic plight of today's victims of oppression is very personal: Had the doors of the United States been closed in the 1930's, in all probability neither my wife Ellen nor I would be alive today.

After my own family had found haven here, I remember my father — proceeding solely on faith — signing hundreds of financial affadivits, required to bring in other families of refugees. He'd have been financially ruined if any had faulted on their commitments once they arrived. None ever did.

We are a nation of immigrants.

Each wave has brought with them a sense of privilege and appreciation for what America offers. In turn, that sense has renewed the same feelings in other Americans who've been here a while longer and may have begun to take this country for granted. Each wave has added to our strength.

It is true that America is presently bearing more than its fair share of this burden. Eventually, we must find a more equitably-shared solution.

However, dying people fleeing or being pushed from their native lands cannot wait for an "eventual" solution. For the United States to do less than our utmost in this situation would be a denial of the generosity characteristic of this country for over 200 years.

92 Times Around the Earth

Over 4.2 billion people now inhabit the earth. If the world's people were to stand side by side, they would stretch 2,386,360 miles long—nearly 92 times the earth's circumference. The world's population is growing by about 72 million people annually—more than Mexico's entire population. Nearly 90 percent of the population growth is taking place in the developing countries, most of which are growing at 2 or 3 percent annually. Mexico now adds more people to its population annually than the United States, and Brazil adds more than the Soviet Union.

Minn. State Fair Entertainment Dates Announced

Minnesota's finest agricultural and industrial wares, spiced with excellent entertainment, will highlight the 116th edition of the Minnesota state fair, August 23 through Labor Day, September 3. The 12-day exposition will feature a myriad of educational, competitive and entertaining attractions, reflecting the pride Minnesotans feel for their state.

The tradition of top-name entertainment at the state fair grandstand continues in 1979 with 11 nights of nationally famous stars. Styx, one of today's fast-rising rock groups, will open the schedule with one performance Thursday, Aug. 23. The wild and crazy antics of Steve Martin will be featured at two shows Friday, Aug. 24. Willie Nelson, king of "outlaw" country music, will entertain at two shows Saturday, Aug. 25. England Dan and John Ford Coley close the first weekend of grandstand entertainment with two shows Sunday, Aug. 26. Appearing on the same bill is Michael Johnson, widely acclaimed singer and classical, folk and jazz guitarist.

On Wednesday, Aug. 29, young fans will hear the music of Leif Garrett, the young recording, television and motion picture star. Bob Hope, the "king of comedy," will make his fourth grandstand appearance at one show Thursday, Aug. 30. Appearing with Hope will be special guest star Helen O'Connell. KC and The Sunshine Band will open the last weekend of entertainment with two shows Friday, Aug. 31. Returning to the grandstand to encore their performance of last year are Kenny Rogers and Dottie West with two shows Saturday, Sept. 1. Closing the evening grandstand lineup with two shows Sunday, Sept. 2, are Grammy Award-winning songstress Anne Murray and popular singer and songwriter Larry Gatlin.

Show times for all performances except those of Styx, Lief Garrett and Bob Hope are 6:30 and 9 p.m. Styx and Hope will perform at 8 p.m. only and Garrett's shows will be at 5:30 and 8 p.m. Reserved seats for Styx, Steve Martin and Willie Nelson are $7, $6 and $5; Bob Hope, KC and The Sunshine Band, Kenny Rogers and Dottie West, Anne Murray and Larry Gatlin, $6, $5 and $4; and England Dan and John Dord Coley and Michael Johnson, Bobby Vinton, Charley Pride and Leif Garrett, $5, $4 and $3.

General admission tickets for all shows are $2. Spectacular fireworks follow every evening grandstand performance.

A new $150,000 stage will improve sightlines in the Grandstand. A larger stage roof, featuring a new, innovative design will help insure that the "show will go on" regardless of the weather.

A total guaranteed purse of $90,000 will be at stake in the Amsoil, Inc. sponsored 1979 state fair race program. The half-mile oval will be the site of United States Auto Club Mini-Indy auto racing, Aug. 25-26; demolition derbies, Aug. 24 and 30; and American Speed Association late model stock car racing, Sept. 1-3. USAC Mini-Indy events are for Robert Bosch-Volkswagen Super Vee Cup championship points and will make their state fair debut this year. ASA late model stock car events will be capped with the AMSOIL 300 on Labor Day, Sept. 3. Tickets for all track events are $3; children under 16 and senior citizens over 65 will be admitted for $2. All-race and demolition derby seating will unreserved in the fair's 22,000-capacity grandstand.

The equestrian set will find plenty to cheer about in the air-conditioned coliseum. The country's finest English horse breeds will be showcased Aug. 23 through Aug. 28. Competition will include events for hunters and jumpers, American Saddlebreds, Shetland Ponies, parade and fine harness horses plus massive draft horse hitches. Evening show times are 6:30 p.m. Aug. 23 and Aug. 26-28; and 6 p.m. Aug. 24-25. Matinees will be at 12:30 p.m. Aug. Aug. 24, 26 and 27.

Members of Professional Rodeo Cowboys of America and the Girls Rodeo Association will compete for points in national standings and cash prizes Aug. 29 and 30. Three exciting performances will include saddle bronc riding, bareback riding, bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling and barrel racing. Rodeos will begin at 7 p.m. Aug. 29 and 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. Aug. 30.

Western horse breeds will be shown Aug. 31 through Sept. 3 and will include Quarter Horses, Appaloosas, Arabians, Palominos and Morgans. Performing at all English and Western horse shows will be Frank Strout and his Animals Extraordinair featuring Partner, the dancing horse, and Peppy, the cowboy monkey. Reserved seat tickets for all coliseum events are $3.50, $3 and $2.50; general admission is $2.

A glimpse of early American life will be provided at Heritage Square by the Rafel pioneer family and blacksmith Joe De La Ronde. The state fair history museum will also be open daily.

Musical entertainment in Heritage Square includes Backacre and the Barbary Coast Banjo Brass (Aug. 23-28), the Riverboat Ramblers and Wright Brothers (Aug. 29-Sept. 2), the Chatfield Brass Band (Sept. 3), and Hank Thunander Band (Aug. 23-Sept. 2). Heritage Square will also be the site of the second annual Old Times Fiddlers Contest starting at 2 p.m. Monday, Sept. 3.

Death-defying aerial acrobatics will be performed by members of the Tommy Hanneford Aerial Thrill Circus. The Royal Hanneford Space Launch and the Los Castros high wire act will be featured in the three daily shows on the lot west of the Dairy-Animal Products building.

A glassblower returns to the Mexican Village this year to entertain fairgoers with his intricate craft. Also featured at the Mexican Village will be music and dance with a south-of-the-border flavor. At Natural Resources Park will be the musical group Shangoya, Aug. 23-28; and the Ukranian Dancers, Aug. 29-Sept. 3. The Ukranian Dancers are winners of the 1978 state fair amateur talent contest. In the Creative Activities building, the Clifford Brunzell Concert Orchestra will perform daily. In addition, free musical entertainment, shows and demonstrations are provided at the Senior Citizens building, Dog Exhibit building and the Education building's Baldwin Hall.

Competition for blue ribbon honors will be keen as an anticipated 11,000 exhibitors will display over 32,000 animals and objects. A multitude of categories from livestock to linens and violets to vegetables will give entrants an opportunity to show the pride they feel in their accomplishments.

Nearly 1,000 commercial exhibitors and concessionaires will offer commercial services and products in every corner of the fairgrounds. Machinery Hill will be blanketed with the largest farm machinery display in the country. Latest industrial and technological developments will be displayed alongside kitchen gadgets and novelties on boulevards and in buildings. The exposition also provides a forum for Minnesota's diverse political and ideological philosophies with numerous organizational and public service exhibits.

Machinery Hall, a historically significant structure built in 1907, will show off a new interior compete with a new floor, ceiling, accessible restrooms and electrical plant. The new interior is the first phase of a two-year restoration and improvement plan. The plan's second phase calls for restoration of the building's exterior in 1980 and will include the construction of turrets and ballustrades topped with flagpoles. The buildings original blueprints are being used in the restoration process.

Rides and games are a big part of any fair. Royal American shows, the world's largest traveling carnival, will be back as will the sky ride, space needle, giant slide, old mill, kiddieland rides, penny arcades, giant carrousel and haunted house.

The two Thursdays of the fair, Aug. 23 and Aug. 30, have been designated Senior Citizens days and persons 65 and older will be admitted to the fair free of charge. Everyone under 16 will be given free admission on two Children days, Friday, Aug. 24 and Friday, Aug. 31.

In order to help make the state fair a get-together for everyone, the fair has implemented additional improvements to make its vacilities accessible to the handicapped. Grade level buildings and numerous curb cuts ease travel around the grounds and most restrooms have been equipped with accessible facilities. Low mount telephones have been installed and ample parking for the handicapped is available at several locations including along the fair's main thoroughfare, Commonwealth avenue. In addition, wheelchair rental is available at the Child Care Center.

The 350-site state fair campgrounds will open Saturday, Aug. 18, on a first come, first served basis. The $4 per night fee includes electrical service, water, restrooms, showers and a sanitary dump station. Self-contained camper vehicles may park free of charge in the parking lot south of Como avenue.

Public parking will be available on the grounds for $2 per car. Free auto and camper parking will be provided in the parking lot south of Como avenue. Weekend satellite parking with shuttle bus service will be available at Rosedale and Har Mar Mall Shopping centers and Midway Stadium. Shuttle buses will service these areas weekends from 9 a.m. to 12 midnight.

Admission to the state fair is $2 for adults (16 and over), $1 for children (five through 15) with children under five admitted free.

EFFICIENT FOOD STORAGE FOR SINGLES AND COUPLES

By Barbara Swain, Author of Cookery for One or Two, Published by HP Books.

Storing food properly is the best way to avoid waste and reduce your total food expenditures — especially if you cook for only one or two.

Swain

• MAKE GOOD USE OF FREEZER SPACE Meat items, leftovers and any foods prepared in quantity such as soups or casseroles should be packaged for freezing in single serving portions wherever possible — even if you're a couple. All freezer containers or wraps must be moisture resistant and air-tight, of course.

• A SPACIOUS REFRIGERATOR IS A BOON—Many items that families often store on the shelf are better off in the refrigerator of the small household. Mustard, catsup, pickles and preserves stay around the single's kitchen long enough that they need the extra protection of the colder temperatures.

Organize your cupboards so that canned and packaged goods don't get lost or unnecessarily duplicated. You might even invest in a wax marker to label these items with the purchase date.

• FRESH PRODUCE DESERVES SPECIAL ATTENTION—Avocados are like many tree fruits they should not be refrigerated until they reach the desired texture for eating. At this point they can be refrigerated. A softened avocado will stay in good eating condition in the refrigerator for up to five days. If you find yourself with a ready-to-eat avocado and no chance to use it, let your freezer save your investment. Simply peel and seed it, mash the pulp with a little lemon juice and freeze it in an airtight container. Better yet, use the fruit to make this different and delicious frozen dessert; serve it for a special dinner for two. Set your freezer at the lowest temperature for the finest texture.

AVOCADO ICE

1 soft California avocado, peeled, seeded and sliced
1/2 teaspoon grated lime peel
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup lime juice
1/4 cup honey

Blend avocado with remaining ingredients in electric blender until smooth. Pour into refrigerator trays. Freeze until firm, stirring once when semi-frozen.

Makes 2 one-half cup servings.

Tax Credits Given Under Targeted Law

Qualified employers will save substantially on their federal income taxes by claiming the targeted jobs tax credit. Other benefits include gaining valuable employees, giving good workers employment opportunities and helping the economy.

The IRS has information about the credit in its free publication 906, "Targeted Jobs Tax Credit? and WIN Credit," and also offers the following questions and answers:

Q: What is the targeted jobs tax credit?

A: Targeted jobs tax credit, which replaces the new jobs tax credit that expired December 31, 1978, is based on the wages of certain categories of employees hired after September 26, 1978 (and certain vocational rehabilitation referral employees hired before that date), and is a percentage of wages earned by these workers between Jan. 1, 1979, and Dec. 31, 1980. Employers who hire persons certified as members of any of seven economically and socially disadvantaged groups may claim a credit against their Federal income taxes of up to $3,000 per such employee for the employee's first year of employment and up to $1,500 for the employee's second year of employment.

Q: What are these seven target groups?

A: (1) Vocational rehabilitation referrals;

(2) Young people between 18 and 24 years old who are members of low-income families;

(3) Vietnam-era veterans under the age of 35 who are members of low-income families;

(4) Persons receiving Federal welfare benefits;

(5) Persons receiving state or local general assistance for 30 or more days;

(6) Young people aged 16 through 18 participating in qualified cooperative education programs; and

(7) Ex-convicts who are members of low-income families and who are hired not more than five years after their last date of conviction or of release from prison.

Q: Who certifies employees as members of the target groups?

A: Local agencies designated jointly by the secretaries of the treasury and labor are to issue a certificate to each individual who qualifies as a member of one of the target groups. Examples of certifying agencies are state employment service offices and qualified schools offering a qualified cooperative education program.

Q: What are the limits of the credit?

A: Unlike the new jobs credit which it replaces, the targeted jobs credit is not subject to the $100,000 overall limitation. However, the following rules do apply:

(1) First-year wages qualifying for the credit may not exceed 30 per cent of the employer's total federal unemployment tax act (FUTA) wages for all employees during the calendar year ending in that taxable year.

(2) Credit is limited to 90 per cent of income tax liability which is first reduced by other credits being claimed. An unused portion of the credit may be carried back three years or carried forward seven years.

(3) The employer's business expense deduction for wages must be reduced by the amount of the credit claimed.

OMELETS FOR LUNCH

The word omelet comes from the Italian or Latin ova mellita which literally means "honeyed eggs." This was originally a Roman dessert. One of the most famous Italian omelets is the frittata. This unfolded omelet is often served as a luncheon entree. It can be filled with leftover meats or vegetables to provide a tasty budget meal. A rich tomato sauce adds extra zest.

Italian Chicken-Vegetable Frittata was developed for those people concerned about good health who are watching their dietary intake of saturated fats and cholesterol. Many doctors recommend limiting the amount of cholesterol to 300 mg. and an average egg contains 240 mg., making eggs the single highest source of cholesterol in the average diet. Use a cholesterol-free egg substitute like Egg Beaters. One quarter cup of fresh frozen egg substitute is the equivalent of an average egg. It has all the good egg nutrition but no cholesterol. Many doctors advise their patients to eat sensibly; that is, to choose chicken, turkey, veal and fish instead of fatty red meats, substitute skim milk dairy products rather than whole milk and use corn oil margarine instead of butter.

This luncheon entree is economical and delicious and a sensible way to lower your daily intake of cholesterol.

CHICKEN-VEGETABLE FRITTATA

1/4 cup bread crumbs
1/2 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/3 cup skim milk
3 cups Egg Beaters Cholesterol-free Egg Substitute
1 cup chopped cooked chicken
1 cup frozen mixed vegetables, thawed
1 tablespoon Fleischmann's Corn Oil Margarine

Sauce:
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon corn oil margarine
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
2 teaspoons dark brown sugar

In a large mixing bowl combine bread crumbs, sugar, salt and poultry seasoning. Thoroughly mix in lemon juice, milk and cholesterol-free egg substitute. Fold in chicken and vegetables.

Melt corn oil margarine in a 10-inch skillet; coat bottom and sides of skillet. Pour egg mixture into pan. Bake at 350°F. for 25 minutes, or until center is set. Loosen from edges of pan and invert onto serving platter.

While Frittata is baking, saute onion in margarine. Mix in tomato sauce and brown sugar. Simmer for 10 minutes. Serve over Frittata.

Makes 6-8 servings.

Army Offers 2-Year Plan, More Benefits

Department of the army announced recently that the army will test a two year enlistment and an education bonus for a limited number of enlistees beginning Jan. 2, 1979.

These options are designed to make enlistment for basic combat and combat related skills more attractive to young men and women.

Shortest term of enlistment is currently three years.

Minneapolis district army recruiting command, comprised of 56 counties in Minnesota and 26 counties in Wisconsin, will offer both enlistment options, said Lt. Col. William Van Herpe, district commander.

Education bonus option will be available under the veterans educational assistance program (VEAP). Amount a soldier could accumulate during a four-year enlistment with the VEAP and the education bonus is $12,100.

To be eligible for the basic VEAP, a soldier must contribute between $50 and $75 per month for at least 12 consecutive months. Government contributes $2 to the fund for every one dollar that the individual contributes.

Under the education bonus option, the army contributes an additional $2,000 to fund for a two-year enlistment, an additional $3,000 for three-year enlistment and $4,000 for a four-year enlistment.

Individual has 10 years from the time of separation from active duty to use the fund.

The two-year enlistment will be available to approximately 12,500 persons nation-wide during the test period. Those enlisting from the Minneapolis district will receive guaranteed assignments to Europe.

To be eligible for the two-year enlistment option, the applicant must be a high school graduate with no prior military service. Applicant must also score in the upper mental categories on the armed forces enlistment examination.

Individual will be required to serve four years in the individual ready reserve after release from the two-year active duty period.

Selected high school seniors will be eligible to participate in these options by immediately enlisting in the army's delayed entry program.

Guard Against Elm Tree Root Infections

"There's safety in numbers," the old saying goes, but not when you're dealing with elm trees and Dutch elm disease. Groups of elms growing close together are especially vulnerable to the disease and so need to be watched carefully this summer.

When elms grow within 40 feet of one another, very often their root systems become fused, says extension plant pathologist, Asimina Gkinis. If one of these elms becomes infected with Dutch elm disease, it can pass the disease-causing fungus along through these root grafts to any other elms joined to it. This type of fungal spread is generally quite rapid, and groups of elms planted close together can become diseased in a fairly short period of time. Root graft spread of Dutch elm disease is very often a problem for elms planted along boulevards.

According to Gkinis, it's fairly easy to tell if you have a root graft problem. "Look at your elms and if the branches on the crowns touch or overlap between trees, then you can be pretty sure the roots of the adjacent trees are grafted together," she says. "When you see the Dutch elm disease symptoms on a tree you know is joined to another at the roots, it is important to take immediate action to protect the other healthy elms nearby."

Two methods can be employed to prevent root graft spread of Dutch elm disease, says Gkinis. A soil trencher or vibratory plow can be used to cut the root systems. However, the machines are difficult to operate in rocky soil and in areas densely populated with trees. You must also be careful not to disrupt utility lines which are often buried between trees. The machines are costly, so homeowners may need to contract for this work.

Another way of breaking root grafts is to chemically kill a zone of roots by using the soil fumigant, Vapam. However, chemical treatment works much more slowly than the physical disruption of roots. Vapam is toxic to man and other animals and must be applied according to very specific procedures.

Whichever method of root graft disruption is used, it is necessary that all grafts between infected and healthy trees be destroyed to stop the spread of the disease. Gkinis advises homeowners to be careful when selecting trees to be treated in this way. If root graft disruptions are applied to a diseased tree and other healthy vegetation, such as trees and shrubs, which is less than 10 feet away, it is possible to damage such healthy vegetation.

More information on root graft spread of Dutch elm disease is available through your local extension service office.

VARIETY OF CHILDREN'S CRAFT ACTIVITIES were offered during the two-day Art in the Park event held Friday and Saturday, July 6 and 7, at Northland community college. Working on a wood and yarn creation, in this photo it is hard to tell who is more involved, the babysitter or her charge. In addition to the craft activities Art in the Park also offered a children's story hour daily under the sponsorship of Northwest regional library, and workshops in watercolor, puppetry and macrame.

1,000 Attend Art In The Park Here

Rainy weather Saturday may have had an adverse affect on attendance for the 1979 Art in the Park activities. Thief River Falls community arts council president Jim Hoks estimated attendance for the two-day event at 1,000, which is down somewhat from last year.

However Hoks states that community involvement in this year's arts fair was "very good" and in that sense "Art in the Park was really successful. The staff of Northland community college, members of the arts council and many other groups and individual volunteers put in a lot of hours and I'd like to express my thanks to those who helped."

Co-chairman of the event, Dee Forney, commented Saturday that this year at Art in the Park the committee tried to pay an equal amount of attention to the performing arts as the visual arts. In this sense, too, the event was a success as activities for the two days included dance exhibitions, a local artists concert, presentation of a children's play, poetry readings, performance by the high school jazz band, acrobatics, and informal musical presentations and demonstrations.

Held Friday and Saturday, July 6 and 7, at Northland community college, the 1979 Art in the Park included arts and crafts booths both inside and out as well as a regional art show in the college and a Lutheran Brotherhood traveling art show at Northern state bank. Workshops were held for both adults and children and afternoon children's activities and a story hour were offered both days.

Children's participation was high in this year's event, according to registration information. Over 600 arts council admittance memberships were sold to adults during the two days with total attendance estimated at 1,000 showing children's attendance somewhere in the neighborhood of 400. Slate of those performing at the arts fair also indicates a large number of youths including local 4-H groups, Florian polish dancers, tumblers, jazz band members, piano students of Marcia Knuttila, Ruth Jensen and Ida Nordvall, members of the Prowlin dancers, and individual musicians: Carl Kuyheh, Erick Allan, Kathy Shetler, Nancy Ricci and Terri Cuppett.

Special recognition was given to one youth, Daniel Hageland of Newfolden, who was among the participants in a children's watercolor workshop. Daniel's watercolor was selected from those made at the workshop as the outstanding work and Hageland received a $5 prize. His painting will be matted and placed on display in a public building in Thief River Falls for one year.

FINGER PAINTING was one of the art activities available for children Friday and Saturday at the Thief River Falls community art council's annual Art in the Park. This participant looks content as she oozes the paint between her fingers. A little messy maybe, but it sure was fun.

Appointment of Nadine Johnson as postmaster at Plummer, effective June 30, was announced recently by John P. Doran, regional postmaster general for the 13 state central region.

Nadine joined the postal service in 1962 as a part time flexible clerk at the Plummer post office. In 1977 she served as officer in charge at Plummer for a period of seven months. She also worked as a clerk at Plummer and at the Thief River Falls post office until her appointment as postmaster at Plummer.

Informal installation ceremonies will be held Thursday, July 12, at 10 a.m. at the Plummer post office.

Postmasters are selected on merit and appointed by the postmaster general. Applicants are not subject to senate confirmation.

Public Hearing Tonight On Parking Project

Official hearing on the proposed parking assessment district will be held tonight beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Thief River Falls city auditorium. Although the hearing will be presided over by Mayor Bob Carlson, as chairman of the city council, presentation on the parking project will be made by downtown development committee representative, Jon Larson.

The project to be under discussion plans to add up to 200 parking stalls to the downtown business district in Thief River Falls at a cost of approximately $500,000. Most recent estimates indicate that of the approximately $486,000 worth of assessments to be born by property owners within an 800,000 square foot district of benefit 51 per cent would be paid by retail and financial institutions. Businesses in the food and beverage category of assessment would bear 4.4 per cent of the total assessment; public, office, service and professional entities, 39.7 per cent; and wholesale, processing and manufacturing businesses, 4.9 per cent.

According to a report by city engineer Doug Stewart, city costs for demolition, excavating, backfilling, surfacing and striping of lots to be purchased in the parking project would total approximately $66,000, somewhat lower than the $150,000 of city cost originally estimated.

Other recent changes in project estimates included a probable reduction in assessments to both school district 564 and Pennington county. The school assessment is expected to be reduced from $86,403.51 to $74,659.51 because preliminary figures did not include a credit for an additional 29,625 square feet of school parking. County assessment is expected to drop from $20,289 to $10,722 because of an error in the rate of assessment.

All figures presented in conjunction with the project are still preliminary depending on which properties the committee eventually decides to purchase. Some options have been purchased on parcels for use in the parking project and specific locations of some of the properties are expected to be announced at tonight's hearing.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Pemberton-Abrahamson Marriage Vows Spoken

Arlette J. Pemberton of Redby and Bryce D. Abrahamson of Holt exchanged marriage vows on Saturday, June 16, at 3 p.m., at Redeemer Lutheran church in this city.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Pemberton, Sr., of Redby. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Mylan Abrahamson of Gatzke.

Rev. Keith Prekker officiated at the double ring ceremony. Mrs. William Halbasch was the organist and Mrs. Arliss Abrahamson, New York Mills, an aunt of the groom, served as pianist. During the ceremony, Steve Larson and Daidree Abrahamson, a cousin of the groom, sang "Three Times A Lady." Other selections were "Wedding Song," by Daidree Abrahamson; "Colour My World," by Larson, and "The Lord's Prayer", by Donavon Ruud.

For the ceremony, the chancel was graced with an arrangement of pink, yellow and white Majestic daisies and blue Pixie carnations, accented with pink ribbon bows. Centering the arrangement was a pink unity candle, flanked by pink candles.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a gown of imported candlelight ivory Chantilly lace and organza featuring a lace empire bodice with scooped neckline and shadow-styled bishop sleeves. Enhancing the gown was a circular organza skirt with chapel-length train, edged with motifs of matching lace. Her candlelight ivory veil of bridal illusion, edged with Chantilly lace, was held by a headpiece, embroidered with seed pearls. She carried a Victorian bouquet of pink sweetheart roses, silk stephantois and Sprengeri fern.

Attending the bride as matron of honor was Mrs. Karen Severts of Holt, a friend. She wore a gown of Something Blue quiana styled with a belted elasticized waistline, draped, simulated, cowl neckline, and drawstring shoulders that formed modified cap sleeves. Attached at the waistline was a flowing, flared skirt. She carried a nosegay of blue Pixie carnations, pink daisies, blue babies' breath and pink ribbon streamers, complementing the pink daisy in her hair.

Wearing gowns similar to the matron of honor, were the other attendants: Cindy, Barbara and Kay Pemberton of Redby, sisters of the bride; and Baryth Anderson of Fargo, N.D.; Betsy Abrahamson and Brenda Abrahamson of Gatzke, sisters of the groom. Their nosegays of blue Pixie carnations were accented by yellow daisies and yellow ribbon streamers matching the yellow daisies that they wore in their hair.

Flower girls were Lynde Pemberton, daughter of the bride, and Wendy Pemberton, of Redby, a niece of the bride. They wore Something Blue qiana gowns, styled like the bridesmaids, and carried white fireside baskets filled with blue Pixie carnations, pink and yellow daisies, babies breath and Sprengeri ferm with pink ribbon streamers.

The rings were carried by Lee Arnold Pemberton, a son of the bride. Like the men of the wedding party, he wore a Sterling greystone Kensington tuxedo with deeper tone satin lapels, a matching vest and bow tie and a Something blue ruffled shirt. His boutonniere was a pink sweetheart rose accented with babies' breath.

The groom's attire featured a white ruffled shirt and a pink sweetheart rose boutonnaire, accented with stephanotis.

Attending the groom as best man was his only brother, Bradley Abrahamson of Thief River Falls. The groomsmen were Lowell Anderson, Fargo, N.D., brother-in-law of the groom; Darell Severts, Steve Anderson, Dale Johnson, Mark Larson and Kenny Niemela, friends of the groom. Serving as ushers were the bride's brothers: William, Arnold, Jr., Robert and Scott Pemberton, all of Redby. All wore pink carnations pinned on their lapels.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Pemberton wore a peach crepe floor-length gown styled with a molded bodice gathered to a decorative, raised waistband. Topping the gown was a white lace coat with peach chiffon accordion pleated billowy sleeves. Mrs. Abrahamson wore a dusty-rose qiana gown featuring a blouson bodice with drawstring neckline. Accenting the gown was an ivory qiana waistlength jacket with puffy elbow-length sleeves. Their corsages were of pink sweetheart roses and babies' breath. The father's peek-a-boo boutonnieres were of white carnations centered with a pink rose.

Wearing similiar corsages and boutonnieres were the honor guests: Mr. and Mrs. Glen Larson, Gatzke, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Simmons, Roseau, the groom's uncles and aunts, who were also his godparents; and Mrs. Art Cloutier of Holt, who was the bride's personal attendant.

A reception in the church parlors followed. Host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Russell C. Nelson, Redby, uncle and aunt of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. David Brackman, New York Mills, cousins of the groom, registered the guests. At the punch bowl were Mr. and Mrs. James Garrigan, Redby, friends of the bride.

Highlighting the serving table was a pillared, three-tiered wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with cascading white roses and cherubs insets. Surrounding the flowing, blue water fountain at the base were white cherubs and Sprengeri fern. White bells were suspended from the upper tier which was topped by an ornate gazebo featuring a minature bride and groom. The cake was cut and served by Mrs. Duane Pemberton of Redby, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Dorothy Bednarek of St. Paul, aunt of the groom.

Waitresses were Joan Geralds, Kelly Olson, Cecee Johnson and Roxanne Ulrich. At the gift table were Sharon Aune and Jaylene Aune. All are friends of the bride.

Relatives and friends attending the wedding were from Indiana, Fargo, N.D., Minnespolis, New York Mills, Bemidji, Redby and the Thief River Falls-Gatzke area.

The groom's dinner, hosted by the parents of the groom, was held at the Rex Cafe in Middle River with approximately 50 guests attending.

The bride is a graduate of the Red Lake high school and the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical school of cosmetology with a manager-operator license. She is currently employed by Farmers Co-op Grain and Seed in Thief River Falls. The groom is a graduate of the Middle River high school, has served in the United States Army, and is now employed by Arctic Enterprises, Inc. The couple is at home in Holt. Photo, Neal Fox Studio

Wheat Growers Plan Meet At Loeslie Farm

More than 1,000 people have been invited to attend a summer evening cookout scheduled for Friday, July 27, at the Don Loeslie farm northeast of Warren.

A group of wheat buyers and prospective buyers from around the world have been invited to participate in the three-hour "fun and food" event.

"This is a rare opportunity for wheat people from overseas to meet the producers of wheat in Minnesota", states Tom Mick, who represents the Minnesota Wheat council through Western Wheat associates in Singaport, Malaysia, Thailand, Shri Lanka and Indonesia.

"I will personally be on hand for this event. This will be my first visit to Minnesota, but the wheat people in the southeast Asia markets are already strong buyers of dark northern spring wheat, and we intend to continue to increase the demands through market development activities," Mick asserted. He is formerly administrator of the Colorado wheat administrative committee.

Gov. Al Quie has been invited to deliver the principal address. Many other state and national leaders have been invited to participate in the various activities.

Agricultural commissioner Mark Seetin has indicated that he will attend and welcome the international visitors to Minnesota.

"We've never tried a program of this magnitude, but we are making big plans for a good evening of fellowship," Loeslie said. "Yes, we'll have a good meal that will include home cooked pork, baked beans, potato salad, a soft drink, bread and a dessert," he added.

Bell Hearings At Crookston And Warroad

Crookston and Warroad has been selected as two of 12 locations around Minnesota as sites for having public hearings on telephone service.

Al Bacon, Northwestern Bell manager, said the company will participate in the series of hearings designed to gain customer input in the rate-making decision process. Warroad hearing is at 2 p.m. August 29 in the school multi-purpose room and the Crookston hearing August 30 at 1 p.m. in the correctional center, 600 Bruce street.

The company is seeking a 10 per cent increase in local basic service rates. No increase is proposed for long distance, extensions and other services such as special phones or touch-tone dialing.

The higher rates will yield the company an overall 5.5 per cent increase in annual revenues and will go into effect July 7 subject to refund if the increase is not granted.

The public hearings will give customers a direct opportunity to participate in the rate making process, Bacon said.

The hearings will be conducted by a state hearing examiner. Company representatives will be on hand to answer questions. Proceedings of the hearings will become part of the record in the rate case.

The company also is participating in evidentiary hearings in St. Paul starting July 24. In these hearings attorneys for various intervenors examine evidence presented by the company and may present their own evidence as well. The proceedings, similar to those of a court, provide the basis for a hearing examiner's recommendation to the Minnesota public service commission. The PSC would then study the report and issue an order.

Notice of the hearings is being sent to all Northwestern Bell customers with their July bill.

MN. Farmers Union Supports Trucker Strike

Board of directors of the Minnesota Farmers Union has gone on record in support of independent truckers in their efforts for increased fuel supplies and fair rates.

The board, comprised of Farmers Union county organization presidents, met in Alexandria, MN., to conduct the regular business of the state organization, including discussion on the fuel needs of farmers.

Action by the Board to support the efforts of independent truckers followed discussion which compared the truckers' situation to that of farmers.

"Farmers face the same problems truckers do," a farmer said during the discussion, "We all have seen costs go up, but our income doesn't go up to match."

The Farmers Union leaders emphasized that farmers are dependent on the truckers to move raw farm commodities to market, and to move the finished food and fiber products to the consumer. They said both segments of the economy should be given high priority for diesel fuel.

On the issue of the truckers' demands for higher and more uniform truck weight allowances, Farmers Union policy says, "We support standardization of truck length and weight limits with our surrounding states to economize truck transportation."

A simplified way of protecting cattle from wind and snow is to plant a windbreak to the west and north of the feedlot. It not only protects the cattle, but provides cover for wildlife and shields the feedlot away from the rest of the farmstead.

Red Cross Says Thanks To TRF For Flood Help

American Red Cross and the Pennington county chapter of the American Red Cross have expressed appreciation to the United Way and the people of Pennington County for the $1,000 donation to the Red River Valley disaster fund of the American National Red Cross.

The entire $1,000 was sent to the American Red Cross at Grand Forks to be used for the relief of those people who suffered from the flooding of the Red River of the North in March and April of this year, according to Dr. Charles Samuelson, Pennington chapter chairman.

The American Red Cross, through its disaster service, has spent over $250,000 for disaster relief for the people of the Red River Valley so far this year. This relief was in the form of food, clothing, shelter and transportation assistance for those who needed help. It is a case of people helping people, Samuelson said.

Other Pennington county chapter officials include Steve Stokke, treasurer; Joe and Eleanor Forberg, aid to military families; and Nancy Fellman, water safety chairman.

Council Warns Against Gas Storage In Cans

Concerned with running into "closed" signs at gasoline stations, many motorists have resorted to carrying cans of gasoline in their cars.

The Automotive Information Council (AIR) warns against the practice, stating that it could be more dangerous than carrying sticks of dynamite. It's like riding with a bomb, said the council.

Those gas cans are not designed to withstand a rupture in case of even a minor collision, so a spark could destroy a car in a minute or less. Fatalities therefore are more likely.

AIC also advises against using the cans to store extra gasoline in the garage, where careless handling also could cause a fire or explosion.

A check of auto parts stores indicates that the practice of carrying cans in cars is widespread. "We can hardly keep them on the shelves," said the manager of one store. Another said he's selling five to six times more of them than last year.

An AIC staff member saw one motorist filling five-gallon cans at a gasoline station, while a second motorist had three. "It's for insurance," said the one with five cans.

But it could be expensive insurance, noted AIC, if the car is hit in the rear.

The Department of Energy estimates that from 20 to 40 million gallons of gasoline are being stored by motorists in California alone, compared with an estimated 80 million gallons in the underground tanks at filling stations.

An ending of this practice not only could improve safety but, in combination with elimination of the habit of topping off, could help alleviate the spot shortages, said the Automotive Information Council.

The gasoline situation also has resulted in a noted increase in motorists driving away from self-service stations without paying.

Explained one station operator: "They can't steal from a barge, they can't punch Standard Oil in the mouth, so they're taking it out on the dealer."

Some stations therefore are demanding payment before the booth attendant will turn on the pump. If your fill-up requires less than the amount paid in advance, the attendant will refund the difference.

Other stations are putting in closed-circuit televisions with zoom lens to check license plates and some have installed police-type sirens which are set off if a car starts to leave without paying.

The modern funeral has a two-fold purpose: It is a ceremony during which relatives, friends and associates pay their respects to the deceased - and comfort to the survivors. It usually lasts a period of two to four days, and takes place in the presence of the body of the one who has died. This helps to confirm the reality of death, which is essential for the mental health of the bereaved.

the county fair, will again be actively involved this year. Several preliminary events are scheduled in preparation for the fair. Demonstration day is slated for July 17 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the courthouse in Thief River Falls. Dress revue judging will be held Thursday of this week beginning at 9:30 a.m. at the city auditorium with the public dress revue at the fair on July 22. All county fair entry cards are due in the county extension office on Wednesday of this week.

In addition to the dress revue at 2 p.m. on Sunday, July 22, an awards program will be held following the revue. All livestock champions and those 4-H club members who qualified for state fair trips will be introduced and the hall of fame award winner will be announced.

A dog show will be held near the sports arena on the fairgrounds at 1 p.m. on Saturday, July 21, and the horse show will begin at 9 a.m. that day. All 4-H club livestock judging will take place on Friday, July 20. There will be a hog show this year. Last year the hog show was canceled due to a threat of pseudo rabies in the area.

Dan Helle is president of the county fair association with LaVerne Hamre as vice president, Vernon Lee as secretary and Richard Anderson as treasurer. Directors include Mrs. T. A. Stark, Si Hanson, Bernard Myers, Beth Blankenfeld, Wilbur Hallstrom, Duane Olson, Terry Nelson, Fred Dallmann, Arlen Ellingson, Mrs. Wayne Harder, Oliver (Skip) Swanson, Bernie Huot, Keith Nelson, Mrs. Wallace Evenson, Bill Ulrich, Mrs. Palmer Lorenson, Mike Erickson, Ken Beito, Gladys Narverud and Lorraine Steiger.

"For the exhibits at the fair we must depend upon you and your neighbors," president Helle said in urging public participation, "and we urge your cooperation in making the exhibits of the 1979 fair the best ever. Regardless of how successful our fair may be financially, it cannot be a truly good fair unless there are liberal prizes for winning exhibits and this prize money should be an incentive to competition."

With the exception of open class livestock divisions, entries for premium prizes are limited to residents of Pennington, Red Lake and Marshall counties.

During her senior year in high school she served approximately 80 hours as a Candystriper at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls. That volunteer service helped her decide to pursue a nursing career and she will study pre-nursing at Bemidji state university this fall. It is her intention to earn a four-year nursing degree.

The Burrell family also includes Julie's 24-year-old brother Randy, who is married and living at Middle River, and her married 21-year-old sister, Brenda Anderson, who lives in Moorhead. All of the Burrell children grew up on a farm southeast of Middle River and Julie says one of her favorite pastimes is going for walks on country roads.

Miss Middle River also lists jogging, sewing and bicycle riding as other hobbies. This summer she is working as a maintenance person for Great Lakes Gas Transmission company at its plant north of Thief River Falls.

Pipeline Order Signed By MN. Commissioner

Acting in advance of a Wednesday, June 27 deadline, Minnesota commissioner of natural resources Joseph N. Alexander Monday signed an order approving a DNR-recommended route for a crude oil pipeline to be built by Northern Pipeline company.

The pipeline is to be built from Wood River, Ill., to Pine Bend south of the Twin Cities to provide needed petroleum supplies as previously approved by the Minnesota energy agency by certificate of need issued in 1977. The line will enter the state near LeRoy at the Iowa-Minnesota border.

The proposed line has been under consideration for several years. However the DNR commissioner is given, by law, only 90 days to review, comment upon, and suggest design changes to the company's proposal after receipt of their application. The application was made under a 1973 law granting crude oil pipeline companies the authority to condemn private property for pipeline rights-of-way, subject to environmental review by the commissioner.

The route approved by Alexander follows that recommended by the DNR staff to avoid vulnerable ground and surface water resources. It is substantially different from the route originally proposed by the company in the environmental impact studies conducted before the state environmental quality board but follows an alignment the company later adopted.

The southern portion of the route approved by Alexander follows the railroad right-of-way. It leaves the railroad at Hayfield and proceeds in the area of Claremont, Molan, Ruskin, Northfield, Little Rock and Rosemount ending at Pine Bend.

The DNR followed the recommendations of a panel comprised of the commissioner of agriculture, director of the energy agency and chief hearing examiner, except for the middle portion, which results in a route 5½ miles shorter.

Alexander pointed out, however, that the shorter route minimizes crossing areas of potentially greater environmental hazard such as the Zumbro River valley. He also emphasized that based on a June 8 decision of the state supreme court the commissioner is required to make his decision based on environmental concerns and not on other considerations such as possible effects on farming practices. This decision was not available to the hearing panel at the time of their deliberations.

As recommended by the hearing panel, Alexander sets forth in his order a series of measures to insure safety of the line and to minimize the effects on agricultural lands and natural resources. These measures include topsoil separation, agricultural tile repair procedures, extra line valves, extra pipe wall thickness, and a stringent pipe testing program. He described the order as "the most stringent set of regulations ever required for the building of a crude oil pipeline in Minnesota."

Alexander said his decision on the route was influenced greatly by the potential impact of a pipeline rupture on ground water aquifers. The aquifer locations were established on the basis of data on 1,200 well logs, geologic maps, surveys, county soil maps and similar information.

Among other requirements, the commissioner's order requires the company to engage in test drilling prior to construction, restoration of the right-of-way in areas not used as crop land by re-establishing vegetation, and to install leak detection equipment that represents "the present state of the art" for such systems.

Alexander noted that the technology for building pipelines has vastly improved in recent years over the methods used earlier.

Income Tax Service Helps Farmers With Problem Questions

Many tax problems faced by farmers are unique to their profession, but at the same time they face questions common to just about anyone. The Internal Revenue service has prepared the following questions and answers to help farmers with some of their problems:

Q: Flooding damaged part of my farm this year, and I understand certain counties have been declared a disaster area. What does that mean?

A: Since your area warrants Federal disaster assistance, you may elect to deduct that loss on your Federal income tax return for the immediately preceding tax year. More information on disaster losses can be found in IRS publication 547, "Tax Information on Disasters, Casualty Losses, and Thefts," available free from IRS offices.

Q: I'm a farmer. Can I take investment credit on any of my property?

A: Yes, if you acquired new or used depreciable property for use on your farm and placed the property in service during the year. You can obtain the free IRS Publication 572, "Tax Information on Investment Credit" from local IRS offices.

Q: Is the filing date for a farm return different from that of a non-farm?

A: Yes. If at least two-thirds of your estimated gross income for the tax year is from farming, or for 1979 and later years, at least two-thirds of the gross income shown on the tax return for the preceding year is from farming, you may either:

1. File an estimate of your tax on Form 1040 ES, and pay this amount by January 15, then file your annual return and pay any balance due by April 15; or

2. File your annual return and pay the tax on or before March 1.

Q: I hire short-term laborers, sometimes for just a day or two. Do I have to take out social security?

A: No, you must withhold social security only when you've paid an employee $150 or more in cash wages in the year, or when an employee has performed agricultural labor for you on 20 or more days during the year for cash wages computed on a time basis (by the hour, day, week, etc.).

Q: I fixed the roof on my barn. Is this a repair or a capital expense?

A: A repair simply restores an item but neither adds to its value nor increases its useful life. A capital expense, on the other hand, does add to the value and does increase the useful life. If you merely replaced some shingles, for example, you have repaired your roof, but if you put an entirely new roof on the barn, you have a capital expense. Repairs are deductible business expenses, and capital expenses must be depreciated over the useful life of the asset.

Q: What is the difference between hedging and speculating?

A: If you farm commodities—that is, corn, soybeans, etc.—and you purchase commodity futures contracts in the same commodity to protect against the risk of unfavorable price fluctuation, you have hedged. However, if you have no personal interest in the commodity, but purchase the futures as an investment with the hope of making a profit, you have speculated. Any profit or loss made from hedging is ordinary income or loss, the IRS says, while profit or lost resulting from speculating receives capital gain or loss treatment.

Q: I plan to sell my farm. Is there anything special I should keep in mind?

A: When you sell your farm, you are selling both business property (the land building, etc., used in the farm operations) and non-business property (your personal residence, etc.). The tax treatment is not the same. Obtain IRS Publication 544, "Sales and Other Dispositions of Assets," and IRS Publication 523, "Tax Information on Selling or Purchasing Your Home," for more information. Both are available free from local IRS offices.

Q: I sold my farm for a large profit. Can I still file my income tax return as a farmer?

A: Probably not. To file as a farmer, the Internal Revenue Service says, either at least two-thirds of your estimated gross income for the tax year must be from the business of farming, or for 1979 and later years, at least two-thirds of the gross income shown on your return for the preceeding tax year must have been from farming. The taxable gain from the sale of your farm is part of your gross income, but it is not from the business of farming.

Q: When do I report income from a commodity credit loan?

A: The IRS says you may elect to report commodity credit loan income in the year in which the proceeds of the loan are actually received, instead of the year in which the crop is sold. Once you report this way, you must continue to report all succeeding loans in the same way—in the year received.

Q: I am a farm landlord. I don't do any farming, but I consult with my tenant about the management of the farm. Do I have to pay self-employment tax?

A: If you materially participate in the production or management of production of farm products on the land, you have to pay self-employment tax.

Q: I rent out my farm, and I have nothing to do with the operation of it. Do I have to pay self-employment tax?

A: No, because in your case you have no material participation in the production or management of production of farm products on the land.

Q: How do I determine the basis for my cattle?

A: If you purchased livestock for resale, the basis is the cost. If you raised livestock for sale and deducted the cost of raising the animals, the basis is zero.

Instrumentalists who performed in the evening concert were Jim Solsten (top photo) on violin and Doug Engstrom on trumpet. Solsten, Lincoln high school music instructor, performed two concert numbers, "Liebesleid (Love's Sorrow)" by Fritz Kriesler and "Csardas" by V. Monti. "Sonata for B flat Trumpet and Piano" by Paul Hindemith was the selection presented by Engstrom, who is also a music teacher at Lincoln high school. Other performers for the concert included vocalists Marilyn Lund, Deb Penning and Paul Mortenson.

U of M Campus Enrollment Dips This Summer

Student enrollment for the first five-week session of summer classes at the University of Minnesota is down slightly from last year, according to new statistics from the admissions and records office.

Systemwide enrollment is 16,213, down 520 students from a year ago. Enrollment on the Twin Cities campus is 14,124, a 2.9 per cent decrease, and Duluth enrollment is 1,663, a 4.9 per cent decrease.

The drop in Duluth enrollment occurred in the college of letters and science, which has 369 students registered this summer. All other Duluth units had enrollment increases.

Enrollment at Morris is 116 or two more than last year; Crookston reports exactly the same number of students this summer as last, 310.

At Waseca, the summer session starts and ends at a different time than at other campuses, so statistics are not available yet. A preliminary count, however, indicated that Waseca enrollment will be up slightly from last year.

Siren Sounding Warns Danger Of All Kinds

Wailing community siren is commonly called a "tornado warning," that can be dangerous in itself.

"When you hear the warning siren sound, the very first thing to do is to turn on your radio or television, or both, and find out what the warning is all about," advised Roy Aune, acting director of the state division of emergency services, a unit of the Minnesota department of public safety.

"Heading for the basement or underground tornado shelter is definitely not the thing to do, if the siren is warning that a flash flood or a spill of toxic heavier-than-air gases is coming your way," he said.

"Not many persons call them air-raid sirens anymore," said Aune, "but the siren sound could be warning you of an air attack, a nuclear plant radiation leak, a flash flood, a forest fire, a toxic gas or liquid spill, or of course, a tornado.

"Sirens are great to alert people outdoors and indoors that something dangerous is happening. But sirens have a very limited vocabulary. All a siren can do is warn you to 'watch out!'"

The correct thing to do is to turn on your radio or television, preferably both, so you a can quickly get the complete information to help you escape whatever danger is threatening, said Aune.

If a natural or man-made disaster is immiment, both state and local emergency plans call for immediately notifying radio and television stations to let them know what the warning is about, he said.

"Regular broadcasting channels are the quickest way to give people accurate emergency information and we make us of them whenever a public warning is issued."

Rural Students Most Active In Law Contest

Kids from the rural areas and smaller cities of Minnesota are showing an active interest in law-making. Their entries in the Minnesota House of Representatives "There Ought to be a Law" junior essay contest are outnumbering those of their city cousins.

So far, entries from the Twin Cities and surrounding area make up a small part of the hundreds of essays the House has received since the contest began. Entries are in from around the state — Roseau, Oklee, Ada, International Falls, Grand Rapids, Detroit Lakes, Brandon, Rochester and others. The contestants have some good ideas that will challenge the judges who have to choose the winners, the contest sponsors report.

An eighth-grader from Mankato suggests there ought to be a law about high speed racing because of the gasoline crisis. He says his parents "won't even give me a ride downtown because of the gas; it's so high-priced."

Another, from Winona, thinks there ought to be a law to protect the human rights of teenagers by extending their curfew to 11 p.m. on weekends, because "We're responsible teenagers, and we need our freedom."

The rules of the contest ask the junior high entrants to write about one of six topics: juvenile justice, protection for the enderly, child care, solid and hazardous waste, natural resources or human rights. Essays are proving the kids are thinking about what the world's like around them today and what it will be like for their tommorrows, the sponsors say.

The contest is open to all junior high students in the state and runs until August 3. One hundred and thirty-four district winners get to be lawmakers-for-a-day at the Capitol in St. Paul on August 25, during state fair week. They'll get to debate and vote on the top winning essays in the chamber of the Minnesota House.

There is still time to enter, and "Maybe the metropolitan kids are just slow starters," one interested teacher commented.

For complete rules, seventh, eighth and ninth grade students should call or write the House Information Office, Room 8, State Capitol, St. Paul, Minnesota, 55155.

Happy Birthday, USA

American Historic and Cultural society is among many groups encouraging observance of our nation's birthday anniversary this July fourth. This is the way the society presents its suggestions:

Traditionally, Americans have long been classified as "joiners", a label many citizens are proud of.

Voluntarism is a typical USA characteristic that has helped shape the image of U.S. citizens in many countries. Americans are frequently pictured as friendly, outgoing and self-reliant.

Such a flattering concept probably dates back to the Revolutionary War era when our fledgling nation was struggling to survive. Self-reliance was then an essential quality.

These facts take on renewed significance as the nation prepares to celebrate the 203rd birthday of the United States of America. The American Historic and Cultural Society, Inc., has vigorously promoted patriotic community programs through the preceding 21 days extending to Flag Day. The 21-day Honor America concept is a parallel to the 21-gun salute to honor a head of state.

This period was officially created by a joint resolution of the Congress and signed into law by the President in June 1975. Members of Congress, governors and mayors have actively joined in supporting this campaign and have called on their constituents to participate.

A Census Bureau survey in recent years produced the estimate that 37 million people in the United States above the age of 13 years are engaged in volunteer work in the spirit of helping others.

Such a figure reflects a wholesome, generous attitude that has helped this nation become the leader of the world's democracies.

This total denotes a substantial bloc of Americans that by its example invites others to enter the field of voluntarism. To a casual observer it might seem that so many willing hands could dispose of the bulk of the country's social problems. Unfortunately, emergencies of assorted types, adversities and personal hardships continue to multiply.

Other circumstances call for different approaches. In Oregon, a 100,000-acre site formerly used as a rocket test range was turned over to farming by an aerospace company. The land lies in an arid region and the belief prevailed that "Nothing will grow here." But new methods of cultivation have produced rewarding crops and helped to revive the area economically.

In another corner of the country, Robert Sanchez, 29, worked with two scientists of the University of New Mexico to develop a program to produce nuclear drugs. This breakthrough enables hospitals to use the drugs as tracing agents for locating tumors.

Such undertakings contribute to the health and wealth of the nation. But these events are large and complex and beyond the scope of the average American.

But much can be accomplished at the local level to Honor America. You and your neighbors can arrange for appropriate patriotic decorations, centering around the American flag. Remind your club, your union or other organization to lend impetus to such observances, possibly of a financial nature.

Remember John Adams' note to his wife Abigail: ". . .this great anniversary festival ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. . ."

Plan a parade, whip up a picnic, promote a sports contest, schedule a band concert, put on a pageant, touch off a fireworks display, honoring America in an appropriate manner.

One point, at any rate is clear: no manner of organizational gadgetry can make a great society. It takes people to make a society great — righteous, justice-loving, idealistic, freedom-loving people.

Join us in giving America a Happy Birthday this Fourth of July.

End of Hypocrisy?

Following editorial is from the Wadena Pioneer-Journal:

A recent U.S. Supreme court decision may have succeeded in forcing Congress to obey the laws it has forced upon other citizens. We have seen the beginning of the end for congressional hypocrisy.

For years Congress has been passing laws we must obey but Congress does not. The Supreme court, however, ruled recently that members of Congress may be sued for sexual discrimination in employment of their staffs.

It may be that this decision will force Congress to reconsider other hypocritical mandates. Here are a few examples:

All employers, except Uncle Sam, are taxed to pay Social Security benefits for employees.

The OSHA law requires all workplaces to be safe for workers, unless the workplace is the U.S. Congress.

The equal pay act makes it mandatory that women get the same pay for the same work men do. That is, unless employed by Congress.

The fair labor standards act calls for minimum wages, overtime and protection against child labor. This applies to everyone but Congress.

The civil rights act of 1964 and the equal employment opportunity act of 1972 says that none of us may discriminate in he hiring of employees. None of us, that is, except Congress.

The freedom of information act gives any citizen the right to examine most of the records kept by public agencies and officials, unless those officials are congressmen.

Congress is very good at telling us how we must run our lives, but refuses to live by those same rules. Maybe the Supreme court decision will end this hypocrisy.

Truth In Budgeting

Following comments are written by Fritzi Cohen of the Military Audit project:

Inflation has made economic survival particularly difficult for retired people on fixed income — over half of whom depend primarily on social security benefits to survive. And the Carter Administration is not making life any easier for Social Security beneficiaries. Indeed the Carter Administration is making life more difficult for pensioners.

The administration proposes reducing benefits for those who can least afford cut back income. And to do this the administration would have you think these benefits are welfare. They are not. Social Security benefits are earned entitlements. As every nongovernment working stiff knows, Social Security is based on trust funds financed by a special tax on employers and employees.

And Social Security has always paid its way. Over $40 billion has accumulated in reserve funds from social security tax payments since the program's inception in 1937.

The federal budget deficit currently worrying everyone should not be confused with a Social Security deficit. There is no Social Security deficit. Purporting to reduce the federal budget deficit by reducing Social Security expenditures is misleading and malicious.

Is there a crisis in Social Security? There may be one, but it's not the actuarial crisis Administration officials are predicting for after the year 2000. The real crisis is that Social Security is not administered in a manner either beneficial to the economy or consistent with security in old age for those forced to invest in it.

The Feds are not being open. First of all, for the last decade the separate identity of the social Security system has been violated. Since 1969 the feds have simply looked upon Social Security receipts and expenditures, which this year will amount to $119 billion, as part of the general federal budget. This, as the AFL-CIO points out, simply makes the budget deficit appear smaller, domestic expenditures look larger.

Theory has it that President Johnson proposed consolidated reporting in order to conceal enormous deficits occurring as a result of the Vietnam War. And since consolidation, the U.S. budget deficit has increased by alarming proportions — over $470 billion since 1970 — or considerably more than half of the entire outstanding federal debt. And none of it attributable to social security.

Our federal budget often conceals more than it reveals. Present Social Security beneficiaries and future beneficiaries — that is to say almost all Americans — would indeed benefit from more truth in budgeting.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Promoting Poverty Through Welfare "Reform"

"The lessons of history. . . show conclusively. . . that continued dependency upon relief induces a spiritual and moral disintegration fundamentally destructive to the national fibre. To dole out relief is to administer a narcotic, a subtle destroyer of the human spirit. The federal government must and shall quit this business of relief."

Tough words. Might you be surprised then, if I tell you they were spoken not by a contemporary conservative politician, but by the man who actually fathered the New Deal — President Franklin D. Roosevelt: Roosevelt has good intentions and gave sound advice; but his words had little effect. During the past 44 years, his message has not just been ignored, it has been treated with contempt.

Today, the plain truth is the federal government has a stake in promoting poverty, because it is more heavily committed to the "business of relief" than ever before. And why not? Business has never been better — the "business of relief", that is. The biggest, fastest growing chunk of federal spending, and the busiest activity of the federal bureaucracy involve the supervision of transfer payments — in other words, the transfer of money through the process of taxation from those in the upper and middle-income groups to those in the lower income groups.

The welfare business has become truly big business through its promoters' faithful observance of one simple rule: Make it pay not to work. Thus, by 1975, to raise just one person from poverty required the equivalent of three median-income families laboring a full year and donating all their income to the federal government for transfer programs. . . .

You see, many of the benefits distributed to welfare recipients, like food stamps, are not counted as income. So, while the value of all the yearly benefits a welfare family receives might exceed what a working family could afford to pay, the family on welfare still remains classified as poor. And that's why, if the present system continues, welfare rolls will stay high even while your taxes and government spending on transfer payments continue to soar.

And this system will continue as long as social planners have their way, and avoid sound policies anchored by common sense and a respect for human nature. For example, in the Seattle-Denver experiment, the government spent 10 years and $60 million trying to prove a proposition that you, any of your friends, or any ten names selected at random from a telephone directory would instinctively reject as absurd: To wit, people guaranteed an annual income will work just as hard as those who are not. Last year, the government finally announced people guaranteed an annual income work less.

But has this startling revelation made any difference: Apparently not, for the very centerpiece of the Administration's latest proposed welfare "reform" is the establishment of a guaranteed annual income for all American families. Fully-employed two parent families earning up to $13,000 will be invited to join the welfare rolls. Decisions on program benefits will be taken out of the hands of local authorities, who can deal with people, and handed over to bureaucrats in the federal government, who deal with machines. Fraud and abuse will increase.

The proposal supposedly "assures a strong work requirement;" in reality, it contains no provision requiring recipients to work for their benefits. The jobs offered will be largely public service jobs, which have almost nothing to do with the real world of work. How will that help people become self-supporting and independent? Finally, we are told this proposal is "conservative," as it will add only $5.7 billion to the welfare bill. But that estimate comes from the same people who made a slight miscalculation of $17 billion in projecting the cost of last year's welfare proposal. What is certainly not conservative is the number of people who will now qualify for welfare — 50 million.

How can anyone ask an American family, already staggered by double-digit inflation and rising taxes, to financially support the expansion of programs that will remain riddled with abuse? And when will we stop using the word "reform" to describe this cruel approach that promotes and institutionalizes poverty, encourages dependence and treats people like permanent cripples incapable of ever facing life on their own?

Real welfare reform can only originate at the local level where state and local governments are much closer to existing problems, and where they can team up with private enterprise to provide genuine hope, opporunity and productive jobs. The welfare bureaucracy resists this approach and continues to push a policy of welfare expansion. If, like sheep, we follow this policy to its logical conclusion, we may all end up on relief. But if that happens, who will be left to provide it?

Anesthetists Week Observed

Role of nurse anesthetists in Minnesota's health care system is cited by Governor Al Quie in his proclamation declaring July 8-14th as "Nurse Anesthetist week in Minnesota".

There are more than 800 active, practicing certified registered nurse anesthetists (CRNA) serving Minnesota hospitals. It is estimated that these men and women administer over 50 per cent of all anesthesia in Minnesota. Most work in hospital surgical center under direction of the operating surgeon or anesthesiologist.

A certified registered nurse anesthetist is a registered nurse (RN) who undertakes an additional two years of specialized anesthisia education.

Chief's Corner

by Ken Froschheiser
Chief of Police
Thief River Falls, MN.

The police department and the Pennington county safety council have received several complaints in regard to bicycle riding habits on our streets and highways. We remind all bicycle riders that traffic laws apply to bicycles as well as motor vehicles. The bicycle patrol has been writing citations for infractions of the law on bicycles, however, this alone will not do the job.

Bicycles are to be ridden and operated the same as motor vehicles. That means riding with traffic in the right-hand lane, stopping for stop signs and yielding where designated. We all know that the bicycle rider will always come out on the short end of the stick when involved in a collision with an automobile.

All parents are asked to please instruct their children in correct safe riding habits and above all, set an example themselves when riding. Many times we observe a family out riding and the parents ride right through a stop sign with the children following right behind. By doing this, the children feel that it's fine to ride a bike through a stop sign and not stop.

We also notice a lot of youngsters riding four and five abreast down the wrong side of the street, and riding directly in front of oncoming traffic. This a definite traffic hazard and is putting someone in a likely position for serious injury or even death.

I am instructing the officers of the department to start more stringent enforcement action on bicycle infractions to assist the bicycle patrol. Juvenile officer Haugen will be holding a bicycle rodeo later this summer and I certainly hope many bicycle riders will take part in this fine training program and fun-filled day.

Extract of Minutes of Meeting of School Board of Independent School District No. 564 Thief River Falls Pennington County, Minnesota

Pursuant to due call and notice thereof, a regular meeting of the School Board of Independent School District No. 564 was held on the 25th day of June, 1979, at 7:30 o'clock p.m.

The following members were present: McDowell, Murphy, Sjulson, Christianson; and the following were absent: Sparby, Wodul, Sorvig.

Member____________________Introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED by the School Board of Independent School District No. 564 as follows:

Cutting Back Can Help Save Energy

While the nation faces a petroleum shortage, some Minnesota residents find cutting back, coping and conserving to be far from disabling. An informal random survey of Minnesota drivers revealed people are finding ways to circumvent the problem by altering, rather than giving up, lifestyles, according to the Minnesota energy agency.

Use of public transportation in those metropolitan areas that offer service is up considerably over the last month. In the Twin Cities, but ridership is up 5.6 per cent, reports the Metropolitan transit commission.

One bus rider commented he'd forgotten how much work he could accomplish while riding the bus, something he could not do while driving.

Carpooling and vanpooling also head the list of alternatives Minnesota drivers are utilizing. A recent recruit to carpooling wonders why he didn't do this before. . .the increasing guilt of being one person in a car driving 10 miles one way to work, strengthened his resolve to "do my part to cut down on gas."

A suburban metropolitan man said he took an informal survey of his own and watched how long cars sat idling at drive-up windows at fast food restaurants and banks. "What a waste of gas," he said. "It isn't that difficult to find a parking place and walk in, and it really doesn't take much longer."

An outstate Minnesota woman has modified her daily schedule so that when she must drive to meetings, church activities and the store, she allows extra time to get there, and usually drives about 50 miles per hour. She comments, "I know as one driver I don't save volumes of gas by driving 55 or slower, but I feel if everyone did the result would be dramatic."

An enterprising cub scout troop, recently headed for a day camp in Wisconsin, decided to charter a bus for the trip instead of putting approximately 30 more cars on the road for the 60-mile round trip.

Old fashioned walking is regaining some of its lost popularity, too. While the country has turned to jogging and other forms of exercise to gain physical fitness, it wasn't until the recent gasoline crisis that people rose to their feet in growing numbers and began walking to the drug store, post office, doctor's office and library.

One young woman on a bicycle stopped at a traffic light said she decided to ride six miles each way to work when gasoline became so expensive. "I drive an average of one day a week, but I don't drive unless I have some errands to combine with the trip to or from work."

Another survey participant said she found that cutting out unnecessary trips with her car not only saved gasoline and wear and tear on the car, but she has a lot more time available to accomplish things at home. "I found it enlightening to look at my day and see how I could be more efficient just by not driving so much. It really hasn't meant major changes in my lifestyle, but the minor adjustments I've made have been very productive."

Still another individual cited use of the telephone as an important method of conserving gasoline. She is able to save many trips by using her rural home telephone.

Webster's New World dictionary, defines coping as "fighting or contending (with) successfully or on equal terms," but some Minnesota residents seem to prefer the less-awesome language of the second definition, "dealing with problems or troubles, etc." So, as the gasoline and petroleum shortage continues, many Minnesotans are finding innovative ways to cope and conserve.

For further information on conservation tips, call the Minnesota energy agency at 296-5175 or toll-free 800-652-9747.

Motorcyclist Eye Protection Is Required

Eye protection is still required for motorcyclists, regardless of age or license status, reported the Minnesota department of public safety.

An effective, properly mounted windshield is considered legally sufficient eye protection, said public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

"For cycles without windscreens, the operator must wear eyeglasses, sunglasses, goggles or a helmet with a faceshield. Contact lenses do not qualify as eye protective devices," he said.

"Motorcycle passengers also should wear eye protection, even though only cycle operators are required to by law," recommended Sopsic.

Since the helmet law repeal in 1977, most motorcycle operators are not required to wear helmets. However, protective headgear is still mandatory for cycle operators under age 18 and those on learner's permits.

Also, motorcycle riders who gave up their helmets may run into problems trying to recover damages for negligence that resulted in a head injury. The law allows courts to cut the damage award to the extent that the head injuries could have been avoided if the cyclist had worn a helmet.

Minn. Local Government Is Big Business

Local units of government in Minnesota spent $4.9 billion for the fiscal period ending June 30, 1978, according to a report released today by State Auditor Arne H. Carlson.

The report summarizes the governmental revenues, expenditures, and indebtedness of Minnesota's local units of government which includes counties, cities, towns, school districts and other agencies.

Expenditures of all kinds, including capital outlays, went from $4.5 billion in fiscal year 1977 to $4.9 billion for fiscal year 1978, an increase of 8.2 per cent. Receipts increased from $4.9 billion to $5.3 billion during the same period. It was the first time that revenues went over the $5 billion mark.

Of the $4.9 billion in expenditures for fiscal year 1978, $2.2 billion went for education, $385.3 million for welfare, $382.6 million for highways, and $234.1 million for sanitation and waste removal.

Expenditures totaled $950.5 million for counties, $989.8 million for cities, $46.7 million for towns, $1.8 billion for school districts, and $1.08 billion for other agencies, including $535.5 million for the University of Minnesota.

Of the $5.3 billion in revenues, $2.9 billion came from federal, state and other intergovernmental grants, with $1.3 billion coming from taxes.

Revenue from property taxes increased by $134.2 million between fiscal year 1977 and 1978, up 11.9 per cent. State and federal aids went up by $220.1 million, an increase of 8.8 per cent.

Total outstanding gross bonded debt of local governments was $3.8 billion, or $985.93 per capital (1970 census).

"I'LL HUFF AND I'LL PUFF" could well have been the chant of youngsters participating in one of the painting activities offered Friday and Saturday afternoons at Art in the Park '79. Given a piece of paper, a dab or two of paint and a straw the children used a lot of hot air to yield a work of art, as illustrated by this young boy. Children's activities using everything from crayons to play dough to thread spools drew a lot of attention of adults in attendance as well.

Auto Mechanic Shortage May Grow Severe

The auto industry is faced with a severe shortage of trained mechanics and the situation probably is going to get worse, reports the Automotive Information Council (AIC).

Criticism by government officials has been blamed for mechanics leaving the trade.

"We get blasted so often that the motoring public now looks on us as a bunch of crooks," said one shop owner. "No wonder we're having trouble attracting new talent and keeping those we now have."

Another shop owner, fed up with the attacks, wrote the following sarcastic letter to his local newspaper:

"Due to the complete dishonesty and lack of integrity of the automotive repairers, it is time for our legislators — in their infinite wisdom — to rule them illegal:

"Think of the money those fellows take out of circulation. It could go a long way toward curbing inflation. We no longer would have the nasty chore of having our auto repaired. We couldn't!"

"Car repair speakeasys would prevail. Little old ladies with axes could again come down like the wolf on the fold and break up air compressors. Mechanics in trench coats could play their trade in dark alleys, if they paid protection.

"Our long weekends could be spent sitting in our immobile autos listening to the stereo, if it works."

Despite attacks on the auto repair industry by transportation secretary Brock Adams and other high-ranking government officials, the Federal Government has ended its auto mechanic apprenticeship training initiative program, which was designed to bring more qualified mechanics into the fold.

One industry estimate says that more than 270,000 persons must be tained to perform proper engine maintenance before the entire U.S. vehicle population can be maintained according to specifications recommended by the vehicle manufacturers.

To put this into perspective, it should be noted that the U.S. has a ratio of about 250 privately owned vehicles per mechanic, compared with 68 vehicles per mechanic in England and 74 per Mechanic in Japan.

America's freedom of mobility, still the envy of the world, could be hampered if the government harangues continue, said AIC.

Care Of Horse Necessary In Tick Season

Two years ago, the Minnesota Humane society was called on a Sunday night to assist a county sheriff with two mares and two foals which were down with tick paralysis.

With the assistance of a veterinarian, a search warrant, a deputy sheriff and a gentleman who transports animals for the society, the animals were moved to the large animal hospital at the University of Minnesota veterinary hospitals, St. Paul campus.

A veterinarian at the hospital discovered that one mare had a bag of ticks as large as a hornet's nest on her chest. With treatment (removing of the ticks) and supportive care, three of the animals survived. One foal, after much care, collapsed and died.

If you find your horse lying quietly and it can not be gotten to its feet, has a normal temperature and no discernable injury, there could be a tick problem.

If the horse is covered with ticks that are engourged with blood, the illness could be tick paralysis. Start picking off the ticks, until your horse gets up. This strange disease is occasionally encountered when there is a heavy tick infestation. All common species of wood ticks are capable of producing the disease and there is a wide susceptibility among horses.

After a tick fastens to a horse and probes its blood containing tissue, an anticlot solution is secreted into the surrounding area. A small amount of a drug causing paralysis is included in this secretion. If a horse is infested with enough ticks, it could become parlyzed.

This problem can be avoided by staying away from highly populated tick areas, trimming long grass, using insect sprays, wipes and greases and trimming long haired areas. These things will all help, but by far the most effective is careful examination each day and removing all ticks by hand. Check all long haired body areas and especially watch foals and ponies. Keep in mind that smaller and poorer conditioned horses, having survived a long winter in this area, are the most likely candidates for tick paralysis.

Meat Production Ranks Among Nation's High

Commercial livestock slaughter in Minnesota during the first five months in 1979 supplied consumers an estimated 702.7 million pounds of red meats, almost 5 per cent of the national production and seventh highest among all states, reports agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin.

That volume of commercial slaughter grossed Minnesota region farmers an estimated $503.3 million in marketing receipts, or about 21 per cent more than for the same period of 1978. Minnesota's January-May contribution to national consumer red meats supplies was 2 per cent less than a year ago, compared to a national reduction of 5 per cent.

Pork continues to be Minnesota's leading red meat product with the 2,297,400 hogs slaughtered and processed this January-May, an 8 per cent increase over last year, and accounting for nearly 7 per cent of the nation's 1979 pork production. The farm value of the hogs slaughtered to date in Minnesota this year is estimated at $263.5 million.

Beef cattle, however, continue to be the major source of red meat income for Minnesota livestock farmers. The [illegible],400 cattle slaughtered in this state's commercial packing plants this January-May had an estimated farm value of $320.4 million, up by more than 29 per cent from a year ago.

Minnesota's January-May commercial livestock slaughter also included 105,900 lambs and sheep with a farm value of $9.1 million and 2,500 veal calves with a farm value of nearly $402,000.

The gross live weight of Minnesota's slaughter livestock for the five month period this year was nearly 1.1 billion pounds, requiring an estimated 27,500 truck movements between farms and the meat processing plants in this state.

Northland community college is looking for an assistant football coach for the 1979 season. If you have some knowledge about the sport and are interested in coaching, contact Northland head coach Irv Smith by calling 681-2181 or 681-7453.

Smith will begin his second year as Northland football coach this fall without Tom Johnson and Mike Trudeau who served as assistant coaches in 1978. Tim Olson will return as a member of the Northland coach staff and will be joined by newcomer John Helley, with Scott Kays and Jay Kverno working with the squad as student assistants.

Another assistant coach is needed before the Northmen start preseason practice sessions in August.

TRF Shooters Compete In State Meet

Ten members of the Thief River Falls trap league are expected to compete this week in the 66th annual Minnesota state trap shooting tournament, scheduled to be held Wednesday through Sunday at the Del-Tone trap range in St. Cloud.

Well over 500 participants, both men and women, are expected to compete for Minnesota state championship titles in singles, handicap and doubles events, and for $15,000 in added money and trophies.

Headlining the list of Thief River Falls trap league entries at the state meet will be Jim Heckroth, a former Nevada state champion who this year built the Marshallton Gun Club, located 12 miles north of Thief River Falls on highway 59, site of the Thief River Falls trap league's weekly shooting.

Heckroth could become Thief River Falls' first state trap champion since 1973 when Stan Wilson, Jr. took the doubles crown with a near-perfect 99x100. Wilson also won state titles in 1965 with a 95x100 in doubles; in 1964 when he was a triple winner with a 199x200 in singles, 97x100 in handicap competition and 383x400 in the all-around category, and in 1959 with a 92x100 in junior shooting.

Only other Thief River Falls state trap champions were A.F. Jones with a 100x100 in singles in 1946 and C.A. Nason with a 99x100 in singles in 1917.

In a state tournament "warm-up" Sunday at Rock Lake, Man. Heckroth was simply outstanding in doubles competition with a 491x500. In shooting 100-bird rounds, Heckroth went 96x100, 100x100, 100x100, 99x100 and 96x100. It was the first time in Manitoba history a shooter had recorded a 100-straight in doubles, and let along a 200-straight.

Also competing at Rock Lake was Tony Dorn, Jr. who also shot remarkable well with three 93's, a 96 and a 97 to finish third, just one bird behind the second place shooter.

Joining Heckroth and Dorn in St. Cloud this week will be Thief River Falls league shooters Bill Moreau, Pat Fisher, Stan and Mert Wilson, Al Stinehauer, Pam and Frandell Johnson and Roger Matthews.

Miscellaneous

+ Steve LeGrand, son of long-time Fergus Falls radio station KBRF sportscaster Oats LeGrand, has been recommended for the position of head football coach at Fergus Falls community college. Steve LeGrand, until recently the head football coach at St. Cloud Cathedral high school, was recommended for the Fergus Falls community college position by Wesley Waage, president of the college, and it is expected that the recommendation will be upheld by Phillip Helland, chancellor of the Minnesota community college system. Steve LeGrand would succeed Jack Eatinger who resigned earlier as coach of the Spartans.

+ Tony Veith, former Brainerd high school all-round athletic standout who first elected to attend the University of North Dakota on a football scholarship but transferred after a year to Brainerd community college where he was an MJCAA all-state baseball player this spring before signing a professional baseball contract with the Chicago Cubs, suffered a dislocated thumb while playing in the Cubs' rookie league in Sarasota, Fla. In his first eight official trips to the plate as a pro, Veith had six hits and has driven in three runs. He also walked four times and had one game-winning hit prior to his injury.

+ C.A. "Bun" Fortier, activities director of the Bemidji public schools, has retired after working 36 years for School District 31 in Bemidji. Fortier, who joined the Bemidji school staff in 1942, gained fame as the Lumberjacks' basketball coach from 1950 to 1969. He coached Bemidji to 14 state tournaments in 20 years at the helm, reaching the state finals in 1954, where the Lumberjacks bowed to Brainerd, and in 1961, where Bemidji lost to Duluth Central in the final moments of play. His 20 years as Bemidji basketball coach produced a remarkable 424-92 record, with 12 seasons of 20 wins or more. He also served as an assistant football coach under Red Wilson and took over the responsibility of activities director when Wilson retired in 1973.

Elks Win TRF Tournament Title

Pitchers Mark Harder, Rick Langlie and Greg Harder allowed a total of just two hits in three games as the host Thief River Falls Elks won the 11th annual Thief River Falls Babe Ruth invitational baseball tournament for 13-15-year-olds played Saturday and Sunday.

Thief River Falls beat the Bemidji Lions 6-0 in Sunday's championship game on the Northland community college diamond. It was the first Elks title in the event since 1975.

Defending champion Bemidji Lions picked up yesterday's consolation crown with a 5-0 victory over the East Grand Forks Red, with the East Grand Forks Blue beating Red Lake Falls 14-3 for third place honors.

Thief River Falls opened with a dramatic 2-1 Saturday victory over Middle River, winning on a perfectly-executed hit-and-run play in the bottom of the seventh inning. Mark Harder pitched a one-hitter in that game, striking out eight. Brent Schmitz was 2-for-2 in the Elks' nine-hit attack and Tim Bergland was 2-for-4, driving in both runs.

Rick Langlie pitched a no-hitter as Thief River Falls belted the East Grand Forks Blue 11-1 in a semifinal game set back from Saturday to Sunday because of rain. Langlie also headed the seven-hit Elks offense with a 2-for-4 effort that included three RBI. A six-run second inning decided the issue.

Greg Harder followed with a one-hitter in the 6-0 championship game victory over the Bemidji Lions, striking out 11. Thief River Falls collected seven hits, with Mark Harder going 3-for-4 and Tim Bottem complementing a 2-for-3 game with three RBI.

Thief River Falls broke open a scoreless championship game with a three-run third inning. Rob Jorstad, Bottem and Mark Harder all produced RBI singles that frame.

It became 5-0 in the fifth when Jorstad was hit by a pitch, stole second and went on third on a wild pitch on the play and scored on a hard-hit single Bottem to right-center field. Mark Harder then drilled a run-scoring single through the right side.

The Elks, now 16-6, added a single run in the top of the seventh as Lonnie Aune put down a perfect bunt for a base hit, went all the way to third on a wild pitch and scored on a sacrifice bunt by Dave Stimac.

Saturday's opening round also found Red Lake Falls beating Roseau 5-4 in eight innings, the Bemidji Braves defeated the East Grand Forks Red 11-3 and the East Grand Forks Blue surprised the Bemidji Lions 12-5.

Bemidji Braves joined the Thief River Falls Elks in the championship game with a 4-2 semifinal victory over Red Lake Falls Saturday.

In the consolation semifinals, the East Grand Forks Red hammered Roseau 15-4 and the Bemidji Lions eliminated Middle River 9-2.

TRF Hosts Sub District Babe Ruth Tournament

Thief River Falls will play host to the 1979 Lake Agassiz Babe Ruth Southern Division Sub District baseball tournament Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The double-elimination event on the Northland community college diamond features 13-15-year-old ball players.

Wednesday's opening round will find Red Lake Falls playing Crookston at 10 a.m., Thief River Falls Elks meeting the East Grand Forks Blue at 12, the East Grand Forks Red playing the Red Lake Falls-Crookston winner at 2 and the first round losers meeting at 4.

Games will begin at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 4 o'clock Thursday, with the finals scheduled for 1 p.m. Friday.

The two finalists will advance to the district tournament the following week at Roseau.

Thief River Falls Elks were scheduled to complete their 1979 regular season schedule today (Monday) with a 3 p.m. game against Crookston on the Northland diamond.

A Thursday doubleheader in East Grand Forks produced a split for the Elks who lost a high-scoring 10-9 opener to the East Grand Forks Red before taking a 10-2 decision from the East Grand Forks Blue in the nightcap. Mark Harder had two hits and Tim Bergland had two RBI in the first game, with Harder, the winning pitcher, collecting two hits and four RBI in the second game.

Thief River Falls Merchants, scheduled to host Crookston in a 1 p.m. game for 13-year-olds today (Monday) at Northland, did not play a scheduled game at East Grand Forks Thursday because of a scheduling misunderstanding.

Shelley McGann led the Thief River Falls girls by winning two Alexandria races, swimming the 11-12-year-old Class B 50 butterfly in 33.8 and swimming the Class B 100 freestyle in 1:10.6.

Jennifer Hustad was second in the 9-10-year-old girls ¼ mile lake swim in 7:45.79 that bettered the existing meet record by nearly 30 seconds.

AFTER DROPPING a potential double play toss at second base, Great Northwest Agency, Inc. shortstop Myron Jesme scrambled for the ball as Arctic IWA base runner Lee Brandt headed for the bag in the first inning of Thursday's Division III game in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association. Arctic IWA won the game 4-3.

Tunberg Golf Champ Beaten

A new champion is assured in the second annual Tunberg Motors match play golf classic at the Thief River Country Club following defending champ Steve Easton's second round extra hole loss to Art Welter last week.

In first round matches, Mike Kosel edged Jon Ballingrud 1-up, Paul Williams beat Steve Waale 3-1, Mike Lee eliminated Marge Corliss 1-up, Bill Corliss defeated Bruce Restad 4-3, Monty Markstrom over Frank Womack 5-3, Paul Wurst sidelined Bill Penning 2-1, Jay Moum outlasted Dick Skay in one extra hole and Roger Tunberg topped Alex Easton 1-up.

In the lower bracket first round matches it was Arnie Lee over Bob Forberg in one extra hole, Mark Larson beat Roy Lee 3-2, Sylvia Sjoberg over Wade Hoppe 2-up, Cal Wicklander stopped Joel Carlson 4-2, Stewart Rugland downed Rick Parkhouse 2-up, Bob Fitzgerald eliminated Ernie Padilla 2-up, Art Welter defeated Jerry Johnson 2-1 and Steve Easton edged Gary Laidley 1-up.

Williams joined Welter as an early second round winner by beating Mike Kosel 2-1.

The tournament, a handicap event, will conclude with the July 20 finals.

Roger Cota Is Leading Hitter In Fast Pitch

Only unbeaten team in the Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league, North Star Transport, is surprisingly the only team not represented in a list of top 10 hitters compiled by league statistician Richard Bjerken.

Roger Cota of Coca-Cola headlines the hitting figures through June 29 with nine hits in 20 at-bats for a .450 batting average. Mark DuChamp of Radio Shack is also over .400 with 10 hits in 23 at-bats for a .435 average.

North Star Transport would have a hitter among the top ten, except that the team's leading hitter, Tom Neibauer, doesn't have the minimum 18 at-bats at this stage. A big drop in the North Star Transport batting figures behind Neibauer finds Mike Carriere the team's second leading hitter with just a .222 average.

Legion 1-2 In Crookston Meet

A 12-3 first round winner over Fertile Saturday, Thief River Falls returned to the Crookston American Legion invitational baseball tournament Sunday to lost a pair of games to long-time athletic rivals Crookston 4-1 and Bemidji 5-1.

Host Crookston won the eight-team event, clipping Wadena 2-1 in Sunday's championship game with an unearned run in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Saturday's first round games, in addition to Thief River Falls' 12-3 victory over Fertile, found Bemidji beating Red Lake Falls 4-2, Wadena nipped Roseau 2-1 and Crookston handled Park Rapids 12-5.

Rain interupted a portion of Saturday's schedule, enlarging Sunday's format.

In the Semifinals, Wadena edged Bemidji 6-5 and Crookston stopped Thief River Falls 4-1.

Consolation round scores found Red Lake Falls beating Roseau 5-1 and Park Rapids out-scoring Fertile 20-11.

Roseau then doubled Park Rapids 6-3 for seventh place, Red Lake Falls upended Park Rapids 9-5 for fifth place and Bemidji stopped Thief River Falls 5-1 for third.

TRF 12, Fertile 3

Thief River Falls struck for five runs in the fifth inning to break open a 3-0 ball game in a 12-3 first round win over Fertile. The winners added four more runs in the sixth to make it a rout.

Winning pitcher Kelly Gutterud, backed a nine-hit attack, scattered three hits. He struck out nine and walked five. Fertile was charged with three of the game's five errors.

Crookston 4, TRF 1

Losing pitcher Scott Sabo surrendered just two hits, but five Thief River Falls runners reached third base without scoring in a 4-1 semifinal loss to Crookston.

Winning pitcher Brent Stahlecker struck out 13 batters. He walked three and gave up four hits. Sabo, tagged with a single run in the fifth, two in the third and another in the fourth, struck out five and walked six.

Crookston committed five of the game's seven errors, but didn't give up a run until the seventh.

Bemidji 5, TRF 1

Bemidji collected seven hits and scored five times in the first two innings en route to a 5-1 third place game victory over Thief River Falls.

The first five Bemidji batters in the bottom of the first inning battered Thief River Falls starting pitcher Monty Peterson for four base hits to quickly decide the issue.

Bemidji finished with nine hits, with winning pitcher Dave Evenson notching a two-hitter as he struck out nine and walked two. Scott McKeever came on in relief of Peterson.

Thief River Falls emerged from the tournament with a 7-3 season record.

Melvies Ends Losing Streak Upsets Dallmann Athletic 1-0

Melvies snapped a season-long 10-game losing streak in the Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league Thursday by upsetting Dallmann Athletic, Inc. 1-0 behind the one-hit shutout pitching of Tom Shetler.

Shetler made a first inning run stand up through the seven-inning contest, pitching out of trouble in both the fifth and sixth innings.

Melvies scored when Doug Mattell led off the top of the first with a single to left field, went to second on Shetler's sacrifice bunt, advanced to third on Rick Kofstad's single to left and scored on a passed ball.

Shetler allowed just base runners through four innings giving up a two-out single in the first and then watching as a two-out error put a runner on base in the fourth.

Dallmann Athletic, Inc. threatened in both the fifth and sixth. In the fifth, Mark Drury led off with a base hit and stole second. He moved to third on Gary Laidley's sacrifice bunt, but Shetler retired Keith Daley on an infield pop-up and ended the inning by getting Jeff Tunberg on a ground ball back to the pitcher. In the sixth, Bruce Johnson and Mike Drury beat our infield hits with two outs, but Shetler induced Randy Dallmann to ground out to end the game.

Action Realty 1

Facing each other for the third time in 10 days, North Star Transport and Action Realty locked up in Thursday's doubleheader nightcap won by North Star Transport 2-1. Unbeaten in seven league games, North Star Transport won the earlier meetings with Action Realty 5-2 and 3-2. Pitchers Tom Neibauer and Al Erickson both pitched three-hitters in the latest confrontation.

North Star Transport opened the scoring in the bottom of the fourth inning when Neibauer led off with a double to right and went to third on a wild pitch. Mike Carriere's sacrifice fly to right scored the run.

It became 2-0 in the fifth on another lead-off double, this one by Dan Peterson. He scored on sacrifices by Morris Halverson and Henry Holte.

An error helped Action Realty get back into the game in the seventh when Nick Drees opened with a single to right and Wayne Smith walked. Scott Kleven sacrificed the runners to second and third and an error on Wayne Liden's ground ball allowed the run to score. Kleven took third on a fielder's choice play that did not result in an out, but Neibauer struck out Mark Thorstad and ended the game by getting Tim Barris to hit into a fielder's choice play.

Schmidts 2

Hitters continued to take a beating in Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league play Friday when Mark DuChamp hurled his second three-hitter of the week to lead Radio Shack past Schmidts 3-2 in eight innings. Over a seven-day span league hitters were cut down on four three-hitters and a two-hitter.

Schmidts scored first with a pair of runs in the bottom of the fourth inning. Bruce Johnson led off with a single to center and advanced to third on a pair of wild pitches. Mark Haats walked and stole second, followed by a ground out by Mark Anderson that plated a run. Bob Tunheim singled in another for a 2-0 edge.

Radio Shack cut it to 2-1 in the sixth when Bob Lundbohm walked, stole second and went to third on an error. A bases-loaded fielder's choice play on a ball hit by Mitch Dicken scored the run.

A bases-loaded error tied the game 2-2 in the top of the seventh and Radio Shack won it on a pair of hits, an error and a fielder's choice in the seventh.

First Half Trap Season Ends For TRF Shooters

Northern State Bank and Sjoberg's qualified for post-season tournament berths as the 26-team Thief River Falls Trap League completed its first half 1979 season at the Marshallton Gun Club.

However, a four-way tie developed for second place between The Times, Auto Body Repair, Sethre's Hartz and Triple J Trap Co. Top five finishers in the league's first and second half season point standings qualify for the post-season city shoot. The four-way second place jam will be broken tonight (Monday) by using the scores from the first week of second half season shooting.

First half season tournament qualifiers who repeat a top five finish during the season half season reduce the post-season field.

Northern State Bank won the first half title with 16 points Monday following a narrow 117-115 victory over Arctic No. 3. Sjoberg's, league leader most of the first half season, finished with 15 points, with a final 116-114 triumph over the American Legion.

In a pair of key first half season-ending confrontations, Auto Body Repair kept The Times from a title tie with a slim 120-119 decision and Triple J Trap Co. whipped Sethre's Hartz 121-110 to create that third place scramble at 14 points.

Elsewhere Monday, the Soo Line Hotshots beat Hible's Standard 121-117, Bjorkman's knocked off Service Master 111-101, Pizza Hut downed Northland Realty 114-110, Pepsi-Cola slipped by Hydra-Mac 106-104, L.B. Hartz Wholesale topped Peterson-Biddick 112-108, Arctic Spirit crushed Noreen Development 117-77, H & B Oil handled the Cat Busters 120-109, Wilson Brothers Co. turned back First Northwestern State Bank Southside 120-112 and the Viking Varmints upended Marshallton Gun Club 117-111.

Seven 25-straights were turned in Monday by Lloyd Melby, Wilson Brothers Co; Peter Tri, Northland Realty; Dez Schob, Soo Line Hot Shots; Joe Nichols, Triple J Trap Co.; Jay Moum and Mark Hagen, Sjoberg's; and Bruce Mattson, The Times.

Fisheries Hatch 314 Million Fry

Although the take of walleye eggs this spring for state hatcheries was less than last year due to high water conditions, the department of natural resources reports it still managed to secure more than 500 million.

Jerry Kuehn, DNR fisheries chief, said nearly 314 million fry were hatched out, insuring an active walleye stocking program for 1979.

"Due to heavy rains and run off this spring which disrupted walleye trapping operations in the northern counties," said Kuehn, "the take of eggs at Waskish on Red lake and in the St. Louis river near Duluth was down considerably from previous years."

But in the southwestern counties, spawning runs were above average with very good egg takes at Waterville and Spicer, he said. Kuehn noted, however, that the bulk of the eggs were taken, as in past years, from spawning runs in the northern half of the state.

Arctic IWA Increases Lead In Division III

Beaten just once in 11 games, Arctic IWA strengthened its hold on first place in Division III of the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association Thursday with a dramatic down-to-the-last-play 4-3 victory over Great Northwest Agency, Inc.

Leading 4-3 on the strength of a third inning three-run inside-the-park home run by Jeff Joppru who sent the ball over the leftfielder's head, Arctic IWA needed a perfect relay throw to catch Great Northwest Agency, Inc. base runner Ken Niemela at the plate as he tried to score from second base on a two-out single to right in the seventh inning.

Great Northwest Agency, Inc. then did the Division III leaders a favor in the second half of its twinbill by beating Schumacher's Tireland, Arctic IWA's closest rival, 8-5.

Schumacher's Tireland was also a loser Friday, falling to Phase II 8-4 to drop three games behind Arctic IWA in the loss column.

Division I

A Wagon Wheel doubleheader Friday tightened the Division I standings as the Middle River ball club knocked off the division-leading Rusty Nail Raiders 12-2 but lost a 9-8 eight-inning decision to the second place TRF Merchants. A pair of Bobo Dicken home runs and one by Don Grabowska pulled the TRF Merchants within one game of the Rusty Nail Raiders.

Tony Dorn, Inc. also found itself back in the race with a doubleheader sweep, scoring twice in the bottom of the seventh in a 4-3 victory over Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. and pounding Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. 19-6 with an offensive barrage that saw Ed Kees and Mark Thorstad go 4-for-4.

Hobo Haus doubled its win total of the entire season Friday with a twinbill sweep, blanking Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. 9-0 and getting by Arnold Realty 5-4 when Van Swanson produced a two-run double in the ninth inning.

Hartz overcame a triple play and a Mike Kosel home run to beat Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. 13-4.

Division IV

A first place tie developed in Division IV Thursday when season-long leader Jean Junction-Rundell Electric could manage no better than a doubleheader split in beating Lon's Restaurant & Pub 11-4 but losing to Tip & Ring 8-3.

Wilson Brothers Co. became a co-leader in Division IV with a 12-5 triumph over the TRF Aggies as Rod Knutson homered.

Smith & Holthusen handled Kmart 17-2.

Division II

Idle since June 29, Division II teams finally get back into play Tuesday, highlighted by a game involving The Get-A-Way and Bridgeman's, two of the four teams that are separated by just one game atop the tight eight-team standings.

TRF Legion Resuming NW League Play

Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team returns to Northwest League action this week with 7 p.m. games at Roseau Tuesday and at Warroad Thursday. Thief River Falls is 4-0 in league play, but hasn't played a Northwest League game since June 26.

Red Lake Falls, after snapping Thief River Falls' season-opening five-game winning streak by a 2-1 score six days earlier, was a 9-4 loser in a rematch Thursday at Red Lake Falls.

The 6-1 Thief River Falls record stayed intact when a Thief River Falls-Crookston game was rained out for the second time.

Monda Pederson, daughter of Mrs. Yvonne Pederson of Thief River Falls, will attend the Concordia college Norwegian language village near Bemidji July 9-21. It will be Mona's fifth year at the language village.

Sponsored by Concordia college, the language villages introduce young people to a foreign culture at an informal lake setting in Minnesota specially designed to recreate the atmosphere of the adopted country. Through the use of passports, foreign currency and names, each villager experiences a lifestyle similar to that of France, Germany, Norway, Russia, Spain, Sweden or Finland.

Students ages eight to 18 from more than 40 states and Canada attend the language villages each summer, according to Odell Bjerkness, director of the program. No previous language experience is necessary since villagers are grouped according to ability.

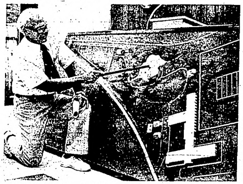
MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY



PARK DEVELOPMENT for use by senior citizens and their families is the objective of a project initiated and primarily financed by Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Swenson of Thief River Falls. Swenson explained the park now being developed at a meeting of residents of Valley home and the Skylite apartments at 415 South Arnold Tuesday at Valley home. Located adjacent to Valley home property, the park will contain about seven acres of land with surfaced walkways providing access to all areas by everyone, including those will wheelchairs or walking aids. The pond indicated on a scale model of the development by Swenson in the above photo will be stocked with geese and ducks for visitors to watch and feed. The area at the extreme left of the model will be an enclosure for a few farm animals.

Swenson Reviews Park Development

Development of a seven-acre park for use by community senior citizens and their families was reviewed by Lowell Swenson at a gathering of residents of Valley home and Skylite apartments Tuesday afternoon at Valley home. Site work on the project is now well underway with completion projected for next spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Swenson purchased the land and provided funding for site development and facilities on the tract located south and west of Valley home between highway 32 and the Burlington Northern railroad tracks. It is being designed and constructed with a view toward senior citizen involvement and activity.

"Our intention is to create a park which will be attractive to retired people and their families and where they can feel comfortable and secure at any time," Swenson said at his presentation Tuesday. "It is not intended for use by young people unless they want to take grandpa or grandma or some other older friend or relative on an outing."

The Swensons purchased the property from the Balvin Implement company and acquired title early this year. Through the cooperation of the Balvins, however, some work was able to be done last year, including filling of the ditch along the railroad right of way and moving of several large pine trees.

Using a model prepared by employees at Arctic Enterprises, Swenson showed the senior citizens in attendance how the area is to be developed. The entire site is being contoured to create a pleasing appearance and improve drainage. A large, shallow pond will be a focal point of the park and will be stocked with ducks and geese. There will be approximately half a mile of surfaced walkways which will be five feet wide to permit easy use by persons in wheelchairs or using walking aids.

The Balvin Implement building is being remodeled by the carpentry department of the area vocational-technical institute to serve as a hobby and craft shop area. In it senior citizens will be able to work on larger woodworking and painting projects not possible in smaller craft shops within nursing home settings.

New construction will include a gazebo with 22-foot diameter and combination windows to extend seasonal use, a band shell with sound and lighting equipment for local concerts, a walking

County Begins St. Hilaire Condemnation

Condemnaton proceedings will be commenced by Pennington county to acquire lands needed for construction of the south St. Hilaire bridge and for a road project on CSAH3 following the passage of resolutions by the Pennington county board in a regular meeting Monday, July 9.

Properties owned by Doug Hehnert and John Swenson, totaling less than ¾ of an acre, must be purchased on the east end of the planned St. Hilaire birdge. Bob Stone, appraiser from Crookston, was engaged to appraise the right of way needed and county attorney Dave Lin was instructed to begin condemnation proceedings.

Three parcels of land are involved in the proposed project on CSAH3 (River Valley Road). The road will be rebuilt and widened as a part of the county's five-year road program and additional right of way is required.

A delegation from Black River township appeared before the board to discuss a drainage problem in county ditch 76 which drains east into the Red Lake river. Present were Alice Pollick, Glenn Carlson, Ron McKercher and Everette Flesche who claimed that when the ditch cleaning was undertaken on No. 76 in 1977 to assess the feasibility of its use in conjunction with the sanitary landfill being proposed in the area, the cleaning was not completed all the way to the outlet. As a result, the Black River residents stated, portions of their fields had been flooded and they had experienced considerable crop damage and would begin litigation against the county to collect damages unless the problem was alleviated.

After some discussion, the board agreed to program cleaning and repair of the ditch from the river west until

School Board Reelects Officers For 1979-1980

Reorganizational meeting of the Thief River Falls board of education Monday involved the seating of two new board members and reelection of four officers to one-year terms. The meeting followed an afternoon information and discussion session on school district facilities, covered in another story in this issue.

Seated on the board to begin their three-year terms were Wally Grovum and Ken Wiebolt, elected earlier this year at the annual school election to succeed Clyde Christensen and Wallace Sparby. They have been attending meetings in an ex-officio capacity since their election.

Reelected board chairman was Larry McDowell. Other officers reelected include Harry Sjulson, vice chairman; Kenneth Murphy, clerk; and Robert Sorvig, treasurer. Seventh member of the board is Maynard Wedul.

Much of the business session involved transaction of annual items in connection with the board reorganization. Salaries were set at the same amount as last year and include $3,000 annually for chairman, $2,800 for clerk, $2,600 for treasurer and $2,400 for other board members.

Northern state bank and First Northwestern state bank were designated as official depositories for district funds, the Times was designated the official newspaper and John Novacek was reappointed school board attorney.

Time and place of regular board meetings were set at 8 p.m. on the second and fourth Mondays of each month at the school district service center. Designation of an accounting firm was tabled pending study of proposals from more than one firm. Treasurer's bond was set at $25,000, the same as last year.

Committee assignments made by the chairman included the following: Ken Wiebolt, center school governing board; Larry McDowell, chamber of commerce board; Bob Sorvig, Minnesota state high school league; Wally Grovum, city planning commission; Maynard Wedul, Agassiz health planning council; Harry Sjulson, city, county and school coordinating committee; Ken Murphy,

Former Roseau Man Is Killed

Knute F. Grahn, 76, of Norwalk, Calif., and formerly of Roseau, was killed in a two vehicle accident Monday about 11:10 a.m. in the city of Greenbush.

Grahn was reportedly driving a compact car east out of Greenbush on highway 11 and making a left turn to go north when struck by a 4-wheel drive pickup driven by James Robert Larson, 31, of Roseau. The Larson vehicle was traveling south on highway 11 where it joins highway 32 and where signs permit through traffic.

Response Positive At Project Hearing

Favorable comments considerably outweighed the negative when the Thief River Falls city council conducted a hearing Monday on a parking project being proposed by the downtown development committee (DDC). Of approximately 125 in attendance to hear the DDC's presentation, the majority were from within the 800,000 square foot district of benefit where property owners will be assessed for the majority of the project cost.

The hearing was opened by Mayor Bob Carlson who indicated that he had always supported a strong downtown and that unless Thief River Falls met the needs of the downtown area, the result might be a deteriorated downtown business district such as been the fate of numerous other cities. Carlson stated that the downtown and the strip area compliment each other and that a downtown parking project would be an asset to all citizens.

Bulk of the meeting was conducted by John Larson, ~~chairman of~~ the DDC, who outlined the history of the parking project and quoted from a 1973 comprehensive plan update which estimated that there was a need for an additional 110 parking stalls in downtown Thief River Falls at that time. Present needs are estimated at 230. Larson also reviewed the boundaries for the assessment district, the scope of the proposed project, the methods employed by the DDC to arrive at a fair and equitable formula and the method of assessment.

The project being proposed would add up to 200 additional parking stalls to the downtown area at a cost of approximately $500,000. The city would provide inkind services totaling less than $66,000 which would include demolition, excavating, backfill and striping. Land acquisition and surfacing costs would be assessed back to property owners within the 800,000 square foot district. Assessments to the businesses would be determined by a formula which takes into consideration square footage, use, benefit and private parking of a business.

Four categories of benefit are proposed by the DDC: 1) retail and financial, 2) food and beverage, 3) public, office and service, and professional, and 4) wholesale, processing and manufacturing. The businesses in the categories would be assessed on a 100 per cent, 90 per cent, 70 per cent and 50 per cent basis, respectively, paying 81 cents, 72 cents, 57 cents and 40.5 cents per square foot of business space they have, respectively. Parking credit of 40.5 cents per square foot would be given and storage credits of one-half of the proposed assessments according to the classification of the business would be given.

Piano Is Brenda Ohlhauser Talent

(This is the sixth in a series of interviews with candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title at the Jaycee Aquacade pageant. The official Miss America preliminary event will be held July 28 at 8 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium.)

Seven and one-half years of studying piano will come into play July 28 for Brenda Ohlhauser of Thief River Falls when she performs in the talent competition of the Miss Thief River Falls pageant. Her selection for talent competition is the lively "Twelfth Street Rag".

Brenda is the 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ohlhauser and she is a 1979 graduate of Lincoln high school. She is five feet five inches tall, weighs 118 pounds, has brown hair and brown eyes.

While a student at Lincoln high school Brenda was a member of the school choir for two years, student senate for two years, Prowlins dance team for three years, junior class officer, member of the annual staff, member of the distributive education clubs of America (DECA), served on the model office advisory committee and the national student advisory committee.

While she was active in extra-curricular areas, she didn't neglect her scholastic studies, graduating sixth in the class and being a member of the national honor society and the society of distinguished American high school students.

Much of her spare time interest has involved the piano. She saved money from several years of work and purchased her own piano which she has in the Ohlhauser home. She has received outstanding ratings in piano sight reading competition where a judge gives

School Board Views Five Alternatives

School district enrollment, class structure and existing building facilities were major factors considered in developing five alternatives presented to the School District 564 board of education Monday afternoon by Ken Skold of the Armstrong, Torseth, Skold and Rydeen (ATSR) architectural and engineering firm.

The board of education has undertaken studies and evaluation with a view toward solving some of the facilities problems being faced by the district. In a period of declining enrollment, the school district finds some of its facilities to be in a deteriorated condition due to age and in nonconformance with modern accepted standards in several areas.

Skold pointed out for the board Monday that five alternatives developed by his company at the direction of the board were prepared from several existing reports as well as visits to all of the school buildings in the district. Additional input was received, he said, from Fred Christiansen, director of school planning for the state department of education.

Enrollment figures used in the preparation of alternatives are based on projections to 1983. Class structure used was primarily with grades K-5 on the elementary level, 6-8 on the middle school level and 9-12 on the high school level; K-5, 6-9 and 10-12; or K-6, 7-9 and 10-12.

Skold also emphasized that anticipated cost figures used in the alternative proposals were not based on detailed studies and should be subject to future verification. Impact of the handicapped code, life safety code and energy code should also be considered in greater detail for the final alternative selected, he said.

Enrollment which has been declining is projected in the ATSR study to increase slightly from 2,926 in 1979 to 3,046 in 1980, 3,035 in 1981, 3,051 in 1982 and 3,024 in 1983.

First alternative projected by Skold would be for remodeling of existing elementary schools at an estimated cost of $425,000, remodel Franklin middle school and build an addition of 12,500 square feet to Lincoln high school to replace 1910 and 1919 buildings. Cost of addition is projected at $625,000 and remodeling of existing 1938 and 1956 structures at $297,500. Eliminating any new construction at Lincoln and remodeling all existing buildings is estimated to cost $728,000.

Second alternative would be for the same elementary school remodeling, build an addition of 35,000 square feet to Franklin school ($1,750,000) and remodel existing Lincoln high school facilities. Under this proposal, grades 6, 7, 8 and 9 would attend the Franklin complex.

Third alternative would be to build a 20,000 square foot addition to Washington elementary school ($900,000), remodel existing elementary schools, remodel Franklin and Mark Twain schools and Lincoln high school.

Fourth alternative would be to remodel existing elementary schools and Franklin school, remodel Lincoln to serve as a middle school and build a new senior high school for 1,200 students in grades 9-12 at an estimated cost of $5,500,000 for 110,000 square feet of space.

Fifth alternative is remodeling of existing

WHICH WAY TO GO with facility needs in the Thief River Falls school district is a problem being faced by the local board of education. Alternatives to be considered range from allowing nature to take its course to major new construction. To be better prepared to make proper decisions and be aware of potential solutions to problems, the board has obtained independent professional assistance and suggestions. Information obtained and possible actions to be followed were outlined for the board Monday afternoon.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Flattum And Musselman Vows Exchanged Here

Miss Debra Lynn Flattum and David John Musselman, both of Lynchburg, Va., exchanged marriage vows recently in Thief River Falls at an evening candlelight service at the Evangelical Free church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Morris Flattum of this city and Rev. and Mrs. W. Bruce Musselman of Constantine, Mich.

Officiating at the double-ring ceremony were Rev. Carlton Smith, Chesapeake, Va., and the groom's father. Organist was Jerry Joringdal. He played the Wagner's "Wedding March" for the processional and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" from "Midsummer Nights' Dream," for the recessional. During the ceremony, which included the lighting of the unity candle, David Flattum of Grand Forks, N.D., brother of the bride, sang "Wedding Song," and Bruce Musselman, Ohio, brother of the groom, sang "Like a Shepherd Lead Us." As the bride and groom left the chancel, they paused and presented their mothers with long-stemmed red roses.

Forming the chancel setting were white wrought-iron candelabra featuring seven hurricane lamps with pink candles and pink satin bows. Matching candles and bows marked the pews along the center aisle.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a floor length gown of white organza trimmed with Cantilly lace, seed pearls and iridescents. The fitted bodice was styled with a sheer yoke, edged with lace, a mandarin lace collar, and long, tapered sleeves with lace and organza inserts. The redingote-styled bouffant skirt with a front crystal pleated insert, was edged with Chantilly lace. Vertical bands of matching lace enhanced the chapel-length train. Her mantilla headpiece embroidered with pearls and iridescents, topped her veil of bridal illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses and pixie carnations, stephanotis and trailing ivy.

Maid of honor was Debra Kay Shumway of Texas. Other attendants were Mrs. Jerome Bauer of Minot, N.D.; and Julie Worner of Duluth. All are close friends of the bride. They were identical, floor-length gowns of light blue sata-glo qiana knit featuring full skirts, bishop sleeves, and scooped necklines with hooded headpieces trimmed with marabou. They carried colonial bouquets of pink miniature carnations and white daisy poms. Their white gold bracelets were gifts from the bride.

Wearing a similar gown and carrying a white wicker basket filled with pink Sweetheart roses, and miniature carnations, accented with stephanotis and ivy, was the flower girl, Robyn Jenkins, a friend of the bride. Her ID bracelet was a gift from the bride. The rings were carried by James Wagner, Kenmare, N.D., a cousin of the bride. Like the men of the wedding party, he wore a white Seville tuxedo with a light blue ruffled shirt, a white bow tie and a boutonniere featuring a pink sweetheart rose and babies' breath. He also wore an ID bracelet, a gift from the bride.

The groom was attired in a white tuxedo with tails, white ruffled shirt and a pink Sweetheart rose boutonniere complemented by stephanotis.

Best man was Randy Jenkins of South Carolina, a friend of the couple. Groomsmen were David Flattum, Grand Forks, a brother of the bride, and Bruce Musselman of Ohio, a brother of the groom. The ushers, who were attired in black tuxedos with blue shirts, were Jerome Bauer, Minot, N.D., a friend of the bride, and Glen Pizor of Lynchburg, Va., a friend of the groom.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Flattum selected an off-white knit floor-length gown with jewel neckline, topped by a pleated floor-length cape of chiffon floral print in tones of blue, rose, gold and greens. Her opal earrings were a gift from the bride. The mother of the groom wore an off-white knit floor-length gown fashioned with a high neckline, long sleeves and a pleated skirt trimmed with a pleated ruffle. Their corsages were cymbidium orchids.

Honor guest was the bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Barb Wagner of Kenmare, N.D. She wore an aqua Qiana knit floor-length gown complemented with fine lace at the neckline and down the sleeves. Her straight skirt was belted at the natural waistline. Her corsage was a cymbidium orchid, as was the corsage worn by the groom's only sister, Mrs. John Buerer, a missionary in Hong Kong; and the bride's personal attendant, Renae Twistol of Mora. Other special guests were Paul Flattum, Chesapeake, Va., uncle of the bride, and Mrs. James Wagner, Kenmare, N.D., aunt of the bride.

A reception in the church parlors followed. For the occasion, the dining area was decorated with pink and white streamers by Arlyce and Renae Twistol. Vases filled with pink and white flowers graced the tables. Complementing the registery table was a pink tablecloth with a white lace overlay.

Centering the serving table was a three-tiered chocolate and white wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with pink roses and delicate string work. Between the tall filigreed pillars that supported the upper tiers was a lighted flowing water fountain. A trio of white filigreed bells filled with pink and white roses and backed by a lace trimmed heart, topped the cake. At the base were two heart-shaped cakes inscribed with the names of the bride and groom. The cake was baked and decorated by Mrs. Don Rupprecht, who also baked and decorated the Kransekake, the traditional Scandinavian wedding cake, which was served with the punch.

Host and hostess at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Twistol. Mrs. Gerald Owen registered the guests as Carrie Worner and Becky Bruggeman served the punch. At the gift table were Mrs. Marty Collins and Mrs. Richard Nordhagen. The gift bearers were Lance Worner and Baelynn Twistol. All are friends of the bride.

The wedding cake was cut and served by Mrs. Claire Musselman, Ohio, an aunt of the groom, and Mrs. Bob Storhaug, a friend of the bride. At the coffee service were the bride's college roommates, Dawana Blank and Karen Noffsinger, both of Lynchburg.

Waitresses were Julie Wagner, Kenmare, N.D., a cousin of the bride, Renelle Twistol and Stacy Kjellberg, friendso of the bride. Mrs. Lillian Rux and Mrs. Ida Brouse catered the reception.

For traveling to a honeymoon resort at Pocono Mountains in Pennsylvania, the bride wore an off-white circular skirt and lavender blouse trimmed in off-white lace.

Following the wedding rehearsal, the groom's parents hosted a turkey dinner for 30 guests at Florence's banquet room.

The bride is a 1973 graduate of Lincoln high school and spent half a year at Bemidji State university before entering the Armed Forces. After completing three years in the service, she enrolled at Liberty Baptist college, Lynchburg, Va., where she will be a junior. The groom is a 1969 graduate of Bridgeport high school, Saginaw, Mich., and received his bachelor of science degree in piano at Liberty Baptist college and his Master of Divinity degree from Liberty Baptist Seminary. He is a sacred concert pianist. The couple will be making their home in Lynchburg, Va.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was honored at a personal shower given by Kathy Hughes, a pre-wedding party given by Charles and Kathy Hughes, both at Lynchburg, and a shower in Thief River Falls hosted by Arlys and Renae Twistol. Photo Neland Studio.

Of their 19 grandchildren, 16 were present.

Also present was Mrs. Gene Sevre, Myhrer's sister, who served as one of the attendants at the wedding 50 years ago.

When the couple and their attendant arrived, they were presented with corsages and a boutonniere and were escorted to the front pews by Myhrers' four sons as the traditional wedding march was played. Organist was Phyllis Myhrer, daughter-in-law, and Judy Larson, a granddaughter, was pianist.

For the program that followed, Lester Myhrer served as master of ceremonies. He welcomed the guests and gave a brief resume of the couple's married life. Special tributes were given by the sons and daughter; and as the "Four Flat Rails and Sis" they sang "I've Been Working on the Railroad."

Also paying tribute to the couple were Myhrer's brother, Albert, who told of their early years; George Hannestad, who presented the couple with a gift from the church; and Mrs. Rema Hanestad, who represented the Mission Circle.

Vocal selections were by Jamie Myhrer, a grandchild, who sang, "Jesus Loves Me;" Norris Trockmann and Laurie, who sang, "How Great Thou Art," and a quartette composed of Linda Hyhrer and the Donald Myhrer children with Phyllis Myhrer as accompanist. A reading, "What Is a Marriage," was given by Marlene Owens. Following words of appreciation by the honnored couple, the program concluded with "The Happy Anniversary Song," by the relatives and friends, and the benediction and grace, led by Albert Myhrer.

For the reception that followed the church parlor was decorated with gold and white streamers, gold bells and a Happy Anniversary banner. Among the floral arrangements was a wheelborrow centerpiece filled with flowers and garden tools, corresponding with the tools of the Myhrers' truck garden trade. The centerpiece was a gift from Myhrer's cousins and their families.

Also adding interest was a display of family pictures.

Centering the serving table was a four-tiered anniversary cake baked and decorated by the couple's niece, Mrs. Donald Rupprecht. At the base of the cake was a flowing water fountain and two heart-shaped cakes. It was cut by Mrs. Dean Swick and served by Mrs. Norris Trochamnn. Mrs. Kenneth Kuehn and Mrs. Elvira Taggart poured the coffee.

Karen and Aimee Myhrer presided at the gift table; Barbara Myhrer distributed the thank-you notes, Jody Larson was at the guest book and Susan and Cindy Owens ladled the punch bowl. All are granddaughters of the couple.

Assisting in the kitchen were Mrs. Victor Ranstrom, Mrs. Clarence Molskness, Mrs. Victor Nolte, Linda Bernardson and Laurie Trochmann.

About 275 relatives and friends attended the open house. They were from New Carrollton, Md.; San Jose, Calif.; Fargo and Grand Forks, N.D.; Coon Rapids, Apple Valley, Zimmerman, Red Wing, Minneapolis, Euclid, East Grand Forks, Ely, Anoka, Bemidji, Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Leonard, Halstad, Karlstad, St. Hilaire, Rosewood, Newfolden and the Thief River Falls area.

Among the many congratulations received were greetings from President and Mrs. Carter, Governor Quie, Senator Marv Hanson, and a former pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Ray Gosden, who are serving as missionaries in Japan.

Following the reception, the couple were chauffeured through the city in a car decorated with streamers and tin cans by the children and grandchildren. Charivaring relatives and friends followed.

Council Extends Moratorium For Another 3 Years

Moratorium on bonding for improvements in new subdivisions was extended for an additional three-year period when the Thief River Falls city council met in a regular session Tuesday, July 10. Resolution to extend the moratorium passed in a five to one vote with alderman Goodrich dissenting and aldermen Penning and Reierson absent.

Alderman at large, Goodrich indicated that he felt that before action was taken the matter should be discussed with developers who might be affected. It was his contention that although community growth had not been adversely affected during the three-year moratorium which went into effect in 1976, extending the moratorium an additional three years might cause development to stagnate.

Third ward alderman Wysoski, who introduced the motion to extend the moratorium, stated that the original moratorium had been put into effect because the city's bonded indebtedness had surpassed $10,000,000. Although it was reduced to $9,065,000 at the end of 1978 with an additional 585,000 to be paid off in 1979, street projects and the possible parking project were coming up, and by the end of 1979 Thief River Falls' bonded indebtedness would again approach the $10,000,000 mark.

In other business, council members were informed that the policy of the Thief River Falls law enforcement personnel in regard to Quie's executive order on minimum gas purchase would be one of monitoring but not enforcement. A letter from chief of police Ken Froschheiser indicated that local officers were instructed to accept complaints and forward them to the Minnesota energy office where decisions regarding prosecution will be made.

At the request of the Pennington county safety council the city council voted to instruct the superintendent of utilities to install a yield sign on 2nd St. at the intersection with Brooks Ave. The sign will require eastbound traffic on 2nd St. to yield to through traffic on Brooks.

Safety council board also submitted a recommendation that a feasibility study be completed on the construction of a frontage road on the east side of highway 59 south from 1st St. to the Country Inn motel. Safety council representative Mark Larson was informed that city engineer Doug Stewart had previously been instructed to discuss the safety problem on highway 59 with Cliff Larson of the MN-DOT staff and outline workable solutions.

At the recommendation of the park board daily campground fees for the city facility were adjusted to $1.50 for no facilities, $3 for electrical hookup and $5 for water, sewer and electrical hookup; and the council agreed to accept cash in lieu of land for the Roger Gage property plat. The cash contribution will be $125 in lieu of approximately two acres.

A resolution was passed by the council asking that the port of entry on highway 59 be kept open from 8 a.m. to 12 midnight during the winter and be open 24 hours during the summer months. Thief River Falls is one of five highway 59 cities to pass such a resolution.

Approval was given for payment of expenses for Paul Ihle of the city attorney's office to attend a DWI seminar in Minneapolis and for city finance officer Roger DeLap to attend a seminar on levy limits in St. Paul.

City council members denied a request by Barbara Massey to set up a display for sale of items on city property; approved the replacement of Mark Shand, in a CETA position, by Mick Delorme; and granted a variance to Kreuter Manufacturing allowing construction of a building within three feet of the side of a corner lot line with a zero setback from the street.

History Given At Radniecki And Vattendahl Meet

An hour-long slide, tape and movie presentation, prepared and given by Regene Radniecki of Minneapolis, highlighted the Radniecki-Vatendahl family reunion held June 30-July 1, at Oklee.

The presentation, given on Sunday, July 1, at St. Frances Zavier Catholic church at Oklee featured over 100 years of the Radniecki-Vatendahl family history and required over 1,000 hours of preprartion. It traced the history of Grandpa Antoin Radniecki of Poland and Grandma Vattendahl of Norway, their journeys to America and especially the lives of John Radniecki and Emma Vattendahl, before and after their marriage. The old movies, which she had reproduced from those taken by John Radniecki's brother, depicted the early lives of the J.L. Radniecki children and the old-home-place where they lived. Included were scenes of harvesting and haying, taken about 45 years ago, posed portraits and candid shots, and family events, showing both family gatherings and those recording events in the lives of the individuals.

During the presentation, Regene Radniecki gave the history of each of the Radniecki children: Ann, Helen, Catherine, Casmir, Al, Stanley, Roman, Jack, Virgil and Richard, and showed pictures of each of their children, and their children's children.

The program, which followed a noon dinner, also included a tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Sam (Ann Radniecki) Graimes of Jacksonville, Fla., on their 50th wedding anniversary. Two vocal selections: "Coming Home," and "Follow Me," were sung in their honor by Gayle Radniecki, who played her own guitar accompaniment, assisted by Paula Radniecki. Dick Radniecki presented the honored couple with a pair of golden goblets, a gift from their brothers and sisters, and proposed the toast in their honor.

For the reception that followed, the anniversary cake baked by Mrs. Stanley Radniecki was cut and served by Jean Grimes Marshall of Jacksonville, Fla. At the silver coffee service were Mrs. Helen Radniecki Frank and Mrs. Catherine Radniecki Jorgenson. During the social hour, relatives expressed their appreciation to Regene Radniecki for bringing the family history to the reunion.

Those attending the two-day reunion were from California, Washington, Wisconsin, Montana, Utah, Flaorida, Illinois, and North Dakota. Those present from Minnesota were from Minneapolis, St. Paul, East Grand Forks, Thief River Falls, Staples, Aurora, Breckenridge, Mankato, Waseca, Crookston, Red Lake Falls, Twin Valley, Verndale, Erskine, Brainerd, Climax and Oklee.

The previous day, about 200 relatives gathered at the Virgil Radniecki farm for a picnic supper highlighted by a pig roast. The dessert was a decorated anniversary cake honoring the 50th wedding anniversaries of the Sam Grimes of Jacksonville, Fla., and Mr. and Mrs. Jake (Vi Sunsdahl) Stauss of East Grand Forks.

Her term as national president is for two years.

The National WMF was held in conjunction with the Association's 17th annual conference with president Rev. Richard Snipstead, Minneapolis, presiding. Elected to serve as vice president of the Association was Rev. David C. Molstre, Dickinson, N.D., and formerly of Thief River Falls. Stanley Holmass, Newfolden, was reelected to the schools corporation for a five-year term.

At the conference, Rev. Eugene Enderlein of this city, chairman of the board of world missions, announced the expansion of the AFLC world mission program into Mexico and India. A seminary extension program will be developed in Brazil. It was also noted that six men had been ordained into the ministry this summer, a new congregation had been added at Brandon, that Rev. Kenneth Pentti of Michigan had been appointed as evangelist and Ernest Miedema, Valley City, N.D., had accepted the position of director of development, specializing in legacy and annuity counselling.

The delegates adopted a budget of $582,237 for the 1980-81 year. In addition, the association will aid in establishing a new congregation at Aberdeen, S.D., and will began work at Vancouver, Wash. The delegates also authorized the purchase of the former Air Force radar base, an 80-acre site near Osceola, Wis., as a future retreat, Bible camp and retirement center.

Local residents who attended the conference, in addition to Rev. and Mrs. Enderlein, were Judith Wold, parish education secretary of the church body, Sheldon Mortrud, a member of the coordinating committee, the governing body of the AFLC, and Mrs. Mortrud.

Weatherization Program Gets More Funding

Senators Dave Durenberger and Rudy Boschwitz announced today that Minnesota's department of economic security has received a $9,079,900 grant from the U.S. department of energy.

The funds will be used to finance the weatherization assistance program that was established in 1977. Administered locally by community action agencies, it helps low-income persons keep fuel costs at a minimum by providing funds to adequately weatherize their homes.

This year's funding marks a three-fold increase in allocations for the state wide program.

For further information, contact the neighborhood community action agency, or the department of economic security at (612) 296-5740.

Swenson Gives Review Of Park By Valley Home

bridge and a barn to house some farm animals which will be fenced in the extreme south portion of the park. Six street lights will be installed to make the area easily accessible at night. A small playground will appeal to youngsters who come to visit with grandparents and other older family members.

Mervin Prestebak construction is doing the site work and city involvement has been solicited for installation of lighting and irrigation system. Later participation by county 4-H clubs is expected to help maintain the animal exhibits and perhaps floral areas and individual gardens.

"Cooperation by many, many people in getting the project underway has been tremendous," Swenson said. "I'm sure that if everyone who has helped and who is offering free services would charge for their assistance, the project would exceed $250,000. As it is, we expect to get by for about half that amount."

Swenson encouraged those in attendance Tuesday to get out and watch the project develop and to become involved with their thoughts and ideas. He said that concrete walkways may be started as early as next week in the area adjacent to Valley home and that he hoped all the work would be done — with the exception of some plantings which could be damaged by winter weather — by snowfall this year.

He said that the city has agreed to maintain the grounds once the park area has been completed, and he foresees involvement by a number of local groups in different phases of activity in the area. Future development will be accomplished in accordance with demonstrated needs and desires for the area.

contestants music they have not previously seen and they are expected to play it correctly the first time through.

Brenda has also served as accompanist for Sunday school and church choirs and this summer will be receiving her diploma for music through the Sherwood music school in Chicago, Ill. She also recently paired with her boy friend to win two mixed doubles eight-ball tournaments.

In the spring of 1978 Brenda spent a week in Washington, D.C., participating in the Washington workshop program. She studied U.S. government and had personal sessions with Vice President Walter Mondale, Sen. Muriel Humphrey, Congressman Arlan Stangeland, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland and Hodding Carter and Shirley Chisholm of President Carter's staff. The group was present for an ABC news taping with Tim O'Brien and had dinner with the ambassador to the United States from Sweden.

When not studying, playing piano or shooting pool, Brenda likes to sew and work on craft projects. This fall she will be enrolled in the legal secretarial course at the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute and would also like to receive an introduction to data processing. While attending AVTI she will also be taking night classes for accounting.

Response To Parking Plan Seems Positive

Larson indicated that at this time the committee has options on the Sjoberg business and lot, the former Northland Electronics building, the old Lind motor building and a lot owned by Gene Beito across from the former Paint and Glass building. Other areas are still being considered by the committee, he stated.

Questions were raised by the audience regarding the way the assessment would be handled, whether or not the proposed purchases would alleviate the parking problem near Lincoln high school, what type of controls would be used in the lots and whether or not they would be restricted to two-hour parking. In response it was explained that the assessments would be handled like any other assessment with a lump sum payment allowed or payback over a period of 10 to 12 years; that the committee was considering the purchase of site B which would aid the high school parking problem, and that the lots would have both employee (unrestricted) and consumer (restricted) parking.

Opposition to the proposed project was raised by Ev Ault of Northland Foods; Ed Turenne, owner of Rex Cafe and investor in Country Kitchen; Gary Carlson, representing Fred's Bar; and Mik Gjovik, owner of Woodland Construction. Main contention of the opposition was that public costs, including the city's contribution, assessments to the school, county and hospital, and maintenance costs to the city, were too high. They felt a bigger portion of the costs should be born by the businessmen and that some limit should be put on future maintenance costs.

Among those speaking in favor of the project were Ormond Johnson, representing the American Legion; Bill Duckworth, manager of J.C. Penney's; Don Enright, owner of the Ben Franklin store; Walt Kaisler, chiropractor; Cal Foss, developer of new mini-mall in Thief River Falls; George Schwartz of the chamber of commerce; and Web Maves.

Duckworth commented that public cost would be less than $4 annual per family and that the citizens are getting a bargain in comparison to places like the cities where you pay $4 a day.

Mayor Carlson closed the hearing, indicating that a decision will be made on the project by the city council at its July 24 meeting. Council will also meet in an adjourned session at 8:30 p.m. Monday, July 16, to discuss the project again with the DDC.

School Board Reelects All Old Officers

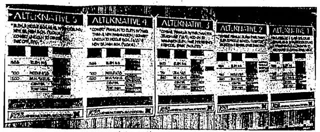
professional growth committees for K-12 and AVTI; Harry Sjulson, educational planning task force; Larry McDowell, Northwestern hospital task force; and Bob Sorvig, regional interdistrict council.

Resignation of Ellsworth Senum as lead mechanic effective July 13 was accepted and Douglas Engstrom was employed as summer school music instructor. Lane change for Howard Rokke, AVTI instructor, was approved from BS 30 to BS 45. Resignation of Jeffrey Lannoye from the position of custodial maintenance was accepted.

All bids for demolition and related work on the Old Washington school building and permanent shoring of trusses at Knox elementary school were rejected and the projects will be readvertised with bids to be opened July 23. Bids were also authorized to be received for remodeling of the old AVTI carpentry shop.

Approval was given to the purchase of lots 18 and 19 south of Lincoln school for the combined purchase price of $2,575. Low bids were accepted for AVTI department materials with the following totals listed: Cosmetology, $11,365; audio communications, $4,801; auto mechanics, $20,457; farm operation and management, $8,986; and carpentry, $17,522.

Information received by the board from Clyde E. Allen Jr., commissioner of revenue, lists the 1978 adjusted assessed value of all property in school district 564 at $69,244,278. This is the certified figure on which 1978 taxes payable in 1979 will be assessed.



POSSIBLE ALTERNATIVES for the school board of District 564 in Thief River Falls as it faces the problem of aging facilities during a time of declining enrollment were outlined Monday afternoon by Ken Skold of the architectural and engineering firm of Armstrong, Torseth, Skold and Rydeen, Inc. (ATSR).

The visual aid charts mounted on the wall at the school district service center illustrated information compiled in a booklet prepared by the ATSR staff and entitled "Physical Needs Alternatives Analysis". Skold used the charts in outlining the studies made by his company and the rationale used in consideration of each alternative.

5 Alternatives Are Viewed By School Board elementary schools (as in Alternative 1), remodel Franklin middle school and build new high school (as in Alternative 4).

With each of the alternatives above the architect explained how changes would affect the district in regard to enrollment (number of students in each facility) and other cost saving, space saving or additional expense. Summaries given above are condensed extensively from the report given.

"The final alternative selected will have an impact on facility improvements for the immediate and long range plans of the district," Skold said in summation. "The physical improvements required for the first phase of any of the alternatives can not be accomplished without advanced planning and construction or remodeling time.

". . .Construction cost indexes have historically shown cost increases for each year since 1941. These increases have averaged about 10 per cent per year and should be taken into consideration in the analysis of alternatives and in projecting time schedules for construction or remodeling."

The board will next meet with the district's principals to discuss the alternatives with a view toward scholastic program.

County Begins St. Hilaire Condemnation

available funds were expended. The project is expected to commence within four weeks.

Present to request the inclusion of county road No. 80 in the five-year county road improvement plan were three St. Hilaire representatives, Robert Kraemer, Bob Miller and Nerdeen Grove. The group presented the board with a petition containing 95 signatures asking that the road be improved. County road No. 80 runs from highway 59 in the northwest corner of section 13 in Rocksbury township (the Smiley bridge corner) south and the group requested improvements along a four-mile stretch which is expected to receive heavy traffic as a result of the construction of a grain elevator in Hazel. The board indicated it would consider the matter and attempt to fit the improvements into the five-year plan.

A group of highway department personnel who appeared before the board to request a wage adjustment were informed that it was not the policy of the board to make adjustments in mid-year.

In other business, the board authorized the sheriff to purchase two units of radar with the understanding that the cost would be shared on a 50-50 basis with the state; authorized final payment of $38,460.69 for the 1978 graveling contract with Thorson, Inc. of Bemidji; and instructed the auditor to draft a letter approving the rural home renovation program proposed by Inter County Community Council, Inc. of Oklee.

Uranium Survey Slated In Area

Well water and stream sediment sampling survey team will be in the western Minnesota and eastern North Dakota areas during the next several weeks as part of a national effort to assess United States uranium resources. The data collected from several Minnesota and North Dakota counties will be useful to local and state officials in understanding the overall water quality and the hydrological environment in the state.

Minnesota counties included in this survey are Kittson, Marshall, Roseau, Polk, Pennington, Norman, Mahnomen, Red Lake, Wilkin, Traverse, Grant, Otter Tail, Clay and Becker.

The survey is being carried out by B.C.I.-Geonetics Inc. of Laconia, N.H., for Union Carbide corporation's nuclear division (UCC-ND) at Oak Ridge, Tennessee. UCC-ND is a major contractor on the project for the department of energy (DOE). Donald Bohrman is the Union Carbide project geologist supervising this phase of the work, and Peter Smith is the field supervisor for B.C.I.-Geonetics.

Objective of the national uranium resource evaluation program is to complete a systematic survey of the nation's surface waters, groundwaters and stream sediments by 1983. Uranium is a very mobile element geochemically, and commonly is disseminated in varying degrees in rocks surrounding an occurrence.

Groundwaters and streams redistribute the uranium, which frequently results in high concentrations in water and in fine stream sediments outward and downstream for some distance from the source. The systematic sampling of the nation's streams is expected to provide evidence of uranium occurrences not currently known.

Overall management for the program is the responsibility of the Grand Junction, Colo., office of the department of energy. Union Carbide is responsible for surveys in 12 Central Plains states. Surveys in other states are being conducted by the Los Alamos Scientific laboratory and the Svannah river laboratory.

Water and stream sediment samples are being collected at various locations throughout the nation. The samples will be analyzed and the data plotted on maps. These maps will be available for public inspection at several locations, including the Colorado geological survey at Denver, and the technical library, Grand Junction office, department of energy, Grand Junction, Colo.

The hydrogeochemical survey is only one phase of the contract work already underway in Minnesota and North Dakota by the national uranium resource evaluation program. Contracts and agreements have been made by DOE with universities, private companies and state agencies to conduct other investigations pertaining to the uranium assessment program. The types of work include airborne radiometric surveys, geological and geochemical investigations and the development of geophysical technology.

New Forestry Director Is Named By DNR

A new director of the Department of Natural Resources division of forestry has been announced by commissioner Joseph Alexander.

Named to the post was Raymond B. Hitchcock, 37, an employee of the department since 1964 and formerly an assistant to the forestry director and supervisor of the division's forestry protection section.

He took over his new duties July 2.

Hitchcock is a native of Vermont and holds a B.S. degree in forestry from the University of Maine.

In addition to his recent post, which he has held since January, 1978, he served for three years as head of the forestry division's environmental protection section where he was in charge of wildfire protection on 22.8 million acres of state and private land.

It was during this period that Hitchcock directed the department's fire fighting effort in the severe drought years of 1975-76.

He has also served as an area forest supervisor, directing field operations throughout eight counties, and did extensive public relations work in the field of fire provention and law enforcement.

Hitchcock began work with the department as a forester trainee in June, 1964, and in 1965 was appointed district forester with fire protection responsibility for 200,000 acres of public and private forest and grass lands. His other dusites included providing forest management service to private land owners, supervision of road and trail construction and reacreation areas.

Form March, 1968 to January, 1971, he was an area staff forester responsible for management and development of 250,000 acres of state forest lands.

Hitchcock succeeds forestry director Rod Sando who resigned effective June 30.

Visitor Center Ready For Co. Fair At Warren

Eight store front units will be open in the new visitor center at the Marshall county fair, featuring craft and food items for sale by fair participants. The 80x160 foot historical center located directly east of the Landerville log cabin, Cook school and Alma church, forms the setting for a town square. This turn of the century re-created town is the staging area for the old time settlers fair (the mini-fair within the county fair).

In addition to the permanent historical buildings, there will be portable food booths and French, Slavic, Scandinavian and other nationality foods to sample. Besides the ethnic foods prepared by both individuals and groups, the Marshall county council on aging will serve beverages.

Organizing the craft and food fair are Nancy Solum and Phyllis Haynes who describe the early settler activities as..." a celebration of life typical of the pioneer period of our country from about 1880-1916." Both women are also involved with the restoration of the three historic buildings and construction of the new visitor center.

Nelder Broten and assistant Frank Armstrong will be resurrecting old farm machinery to have on display in the open-spanned area of the visitor center. On the final Sunday of the fair they will help round out the Centennial pageant directed by Anita Sue Prichard when they run their antique machines in front of the grandstand.

Hosting the old time settlers fair are board members of the Marshall county historical society and it's president, Neil Mattson. Since taking over the settlers fair, they have expanded their historical fairgrounds area by several acres, and they include local artists and craftspeople in operating the annual summer mini-fair.

"The new visitor center building is now a historical resource center for the entire county," says director Nancy Solum. "We welcome families to our old time festival and the fair. We have re-created a hotel, saloon, general store, print shop, millinery and barber shop to visit."

The settlers fair events also include a melodrama co-directed by Stan Beck and Mary Ann Bodell, both of whom acted in a fairtime production called "Prairie Christmas" two years ago.

Centennial buttons will be sold at the visitor center all four days of the fair, commemorating the 100th birthday of the county (1879-1979). It is suggested that people visit all of the historical units during the fair or after the fair when the units will remain open for research and tours. Golf carts will be provided as transportation for the elderly and handicapped.

Expect 1,500 Arts Exhibits At State Fair

Entry materials for the 1979 Minnesota state fair creative activities and fine arts competitions are now available through the competitive entry department in the fair's administration building.

An estimated 1,500 exhibitors will be competing for $5,100 in premiums in the creative activities department. Last year, over 4,200 items were entered. Categories this year include needlecraft; machine knitted articles; garment making; work of senior citizens; baking, canning; handicrafts including wood, metal, models, leather, weaving, home craft decorations, toys and dolls; and special exhibits featuring stamps, coins, postal cards and taxidermy. Entered items, with the exception of baked goods, will be accepted at the creative activities building from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. August 13-15, and 9 a.m. to noon August 16. Baked goods will be accepted from 9 to 11:30 a.m. August 20.

Creative activities entries will be displayed in the creative activities building during the state fair, August 23 through September 3, except work of senior citizens, which will be on display in the senior citizens building.

State fair art show will be a showcase for Minnesota's finest work. From an estimated 1,500 entries, independent jurors will select 400 for display during the fair in the fine arts gallery on the third floor of the grandstand. Categories include oils, acrylics, mixed media; sculpture; watercolor, pastel, gouache, casein, tempera; drawings; prints; ceramics (excluding sculpture); textiles; jewelry; and photography. Entries will be accepted from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. August 3-4 at the fine arts gallery.

SCHEMATIC DRAWINGS of potential alternatives for Thief River Falls school district facilities were mounted on the walls of the local school district service center for study by the local board of education at its meeting Monday. The board is considering a number of possible solutions to buildings which are deteriorating due to age and are outmoded by current educational facilities standards. Studies, drawings and Monday's presentation to the board were prepared by the ATSR architectural and engineering firm of Minneapolis.

'U' M Regents Discuss Daily And Director

Status of the Minnesota Daily and of the Hubert H. Humphrey institute of public affairs were among the major topics for the discussion at University of Minnesota board of regents meetings Thursday and Friday.

At the meeting of the committee of the whole Friday, university president C. Peter Magrath will report on recent meetings of the board of student publications and the Senate committee on education chaired by Jerome Hughes, DFL-St. Paul, concerning the year-end humor issue of the Minnesota Daily, the student newspaper.

Magrath is not expected to make any recommendations, although one or more regents may introduce resolutions harsher than the one passed in June stating that the June 4-8 issue of the Daily was "in extremely poor taste."

The regents also will be updated on the search for a director for the Humphrey institute and on the institute's academic program statement.

Magrath also will present a six-month follow-up report on the effectiveness of university support of the Sullivan principles; a series of shareholder resolutions calling for U.S. corporations in South Africa to work toward racial equality.

In other action, the regents are expected to approve a 1979-80 budget of approximately $604 million and to name a new dean for the law school.

USDA Considers Regulations In Food Program

U.S. department of agriculture is proposing new regulations for the child care food program. The regulations were designed to help reach more children who need the program, remove administrative obstacles and ensure the quality and nutritional integrity of the meals provided.

About 600,000 current participants, 43 state agencies and public and private sponsoring institutions; 15,000 child care centers; 10,000 family day care homes; and a significant number of family and group day care homes and sponsoring organizations will be affected by the new provisions in the regulations proposed.

The major objectives of the regulations are:

—To modify and simplify the reimbursement rate structure for child care centers participating in the program.

—To make reimbursement available to family and group day care homes to cover the costs of obtaining and preparing foods, and prescribed labor costs. Previously such facilities had to choose between receiving reimbursement based on an established food cost rate (eliminating the need for food cost records, which are difficult to maintain in home situations); or receiving reimbursement based on the cost records they maintained.

—To make separate reimbursement of administrative costs to organizations sponsoring family and group day care homes. Previously, reimbursement was made in a lump sum. Under the proposed regulations, potential providers of day care services will know precisely how much reimbursement per meal to expect before entering into an agreement with a sponsoring organization.

—To provide, in addition to reimbursement for administrative expenses, start-up funds for sponsors of family and group day care homes to initiate operation of the program.

—To broaden the methods of licensing available for institutions wishing to provide day care services.

—To improve the methods of identifying and resolving problems in institutions through ongoing evaluations and assistance by state agencies.

The child care food program provides nutritious meals to pre-school and school-aged children in child care facilities. Any licensed public or private non-profit institution providing nonresidential day care services may be eligible to participate in the program. Such institutions include day care centers, settlement houses, recreation centers, family day care programs, Head Start centers and institutions providing day care services for handicapped children.

Comments on the proposed regulations should be sent to Jordan Benderly, Director, Child Care and Summer Programs Division, Food and Nutrition Service, US Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250, no later than Aug. 17. The proposed regulations will be published in the July 3 Federal Register.

All Emergency Vehicles Have Right Of Way

Imagine you are driving down the freeway. You glance in your rearview mirror and see an ambulance approaching with its siren blaring and lights flashing. What should you do?

Most people reply that a driver must pull over to the right and stop. But there has been a sharp increase in accidents involving emergency vehicles. In 1978 there were 437 such accidents, a 650 per cent increase over the 1970 total of 65.

"Some of the reasons for this rise in emergency vehicle accidents can be blamed upon the poor driving habits of some motorists. Some drivers ignore surrounding traffic, forget to signal turns and lane changes, and do not use their rearview mirrors," said John P. Sopsic, commissioner of the Minnesota department of public safety.

"However, the main reason for this dramatic rise in emergency vehicle crashes is that Minnesota drivers seem to be unaware or have forgotten the emergency vehicle right-of-way laws. Often they do not pull over, thus forcing the emergency vehicle driver to waste precious time avoiding them," said Sopsic.

Emergency vehicle right-of-way requires two responses from the motorist; pulling over to the right and stopping completely. Motorists must remain stopped until the emergency vehicle has passed and they are certain that no other emergency vehicle is following the first.

On a freeway or four-lane highway, move as far to the right as you can. Do not panic or slam on the brakes. Check other traffic before you change lanes and, when it is safe, merge into the right-hand lane and stop. If you are traveling in one of the right-hand lanes when the emergency vehicle approaches, yield to the motorist who is trying to merge to move out of the emergency vehicle's path.

Purchase More Land For Park

Commissioner of Natural Resources Joseph Alexander has announced that the DNR will proceed with the purchase of 3,400 acres of private land known as Tettgouche Camp located within the boundaries of newly established Tettegouche state park near Silver Bay.

In addition, the new park will include the present 706-acre Baptism River state park and 600 acres of tax-forfeit land.

Private lands make up the bulk of the acreage within the statutory boundaries of the park, which was created by the legislature at the last session.

Purchase of the land for state park purposes has been discussed by the DNR since the early 1960's and in 1967 and 1968 prior landowner was contacted.

Park plans and maps were prepared in 1969 and the site was listed as a proposed park in a 1971 report called "Project 80". In the report the location was described as "one of the seven best potential park sites in the state."

Interest and debate over the site increased when it was proposed as a possible taconite tailings dump by Reserve Mining Company in federal district court proceedings.

In rejecting this plan, the district court said the area "is a unique environmental treasure thatmust be jealously guarded".

In December of 1977 an option was taken on the property by the Nature Conservancy — a non-profit corporation which seeks to preserve lands having unique natural resource values.

The department is authorized to expend up to $880,000 for the purchase of the lands plus certain direct expenses of the Nature Conservancy relating to the taking and exercise of the option.

Since nearly 90 per cent of the land in Lake county is already in public ownership, there was considerable local opposition to purchase by the state.

But Alexander said that legislation establishing the park directed the DNR to sell 3,400 acres of other state-owned lands in Lake county, make payments in lieu of taxes to the county, and to compensate the county at fair market value for the tax-forfeit land included within the park boundaries.

In addition, the legislation requires the commissioner to lease up to 400 acres for not exceeding 40 years for a private non-profit learning center, on such terms as he deems proper, and the DNR is currently engaged in discussions with the Environmental Learning Center of Isabella in this regard. These provisions are a good faith attempt to deal with the concerns of local residents.

The property contains terrain consisting of high hills, bluffs, steep slopes and rock outcroppings which contain woods, meadows, bogs, streams, waterfalls and four alpine lakes and a variety of bird, fish and wildlife species. Lumbering was halted in 1909 and several stands of virgin pine remain.

"Here is a beautiful and wild area from which the public has been excluded for many years", said Alexander, "but which public ownership will open to use by the ordinary citizen and taxpayer."

Alexander said the site is capable of accommodating heavier recreational use than existing state park sites immediately adjacent to the more sensitive Lake Superior shoreline.

He said state parks on the North Shore comprise only eight per cent of total state park acreage but receive 20 per cent of total state park recreational use. The new park, he said, will help relieve pressure on other North Shore state parks.

DNR personnel have already begun a study of state owned land lands within the county to select those that will be offered for sale. Uunder the legislation creating the park, the lands must be identified by September 1.

Mn. Women For Agriculture Hold Meeting

Minnesota Women for Agriculture met at Grand Central Station in Warren for a noon luncheon June 28 with approximately 18 members in attendance.

Ray Thompson, Marshall county extension agent, gave a slide presentation on sunflowers in which marketing was mentioned as a very important factor in sunflower production. Sunflower varieties were discussed, along with costs per acre and yields per acre. He spoke of several types of weevils and beetles that infest the crop and the treatments for the insects which range from chemicals to gas. Thompson also mentioned that a chemical is available to discourage blackbirds in the fields. Additional information on sunflower production is available through the extension office.

Wheat Growers Is Topic Of MWA Meeting

Northwest area of the Minnesota Women for Agriculture (MWA) met in Red Lake Falls recently at the new headquarters of the Minnesota wheat council and wheat growers.

Merv Syersen, membership chairman for the wheat growers, emphasized the importance of farmers organizing to find markets for their products. Syerson, who worked for the soybean growers before joining the wheat growers, spoke about the success the soybean farmers have had in increasing the market for their products by working together and actively promoting soybeans in this country and abroad.

He said wheat growers can and are gaining the same success in finding more markets and cited the growth in wheat sales overseas in the past 10 or 12 years since the wheat growers have been active. Minnesota is one of the most active in all phases of promotion and research, he stated, and the American farmers are the best funded and the best educated farmers in the world.

Since the public is often confused about the difference between the wheat council and the wheat growers, Willie Mae and Charles Rhodes explained the two organizations. The wheat council is non-political and uses the funds made available to it through check off funding and matching the FAC funds for research and marketing. Wheat growers group is funded by membership dues and works for legislation that would benefit the wheat grower.

On the problem of moving grain or other farm [illegible] problems, [illegible] is the possibility that some time in the future grain may be piped to market. The wheat will float in pipes on rape seed [illegible]cutive council of MWA voted to sent $5 to the American Agri-Women for each member so members will receive the "The Voice of the American Agri-Women", a monthly newsletter.

No MWA meetings are scheduled in July or August but all members are encouraged to promote agriculture by having booths at their local fairs. The next meeting will be September 28.

Twelve Professionals To Golf In Cat Classic

Defending champion Paul O'Leary of Grand Forks will headline a list of 12 professionals competing in the 1979 Arctic Cat Golf Classic Pro-Am scheduled for Friday, July 21, at the Thief River Country Club.

The Pro-Am, one division of a three-day tournament, will feature many of the area's top professional and amateur golfers.

O'Leary shot a three-under par 69 in the 6,054-yard Country Club course to claim the 1978 championship. This year he will face stiffer competition, primarily from a large Fargo-Moorhead contingent. Included in the field are Dave Kingsrud, Steve Weidner, Kip Borouski, Jim Shade, Jim McElhaney, Dennis McLaughlin, Tim Carlson, Bob Kahil, Mike Barge and Marty Irving.

Kingsrud is the head professional at Fargo's Edgewood Golf Course and was the winning pro in last year's double best-ball segment of the Pro-Am here.

Weidner, the Fargo Country Club head pro, will be joined by assistants Borouski and Shade in the 12 man field. Shade, a teaching pro, is one of the area's top golfers and a winner of several sectional tournaments, including the North Dakota Open.

McElhaney is the head professional at the Oxbow Country Club, site of the weekly "KX Great Hole-in-One Contest" television program. He will be joined here by McLauglin, his assistant.

Carlson, an ex-club champion at the Thief River Falls course and currently an assistant at the prestigious Golden Valley Country Club in Minneapolis, will make the trip north to play his home course.

Moorhead Country Club teaching assistants Kahil and Barge will make return appearances in the Pro-Am. A new entrant is Irving of Hibbing's Mesabi Country Club.

The Pro-Am segment of the Second Annual Cat Classic will include straight medal-play competition between the PGA professionals. First prize for the event is $150. Total purse is $400.

In the concurrent double best-ball segment, the pro's score and the best net score of his three amateur playing partners will be combined to determine the team's score.

The tournament is open to all amateur golfers. Registrations are now being accepted at the Country club, phone 681-2955. The entry fee of $10 includes a free barbeque dinner following the tourney.

Non-participants are encouraged to watch the area's top professionals at the Thief River Country Club, Friday, July 20, at 1 p.m. There is no admission charge.

The Pro-Am will be followed by the Cat Classic open competition Saturday and Sunday, July 21 and 22.

The tournament, featuring teams from Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls, Middle River, Greenbush and Oklee will continue today (Wednesday) and Thursday at the fairgrounds diamond.

Four-Way First Place Tie Featured In Division II

A virtual four-way first place tie exists in Division II following Tuesday's Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association play when The Get-A-Way, beginning the night with a one-game lead over the eight-team field, split a doubleheader, losing an 11-10 decision to title challenger Bridgeman's but beating cellar dwelling Dallmann Athletic, Inc. 15-5.

With nine wins, The Get-A-Way holds a one game edge over Bridgeman's, First Federal Savings & Loan Association and the St. Hilaire Bears. However, all four rivals carry four losses in the more closely watched loss column.

The St. Hilaire Bears, a 15-5 winner over Dallmann Athletic, Inc. Tuesday, will have a shot at The Get-A-Way Thursday at 6:20 p.m. on the fairgrounds diamond. Mark Huot hit an inside-the-park home run and Steve Drury drove in five runs in the Bears' victory over Dallmann Athletic, Inc.

First Federal Savings & Loan Association kept pace with a come-from-behind 7-6 victory over Hamms-Pizza Hut, gaining life on Arlan Overbye's two-run, two-out game-tying home run in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Home Lumber completed the busy Tuesday Division II schedule with a doubleheader sweep, drilling Hamms-Pizza Hut 13-3 and trimming Popplers-Action Realty 10-8. Don Forney homered in the opener, with Murray Melander and Tom Barry collecting second game home runs.

Division I

Rusty Nail Raiders, after a Monday doubleheader sweep over Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. 9-6 and Arnold Realty 12-2, had their Division I lead chopped in half Tuesday when Tony Dorn, Inc. pulled out a remarkable 9-8 victory.

Facing an 8-6 deficit with two out in the bottom of the seventh, Tony Dorn, Inc. collected four consecutive base hits, tying the game on Dennis Bendickson's hit and winning it when Ed Kees drove in his fourth run of the night.

Second place TRF Merchants were unable to capitalize on the Rusty Nail Raiders loss, though, as they split a Monday twinbill to remain a game behind. Hartz upset the TRF Merchants 9-6 in the second half of their doubleheader after a 9-6 Merchants victory over Wagon Wheel.

Hartz completed a doubleheader sweep with a 13-2 triumph over Arnold Realty and Wagon Wheel managed a split by beating Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. 4-3.

Division IV

Co-leaders Jean Junction-Rundell Electric and Wilson Brothers Co. were both winners in Division IV Monday.

Jean Junction-Rundell Electric crushed the TRF Aggies 15-3 with Steve Rundell and Phil Fore both homering in 3-for-3 performances.

Meanwhile, Mike Wigness, Charlie Boyer and Mike Wiebolt all homered and all three went 4-for-4 as Wilson Brothers Co. got by Tip & Ring 13-10.

Kmart out-scored Lon's Restaurant & Pub 20-9 Tuesday.

Elks Win 8-7; Host Playoffs On NCC Field

Jeff Milender's pinch hit single with one out in the bottom of the seventh inning snapped a 7-7 tie Monday as the Thief River Falls Elks edged Crookston 8-7 in a Babe Ruth baseball game for 13-15-year-olds on the Northland community college diamond.

The victory completed Thief River Falls' 1979 regular season schedule with a 17-6 record.

Post-season playoff activity got underway today (Wednesday) as Thief River Falls plays host to the Lake Agassiz Babe Ruth Southern Division Sub District tournament at the Northland diamond.

First round games today matched Red Lake Falls against Crookston at 10 a.m. and the Thief River Falls Elks against the East Grand Forks Blue at 12 noon. The double-elimination event also features two games this afternoon as the East Grand Forks Red tackles the Red Lake Falls-Crookston winner at 2 p.m. and the first round losers meet at 4.

On Thursday, the losers bracket will feature games at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m., with the Thief River Falls Elks-East Grand Forks Blue winner playing the eventual Red Lake Falls-Crookston-East Grand Forks Red winner in a 1 p.m. winners bracket game.

Championship game will be played Friday at 1 p.m. The two finalists will move on the district level playoffs at Roseau next week.

Sabo, Kosel Beat Roseau

Scott Sabo and Jeff Kosel combined their baseball talents Tuesday to lead the Thief River Falls American Legion team to a 5-1 Northwest League victory over Roseau.

Sabo struck out 17 batters in the seven-inning game while pitching a three-hitter. He also hit a two-run home run in the third inning that staked Thief River Falls to a 5-0 lead.

Only Roseau run off Sabo came in the fifth inning when a walk issued to Aaron Broten was followed by an error and a balk.

Kosel enjoyed a productive 3-for-4 night at the plate as the Thief River Falls lead-off batter, driving in three runs with a second inning double. He also stole three bases.

It was the second Thief River Falls win of the year over the Northwest League rival Roseau squad. Thief River Falls, now 8-3, won the season-opener played here 3-1.

Coach Terry Sullivan's Thief River Falls ball club will be idle until Tuesday when the team travels to Bagley for a 7 p.m. game.

Action Realty Club Wins Fast Pitch Doubleheader

Action Realty moved into third place in the Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league Tuesday with a doubleheader sweep, outlasting Radion Shack 2-1 in 11 innings and knocking off Schmidts 1-0 in a regulation seven-inning game.

The two victories enabled Action Realty to pass Dallmann Athletic, Inc. for third place and actually matched the seven wins posted by league leader North Star Transport and second place Coca-Cola. But North Star Transport is unbeaten and Coca-Cola has lost just once while the busier Action Realty squad has been tagged with five losses.

Al Erickson and Mark DuChamp engaged in another of the league's ever-increasing string of pitching duels in a 2-1 Action Realty victory over Radio Shack in 11 innings.

Wayne Smith's one-out home run in the top of the 11th inning finally gave Erickson the decision over DuChamp.

Radio Shack opened with a 1-0 first inning lead on Bob Lundbohm's single off Nick Drees' glove at shortstop. Tim Engelstad engineered a sacrifice bunt, moving Lundbohm to second, and Mitch Dicken came through with a single to right field.

Action Realty tied the game 1-1 in the fifth inning as Jeff Ulrich led off with a double to left and advanced to third on Scott Bergland's sacrifice. Erickson then helped his own cause with a base hit which glanced off the leaping Lundbohm's glove at second base and carried into right field.

DuCahmp then retired the next 14 batters before Smith sent his game-winning drive over the left field fence. Erickson retired nine batters in a row from the fifth through ninth innings.

Brad Kosel's sacrifice fly in the top of the fifth inning scored Scott Bergland with the game's only run as Action Realty edged Schmidts 1-0 in a make-up game.

It almost appeared that winning pitcher Al Erickson used the 11-inning first game marathon with Radio Shack as a second game warm-up as he surrendered just five singles and allowed only two runners to reach second base.

The game's only run came with one out in the firth when Bergland drew a walk, went to third on a throwing error in Ericksn's sacrifice bunt and scored when Kosel lofted a fly ball to center field.

A busy regular-season ending schedule awaits the Merchants next week when they play doubleheaders Monday at Roseau, Tuesday vs. Crookston and Wednesday vs. East Grand Forks. A RACE TO home plate was won by Thief River Falls Merchants pitcher Dave Stimac who fielded a ground ball hit back to the mound and elected to end a bases-loaded threat himself by forcing out Crookston runner Tony Ohman in the first inning of Monday's baseball game matching 13-year-olds in the Northland community college diamond. Thief River Falls catcher Ryan Bakke was left out of the play. Crookston broke open a 2-2 ball game with a seventh inning outburst that produced a 9-4 win.

18 Straights Are Posted Monday In Trap League

Shooters in the Thief River Falls Trap League, beginning their 1979 second half season Monday, showed they were truly in mid-season form by recording no less than 18 perfect 25-straights at the Marshallton Gun Club.

Three members of the first half season champion Northern State Bank squad posted straights Monday, but even the perfect nights by Howard Thorson, Arnie Fjelland and Tony Dorn, Jr. failed to produce a win as Arctic Spirit received 25-straights from Gerry Paulson and Bruce Johnson in gaining a 117-117 tie.

Others putting 25-straights in the books Monday were Roger Matthews, Pizza Hut; Jim Heckroth, Marshallton Gun Club; Steve Lappegaard, Soo Line Hot Shots; Glen Aagaard, Arctic No. 3; Peter Tri, Northland Realty; Harry Johnson, Triple J Trap Co.; Marc Horien, Sjoberg's; Ike Ellingson and Roger Van Horn, Viking Varmints; Al Boughton, Auto Body Repair; Mert Wilson and Lloyd Melby, Wilson Brothers Co.; and Doug Rudd, Service Master.

In addition to the Northern State Bank-Arctic Spirit tie, H & B Oil shot to a 116-116 draw against Marshallton Gun Club and Peterson-Biddick Co. shot to a 120-120 stalemate against Hible's Standard, which represented the first point of the season for the latter, the only winless team through nine weeks of first half season shooting.

Elsewhere, Pizza Hut beat Pepsi-Cola 121-119, L.B. Hartz Wholesale defeated Bjorkman's 119-111, Hydra-Mac downed the American Legion 115-109, Soo Line Hot Shots got by Sethre's Hartz 119-114, Northland Realty edged Arctic No. 3 121-120, Sjoberg's tipped Triple J Trap Co. 120-118, Viking Varmints handled First Northwestern State Bank Southside 119-111, Auto Body Repair shipped the Cat Busters 118-108, Wilson Brothers Co. brushed off Noreen Development 112-87 and Service Master toppled The Times 119-115.

Club officials also announced that its post-season city shoot would be enlarged to include the top six finishers in each of the half season point standings. FISHIN' TIPS

from . . . Tom Mann

MISTER MANN: "I read where you advised fishing for fun fish like bluegills, catfish, and carp. What's the matter with that mean ol' dogfish?" LIKE 'EM RUFF

HELLO RUFF: Not a thing. There are times when dogfish, grinnel, bowfin, mudfish, or whatever you call old ugly, are all that's hitting. I enjoy fishing this roughneck, even if it is about as good to eat as an old tennis shoe.

HEY TOM: "I read where you advocate putting back fish you don't intend to eat. How about giving them to a neighbor and still enjoy catching them?" FUN FISHER

HELLO FUN FISHER: Well, nothing wrong with that if the neighbor really enjoys them and doesn't mind cleaning them when I knock on his door around midnight.

DEAR TOM: "I've got a friend who knows everything and he swears a fish can't smell worth a hoot." ARKY

HELLO ARKY: The heck they can't. Just forget some in a livewell like I did for two days. Talk about smell! But, seriously, fish do have a very keen sense of smell.

MR. MANN: "What's the best color jelly worm for the bass in my neck of the woods?" MAINE YANKEE

HELLO YANKEE: I don't know, it changes with the season. Let the bass tell you by trying various colors until you find the one they want. Always begin with black.

It occurs to me that a heap of fishermen are passing up a heap of good fishing by going only for the glamor sport fish, and not paying more attention to the lesser lights. I'm speaking about bluegills, catfish, and carp.

Now you take that sporty little bluegill, or brim as it is called in my country. There just is no finer flavored fish around. My favorite way to catch a batch is to bury a longshank No. 8 Aberdeen hook in the seat of a cricket, and let it sink naturally. Boy, do they go for it!

And catching catfish is as easy as finding a deep hole, preferably where water is moving, and baiting a No. 1/0 Eagle Claw hook with a hunk of fresh chicken liver. The bloodier the better. Just keep casting this out until you see your line go tight, then just set the hook and hang on.

Now while carp aren't regarded as the best flavored fish by most people, no one can dispute their ability to put up a stiff battle. Make a doughball out of a hunk of fresh bread, flavor it with vanilla, mold a kidney-bean-size chunk of this around a No. 2 Eagle Claw hook, add a sinker, and let it soak on the bottom. A burly carp will find it.

Today we're going to talk about the bane of all fishermen who use a levelwind reel, a #&@X*±!! backlash. You can spend hours picking out one, if you don't know how, so let's talk about how to go about it.

A backlash, in simple terms, is a muss-up in your line caused by your not stopping the spool when the lure stops pulling on the line. An overrun, really. So, adjust the braking mechanism on your reel so that the spool stops when the lure quits pulling. This helps prevent overruns.

However, when you get a #&@X±!! backlash, and all of us do, here's what to do. Nothing. Look at it carefully. Locate the line coming from your rod tip, and pull, don't jerk, on it. Note the "V" it makes in one loop of line on the spool. Okay, get hold of that "V" and pull it free. Don't pull loose any loops of line that aren't the "V" holding the running line.

Take your time and work out these "V's" one at a time until you have unmussed your backlash. An excellent tool for this is one of those little curve-tip fingernail cleaners that come on some pocket knives. And if it's a really bad #&@X±!! backlash, use the blade on your knife and cut it out.

BRER TOM'S CLOSING TIP: When going to fish in a remote spot, let someone know where to find you in case you get into trouble. This could save you a lot of discomfort, even your life.

Watch bad weather signs, like black clouds building on the horizon. Head for shore when a wind starts to build. If caught miles from shore, throw out a bow anchor, and ride it out. Don't dare a storm, it can do you in.

Boats, Motors Should Match Size, Power

It is illegal to operate a boat in Minnesota that has a motor of greater horsepower than the maximum safe limit shown on the boat's capacity plate.

Kim Elverum, boat and water safety coordinator, Department of Natural Resources, said the capacity plate is usually located on the boat's transom or is attached to the craft somewhere near the steering wheel or throttle.

He said he has received numerous calls during the past few weeks concerning the regulation.

Elverum said it is not illegal for the dealer to sell a boat with a motor larger than that shown on the capacity plate, but it is illegal to operate such a boat.

This means that the boat buyer should check the capacity plate before he purchases the watercraft.

He pointed out also that the boat dealer who attaches the motor to the boat could be considered a manufacturer and might be brought into court on a product liability suit if an accident occurred.

Furthermore, he said, the boat owner may find that insurance does not cover cases where the owner knowingly overpowers the watercraft and then has an accident.

He emphasized that there is no truth to the rumor that the law allows a 5, 10, or 15 per cent horsepower increase over the maximum shown on the capacity plate. In addition, said Elverum, overpowering a boat may damage the transom. It may also create a dangerous situation by forcing the stern lower in the water causing the tow to rise, reducing the operator's forward visibility.

This could also lead to the boat swamping, he said.

High Climbers

KATMANDU, Nepal — Melted snow tastes terrible, says Dr. Charles Clark, physician to the American expedition seeking to scale Manaslu, the world's seventh tallest peak.

The climbers carried only tea and powdered Hawaiian Punch. Clark states both drinks are low in acidity, which is important for easing altitude sickness and both give the melted snow a good taste.

Bemidji Beats TRF 282-230 In Swimming

Bemidji, out-numbering a Thief River Falls team that had been out of the water for nearly two weeks by a two-to-one margin, collected a 282-230 victory Thursday in an AAU dual swim meet at Bemidji.

Thief River Falls, lacking practice facilities while the Franklin middle school pool undergoes its yearly cleaning process, took 30 swimmers to Bemidji to face a squad of 60.

Nevertheless, Thief River Falls swimmers won 20 of the 50 events, including three victories apiece by Shelley McGann, Tim Penn and Mark Storhaug.

A Thief River Falls-Bemidji rematch is tentatively scheduled to be staged in the Franklin pool Thurs., July 26, at 5:30 p.m.

Mountain Goat Is Considered Star Performer

In the barnyard, goats are not star performers. They give milk, but not as much as cows do. They provide wool, but not as much as sheep do. They pull carts and carry loads, but not as well as horses do.

On mountain slopes, the story is different. There, according to the current issue of Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine, they have special talents which make them stand out. They are, in fact, the kings of mountain peaks which few other animals would dare to climb.

"In the mountains of Greece and Syria goats are really popular," says the National Wildlife Federation's monthly publication for children. "They're very sure-footed, so they can be raised in the mountains and driven down the steep slopes into town." Goats are cheap laborers, too — they need little space, and can eat weeds and twigs which would sicken cows and sheep.

Farm goats of today are descendants of the longhorned wild goats of Asia Minor and the Greek Islands. Goats were first tamed over 8,000 years ago and raised for their milk, meat, hair and fine leather.

One of these ancestors, the Cretan wild goat, or agrimi, once faced extinction, says Ranger Rick. The goats were shot for food and their hide and much of their habitat was snatched for raising farm goats. Fortunately, the Greek government named the agrimi Greece's national animal, and the mountains in which it lives are now a national park.

European ibex was also threatened with extinction. These wild goats fell victim to medieval superstitions and were considered to be "walking pharmacies" as late as the nineteenth century. Ibex blood was thought to be a remedy for callouses and rings made from the goat's horns were worn as a "protection" against a variety of diseases. Other parts of the ibex were thought to cure cancer, tuberculosis and gout.

Only a few dozen ibexes were left in the Alps when European biologists began to preserve and reintroduce them in the early 1900's.

Only wild goat in North America — the mountain goat — isn't just a goat, but a cross between a goat and an antelope. The mountain goat roams the North American Rocky Mountains where its thick, white coat protects it from freezing blizzards. Although it can weigh up to 300 pounds, the mountain goat is incredibly agile and can jump to tiny ice-covered ledges 30 feet away.

In the late 1800's the mountain goat was hunted to near-extinction for its fur, which was used for muffs and collars. Now, hunting seasons for mountain goats are closely regulated. Today there are about 17,000 mountain goats in seven states of the Pacific Northwest and 12,000 in Alaska.

Rodeo At Effie July 28 and 29 State's Largest

As the last weekend in July approaches, the people in the Bigfork valley are gearing up for the North Star Stampede at Effie. This will be the 24th time that cowboys and cowgirls have gathered at the North Star ranch at Effie and pitted their skills against rough stock and each other to compete for prize money and coveted silver trophy buckles.

The stampede is Minnesota's largest open rodeo and each year it has grown larger. Contestants are entered this year from North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Wyoming, Nevada, Texas and Canada. There will also be a number of local cowboys entered and several of these hands have been tough competition on the rodeo circuit this summer.

Fred Pitzen has had a real winning streak and he says he hopes it lasts through the stampede. Every cowboy's first ambition is to win the home town show. Larry Kaczor of Bigfork will be on hand to take a little of the prize money if he can. Larry won the steer wrestling event last year.

Dan Harrington of Effie is another steer wrestler to watch. Dan won this event at the Blackduck Jaycees silver dollar rodeo in June. Last year's bull riding winner, Ronnie Root of Effie is going to try and win another buckle "before I hang her up". Ronnie won the bull riding at the Kinsmens International stampede in Canada recently. Clowning the stampede this year will be "Rusty" Holfield of Brandon, Miss.

Stock contractor Howard Pitzen says everything will be ready to go but "we are going to have to burn a lot of midnight oil. Three of my sons are on the injured list. That leaves me and Fred to do the ranching".

The Pitzens have acquired a number of new bucking horses to add to the rough string this year. Howard and Delvin attended the Miles City, Mont., bucking horse auction in May and purchased a semi load at that sale.

Other activities for the weekend include a fly-in breakfast at the Bigfork airport, sponsored by the Bigfork Lions club. Transportation will be furnished to the rodeo grounds to anyone flying in. The breakfast is open to the public.

At the North Star ranch, two miles north of Effie, the rodeo action will get under way each day on July 28 and 29 at 2 p.m. rain or shine. There is plenty of room for free parking and camping, although campers are advised to bring their own drinking water.

Unless steps are taken to halt erosion and sedimentation, the Panama Canal may be useless to oceangoing vessels by 1980, the year the U.S. turns it over to Panama, says International Wildlife magazine.

No one wanted the old country church torn down when the new building was put up across the road. It just didn't seem respectful, Charlie Swenson suggested. "Why not make it a museum?"

You should have seen the activity here one Saturday. Everyone for miles around turned out, bringing mops and paint brushes — and, of course, chicken salad and apple pies. Then we had a dedication ceremony. Charlie Swenson's wife accompanied us on the old piano as we sang "The Church's One Foundation."

Now tourists from the city come out to see the pot-bellied stoves, rustic pews and old lamps in our church museum. Once each summer we worship here.

For some of us there will always be a place in our hearts for this little church where we first learned about the teachings of God's Son. We love the new one, too. It is leading new generations into finding the same enduring values.

Minnesota Land Ranks High In Rental Rates

Average cash rent for Minnesota farm land this year ranks among the higher rates in the nation according to a cooperative state-federal survey taken on March 1, agriculture commissioner Mark W. Seetin said recently.

"State-wide averages, particularly in dollar figures, can be misleading. For example, the range of cash rentals for cropland in Minnesota is from a low of less than $20 to as much as $150 per acre, varying as it should with the market value and productivity of the land.

"The more realistic gauge of farm land rental fees is land value, and on that score," says commissioner Seetin, "Minnesota cash rents averaging 5.3 per cent of the land value are competitive with our Midwest region rental rates for cropland and whole farms."

Minnesota's current average cash rental rates, state-wide, per acre are: $58.30 for cropland only, $52.50 for entire farms, and $21.10 for pasture-grazing land.

These averages on a cash basis were fifth highest among 24 states surveyed for total farm rentals, sixth highest among 23 states for pasture rentals, and seventh highest among 34 states on cropland rentals.

Compared on the basis of the ratio of the cash rent to land value, Minnesota ranked firth for both total farm and pasture rental, and 14 for cropland rental.

According to the survey, the average Minnesota landlord is charging 5.3 per cent of the estimated real estate value on both total farm and cropland rental fees, and 4.9 per cent of the value of pasture-grazing land.

Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and Ohio reported higher cash rents but lower rent-value ratios than Minnesota for total farming units. Only cropland in those states, plus irrigated cropland in Kansas and Nebraska, is commanding higher cash rents than in Minnesota.

Landlords in Illinois are grossing 4.3 per cent of land value on $99 per acre on cropland and $93 per acre for whole farms. Iowa has the highest pasture rental, $35 per acre.

Neighboring North Dakota and South Dakota reported among the lowest current cash rents this season, $27.80 and $25.50 for cropland, $22.40 and $17.80 for farms, $7.80 and $9.20 for pasture-grazing land, all per acre. However, cash rent in ratio to land value in the Dakotas ranks the highest among 31 states surveyed.

Unmapped Isle In Caribbean To Be Explored

Some say that the Arctic is North America's last frontier, but a group of intrepid conservationists is about to tackle a very different and surprising wilderness — Andros Island in the Bahamas.

Located 180 miles southeast of Miami Beach, the 2,300-square-mile island of Andros is the largest of the 700 Bahamas. Although there is a settlement of about 6,000 Indians and descendants of African slaves on its east coast, Andros is mostly an unmapped, unphotographed tropical wilderness, covered largely with salt-water wetlands and inhabited with such exotica as six-foot iguanas and 15-foot boa constrictors.

The Andros expedition will be led by Dr. J. Michael Queen, a 31-year-old geologist from the University of California-Santa Barbara, with the cooperation of the National Wildlife Federation and other conservation groups.

The explorers hope to conduct a full scientific investigation of the island. This will include mapping its surface, classifying its environments, taking plant, soil and water samples, photographing it and testing to evaluate its geological evolution.

Queen plans to take a crew of 14, including two ornithologists, two botanists, and a wildlife photographer, to the not-so-remote island for 10 weeks starting in September. Although Andros's fall [illegible] season, Queen explains that the humid, buggy summer and the drought-ridden winter and spring would be even less conducive to their studies.

Other dangers the crew will face include a lack of drinking water and a western shore studded with coral reefs. They will have to rely on muddy wells they dig themselves.

Another imponderable is the potential presence of drug smugglers, who pass Andros with Colombian marijuana en route to the U.S. Queen fears that some "paranoid" smuggler might mistake the expedition for a well-disguised squad of federal narcotics agents.

"That's why we're publicizing the expedition carefully," Queen says. "We want people to know that if we disappear, we'll be missed."

The expedition will log more than 960 miles, all by boat. Six hundred of these miles will be spent circumnavigating the swampy island in low-slung, ultra-strong $3,000 canoes specially designed for this trip. The lack of roads and the mucky nature of the terraine would thwart any other mode of transportation, Queen says, "even a 6x6 jeep."

The trip will cost more than $122,000, Queen estimates, even though many of the crew are virtually donating their time.

What motivates Queen to risk a dangerous journey is more than scientific curiosity. By documenting the treasures of Andros, Queen hopes to convince the Bahamian government it is worth protecting.

These treasures include: winter habitat for the flamingo and the nearly-extinct Kirtland's warbler; virgin forests filled with orchids, Carribbean pines, palmettos and mangroves; and a unique maze of vegetated coral reefs and sandbars.

But now the other Bahamian Islands, feeling the pressure of over-development, are looking eagerly towards Andros as the next tourist spa. The timber industry, which has already felled all trees not protected by marshes, is also hoping for a "civilized" Andros. Commercial fishermen threaten the area's offshore ecology by firing explosive charges on the reefs and by dropping bleach to force out spiny lobsters.

And so, Queen and his expedition find themselves in a race against time. With developers encircling the island like sharks, he hopes that the facts he gathers will speak loudly for the protection of Andros.

Pets Require Shade, Water During Summer

Minnesota humane society knows that dogs and horses suffer from the summer heat, as do humans. To help reduce that suffering the society offers the following information.

(1) Never leave a dog in a closed automobile, unventilated garage or other enclosure, without free circulation of air, during the summer months.

(2) Kennels should be adequately ventilated to provide good circulation of air.

(3) Animals should not be crowded into cages. Heat prostration is often the result of overcrowding as well as lack of proper ventilation.

(4) Outdoor dogs must be provided with shade from the direct rays of the sun from June through September.

(5) Provide plenty of fresh drinking water for indoor and outdoor animals. Dehydration is a very serious result of lack of necessary water.

If a dog exhibits signs of heat stress:

(1) Gradually immerse the dog in cool water. If possible, or spray it with water from the garden hose.

(2) Apply ice packs to the head and neck.

(3) Above all treat the dog promptly and take it to a veterinarian as fast as possible.

Remember the heat inside a car will reach 130 to 140 degrees in a matter of minutes if the car is standing in the sun. This can cause brain damage or death — not only for your pet but also for children.

HISTORY OF HANDBELLS IN THE UNITED STATES
AMERICAN GUILD OF ENGLISH HANDBELL RINGERS AGEHR 1954

P. T. Barnum is generally credited with popularizing handbells as a musical instrument in the U.S. when, in the 1840s, he introduced the "Swiss Bell Ringers" — a group of five Englishmen — to tour the country.

In 1923, the first official American handbell ringing group — the Beacon Hill Handbell Ringers — was established by Margaret H. Shurcliff in Boston.

The American Guild of English Handbell Ringers (AGEHR) was formed in 1954 to promote the art of handbell ringing.

Schulmerich Carillons, Sellersville, Pa., the world's largest bell manufacturer, became the first U.S. company to go into full manufacturing production of handbells in 1961.

This year the AGEHR is celebrating its Silver Anniversary with four festivals throughout the country and its first national convention at Washington University in St. Louis.

Soft Contact Lenses May Cause Infection

by Paul Schurke
University News

If not meticulously cared, for, soft contact lenses may be soft on safety, say University of Minnesota eye specialist. The numbers are small, but cases of corneal infection and permanent scarring resulting from improper sterilization of the lenses have been reported.

The porous, water-filled lenses that conform perfectly to the curve of the eye are becoming increasingly popular, particularly among those people who have found the hard variety of contact lenses uncomfortable.

"But because they are porous," said ophthalmic technician Pat Caroline, "they can absorb many things, including infectious bacteria." When on the eye, the lenses provide a warm, moist environment in which bacteria may multiply and, then, possibly invade the eye's delicate covering.

Problems are infrequent — only a few cases of infection have been seen at the University's ophthalmology department — but, Caroline said, "unlike most problems with hard lenses, those with soft lenses can be disastrous."

Opthalmologist Donald Doughman, who heads the department, agrees. Corneal abrasions, or scratches, can occur among wearers of both types of lenses, but can lead to more severe conditions when soft lenses are involved. When a hard lens scratches the eye, a common problem is the wearer falls asleep while wearing the lenses, the injury usually heals rather quickly without permanent damage. But if the lenses are soft and have been improperly sterilized, the scratch may provide ready access for infectious bacteria.

In one recent and particularly severe case, a soft contact lens wearer's cornea was scarred and nearly destroyed when it became scratched and subsequently infected, Doughman said.

When adequately sterilized, the lenses are safe. The problem, Caroline said, is that the cleaning procedures for soft lenses are more complex than those for hard lenses and must be meticulously followed. Soft lens wearers, most of whom formerly wore hard lenses, may find it difficult to adjust to the more rigorous cleaning procedures.

The lenses must be sterilized daily using either chemical antiseptics or heat. Both processes can take several minutes.

Caroline is quick to point out that highly motivated wearers may find the care involved a small price to pay for the advantages soft lenses hold over hard ones. They are often found to be more comfortable than hard contact lenses, and, unlike hard lenses, they can be worn intermittently, say for sporting or social events. Because the eye adapts quickly to them, the need for a regular wearing schedule is not as important as it is with hard lenses.

On the other hand, they are about a third more expensive than hard lenses and are not as durable. Visually, most people find them to be the same as hard lenses.

Doughman and Caroline offer these suggestions for those considering soft contact lenses:

1. Go to a reputable practioner, someone who is able to recognize the pathological conditions that can occur. Be skeptical of someone with a "deal."

2. Follow the manufacturer's sterilizing instructions exactly. Never rinse the lenses under tap water.

3. Avoid wearing the lenses in dusty or dirty environments. Such conditions may promote the scratching and infection of the cornea.

Cancer Answers

"Cancer Answers" is a weekly column sponsored by the Red River Valley Medical society, the Red River Valley unit of the American Cancer society, and the Thief River Falls Times. Questions may be mailed to the editor, Thief River Falls Times. All questions will be answered, and those of a general interest will be published in "Cancer Answers."

Dear Cancer Answers:

All of the literature about the dangers of smoking only mention cigarettes. What about smoking small cigars or a pipe? Is this better or is it just as hazardous to your health? What about the risks to non-smokers who are exposed to pipe and cigar smoke?

Mrs. E. B.

Dear Mrs. E. B.:

People who smoke pipes and cigars instead of cigarettes reduce some hazards to their health, but they increase others.

Most pipe and cigar smokers don't draw the smoke into their lungs. Therefore, hot smoke filled with harmful particles and gasses doesn't bombard their lung tissue and seep into their bloodstream as inhaled cigarette smoke does. As a result, their chances of developing heart disease or severe lung diseases like lung cancer or emphysema are less than cigarette smokers'.

However, when those who smoke pipes and cigars inhale the smoke, their chances of developing these diseases are even higher than cigarette smokers'. This is a special danger for cigarette smokers who switch to pipes and cigars because they are more likely to inhale smoke than people who have always smoked cigars and pipes.

Even tobacco smoke that is not inhaled still affects the parts of the body it touches. Smoke held in the mouth can travel into the throat and windpipe, even into the upper breathing passages. Smoke also may be dissolved in the saliva and swallowed, thus entering the digestive tract.

Because of such exposure, the incidence rates of cancers of the mouth, throat, voicebox, and stomach are as high for pipe and cigar smokers as for cigarette smokers.

Smokers of little cigars face all the hazards of cigar and pipe smokers and, if they inhale, all the damaging effects suffered by cigarette smokers as well. Most brands of little cigars have even higher levels of tar and nicotine than cigarettes.

The exact effects cigar and pipe smoke have on non-smokers has not yet been determined. There are higher levels of some damaging chemical compounds in pipe tobacco and cigars than in cigarettes. Inhaling second-hand smoke from cigarettes makes the heart beat faster, steps up the blood pressure, and raises the level of carbon monoxide in the non-smoker's blood. It is reasonable to assume that second-hand smoke from pipes and cigars would have the same effects on non-smokers.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I'm a public health nurse and would like to provide more information to the public about the detection and treatment of the different forms of cancer. Are there individual pamphlets available about lung, breast, colon cancer, etc.? If so, where can I obtain them?

An R.N.

Dear R.N.:

The National Cancer Institute is in the process of revising its series of public information pamphlets on the various kinds of cancer. This series, titled "What You Need to Know About Cancer", is designed to provide accurate current information about cancer in a concise form that is easy to read and understand.

Each 15-20 page pamphlet in this series covers a specific type of cancer. It explains the disease process, its diagnosis and treatment, and current research investigating its cause and seeking its cure. Suggestions are provided for cancer patients and their families on coping with emotional consequences of the disease, seeking help from rehabilitation and service organizations, and communicating with the doctor.

The series currently includes 24 pamphlets. General information about cancer is provided in the pamphlet titled "What You Need to Know About Cancer". The following specific types of cancer are covered in individual pamphlets titled "What You Need to Know About Cancer of the. . .": Bladder, Bone, Brain and Spinal Cord, Breast, Colon and Rectum, Esophagus, Kidney, Larynx, Adult Leukemia, Childhood Leukemia, Lung, Hodgkin's Disease, Non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma, Melanoma, Mouth, Multiple Myeloma, Ovary, Pancreas, Prostate, Skin, Stomach, Testis, Uterus.

Call or write the Minnesota Cancer Information Service to order any of the titles in this series. The toll-free telephone number in Minnesota is 1-800-582-5262. Requests may be mailed to "Minnesota Cancer Information Service, 2750 Park Avenue, Minneapolis, MN 55407.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I have white lumps on the tops of both of my ears. Could this be cancer? My father said he has had them too at times and they eventually will go away. The lumps aren't sore and don't bother me. Should I see my doctor?

Lennie

Dear Lennie:

It would be highly unusual for cancer to develop in the same location on both ears simultaneously. However, only a doctor could determine exactly what these lumps are, and it would certainly be wise for you to have them examined.

Dear Cancer Answers:

My husband has cancer of the liver. He is 66 years old. He is being treated with chemotherapy because the doctors couldn't operate. Why couldn't they remove the cancer with surgery? How well does chemotherapy work against this kind of cancer?

Mrs. W.

Dear Mrs. W.:

Because the liver is a vital part of the body's storage, circulation, and disposal system for nutrients, it cannot be removed even if it becomes diseased. The body cannot function without a liver. For this reason, radiation and chemotherapy, rather than surgery, are used to treat cancers found in the liver.

It would be impossible, even for your husband's doctor, to predict precisely how well he will do on chemotherapy. Much will depend upon your husband's general condition and how far the cancer has progressed. The doctor may be able to give you some indication of how successful this treatment has been in similar cases.

Dear Cancer Answers:

Yesterday I was visiting at our local Senior Citizen Center. On the bulletin board I saw a sign with a number for the Minnesota Cancer Information Service. I had never heard of it before. What is it and what do they do?

Mrs. J.N.

Dear Mrs. J.N.:

The Minnesota Cancer Information Service (MCIS) is a toll-free, state-wide telephone information service sponsored by the Minnesota Cancer Council. It provides up-to-date answers to questions about cancer causes, prevention, symptoms, treatment, rehabilitation, and available cancer-related community services.

The MCIS is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. until 4:15 p.m. The calls are answered by well-trained volunteers under the supervision of professional staff. If a volunteer can not answer the caller's questions with personal knowledge or immediately available resources, they will ask permission to call back or send the caller a written response after researching the question or seeking a professional opinion. The Minnesota Cancer Information Service has a supply of pamphlets on various aspects of cancer which they will mail to you free of charge on request. The number is 1-800-582-5262 (toll free).

Dear Cancer Answers:

My grandson has leukemia. The doctors and nurses always seem to be taking blood from him for something they call "blood counts." What is a blood count, and why do they do it so often? He seems so weak, I worry that they might be taking too much blood from him for all of these tests.

Mrs. C.G.

Dear Mrs. C.G.:

A blood count is a laboratory test in which the red cells, white cells, and platelets present in the blood are counted. Although no two people have exactly the same blood, doctors do know which counts fall within a normal range and which counts are not normal.

By comparing your grandson's blood count from one test to the next, his doctor can tell how well he is responding to treatment. When the leukemia is active it affects the normal production of blood cells, and in addition, abnormal cells appear in the blood. As treatment begins to take effect and the disease goes into remission, the abnormal cells will disappear. However, the treatment will also affect the production of healthy blood cells, and the doctor will want to carefully monitor these effects to determine whether the treatment should be modified.

During the intensive stage of his treatment your grandson will need to have frequent blood counts done. After he is in remission and on maintenance chemotherapy, he will need blood tests less frequently.

The amount of blood required to do a blood count can be measured in drops, and, even if the test is done frequently, such a small loss of blood would not be expected to harm your grandson.

Thieves Take Aim At Travelers

Careless business and vacation travelers can mean good business for thieves and pickpockets.

With the steady increase in the number of people traveling, Milt Nachbar, Director of Loss Control for CNA Insurance, warns that sneak-thieves, purse-snatchers and professional pickpockets are ever-watchful for persons who fail to take basic security precautions.

"While the average traveler may be gullible to the trickery of the professional thief, this need not be, provided a few simple measures are taken," said Nachbar.

One common mistake among male travelers is that they carry too many unnecessary items in their wallet, Nachbar said. Remove everything that is not necessary, such as photos, extra credit cards, membership cards, etc. By trimming down the wallet, it will not be as easily spotted by the familiar bulge in the pocket, he said.

Don't carry more money than is essential for the day's activities," Nachbar said. "Travelers checks should be used as a source for cash reserve and converted to currency only as needed."

Never carry anything of value in your hip pocket, he warned, and don't rely on a button to prevent a pocket from being picked. A rear pocket can be picked even by the beginning pickpocket, he advised, since they use such tools as a hook-shaped hacksaw blade that can quickly slit pockets and remove its contents.

Inside suit or sports coat pockets offer the best protection for wallets and travelers checks provided that the tops of the pockets are secured with a safety pin, Nachbar suggested. "This will prevent the pickpocket from "dipping" his hand into your pocket or being able to cut the steel shank of the pin.

Women are susceptible to their own version of the pickpocket — the purse-snatcher. Purses hanging from shoulder straps are particularly easy to swipe, he said. Handbags should be carried under the arm with the opening flap facing the body.

Other tips recommended are:

- Don't put valuables in suitcases that will be checked at the airport.
- Don't put travelers checks, money or other valuables in your briefcase.
- Be particularly watchful of anyone trying to divert your attention while at the airline ticket counter or the hotel registration desk. These are favorite areas for thieves who like to use the busy activity as cover to confuse their targets.
- Put all valuables in the hotel safe.
- Use the safety chain to secure the door of your hotel room.

"If a few basic precautions such as these are taken by the traveler, the thief will be forced to travel elsewhere, himself," Nachbar concluded.

Coming Attractions

Two of Thief River Falls' most appealing summer attractions are on the schedule this month with the Pennington county free gate fair and the Jaycee-sponsored Aquacade both expected to draw large crowds to Thief River Falls.

The county fair—a rural institution throughout all of Minnesota and no less a traditional event here—always provides interest and entertainment. Not only do the exhibits appeal to all ages but the scheduled public programs offer diversity and the carnival appeals to the young at heart. And the fair is always a popular gathering place to take a little time off from the worries and hurries of everyday living and sit down to exchange pleasantries with friends, neighbors and acquaintances.

As we have often mentioned before, the free gate fair is a real entertainment value. If you don't want to pay a small fee for auto parking you can walk right in for nothing. The handiwork of community citizens is on display for all to see and there is often some amazing craftsmanship among the items shown.

This year you can see a community talent show free of charge in front of the grandstand, witness local drivers with a bent for destruction demolish old vehicles in a demolition derby, listen to the music makers during an old-time fiddler's contest or view professional entertainment in the form of Jeannie C. Riley and the unique comedy team of Mahana & Jaspering.

Aquacade is another ambitious local project every year and the 1979 edition is no exception. Among the events are a six-mile marathon run, parade, Miss Thief River Falls pageant, slow pitch softball tournament, treasure hunt, softball grudge matches, water fights, disco contests, Wetbike fun frolic, archery tournament, kids' games, powerboat races, barbecue contest and fireworks.

Much of the cost of the summer Aquacade festival is covered by funds raised through the sale of Aquacade booster buttons. To be seen wearing one marks you as a person of good taste for it serves as a badge of community support. Be a booster of both the fair and Aquacade this year.

Changing Viewpoints

Columnist Art Buchwald has a knack for taking items in the news and treating them with a humor that often shows the truth in a different light. We rarely fail to enjoy his writing and believe that a recent offering on the fuel crisis to be a masterpiece.

In case you missed it, Buchwald jumped on a news item that noted California Senator S.I. Hayakawa fell asleep during a White House meeting on his state's oil crisis. The columnist said the senator did the right thing, because whatever government officials tell us, they'll change their mind the next day. As examples, he wrote the following:

"President Carter believes the oil companies are responsible for the shortage.

"The President doesn't believe its the oil companies, but the American people, who are not taking the oil crisis seriously.

"Mr. Carter said the people who are really responsible are members of Congress.

"Decontrolling oil should be the incentive to our nation's fuel industry to look for new oil.

"We've got to conserve our fuel resources and the only way to do this is to charge more for the product.

"Americans will pay any price for gasoline, and therefore the only people to gain by high prices will be the oil companies.

"We can save billions of barrels of oil a day if people would take mass transit.

"Mass transit doesn't work.

"The farmers should have first priority on our fuel resources.

"States which depend on tourism must be given more consideration for gasoline allocations than states that do not.

"At the same time, industrial states must be assured of enough fuel to keep their factories humming.

"The department of energy has ordered refineries to cut back on making gasoline for cars and start stockpiling heating oil.

"The department of energy has just changed its mind and is now urging refineries to continue making gasoline.

"Things should be better in June than they were in May.

"June will probably be worse than May and so will every month that doesn't have an R in it.

"The CIA and the department of energy and the oil companies cannot seem to agree on how much oil reserves there really are.

"Mexico is still mad at energy secretary James Schlesinger and that's why we can't get Acapulco crude.

"It's still cheaper to send Alaskan oil to Japan than it is to Houston.

"The OPEC counties will probably raise the price of crude when they meet next month, and therefore we shouldn't send them any wheat.

"There is no gas shortage.

"There is a gas shortage.

"The oil companies are holding back.

"The oil companies can't do any more until the environmental laws are changed.

"California will get more oil.

"California will get less.

"God only knows how much California will get."

Ridiculous as the situations mentioned may seem, there is very little exaggeration in the column. It may be difficult for us to laugh at ourselves while waiting in a gas station line, but it will be more difficult in a cold house or business place if heating fuel becomes impossible to obtain. The humor of the Washington merry-go-round will rapidly fade in the face of what would be a real crisis.

High Price of Food?

Following editorial is from the Detroit Lakes Tribune:

We hear a lot about the high price of food, and anyone who has purchased groceries recently can't help but note the upward movement of prices on literally every item.

A recent survey undertaken by the International Labor Office reveals some interesting things about where the money goes, world-wide.

For families living in some countries in Africa, Asia and Oceania, 50 to 60 per cent of their consumption budget goes for food and drink.

People in some parts of Latin America, the USSR and some East European countries spend about 40 to 50 per cent on food, while West Europeans spend 25 to 35 per cent.

Americans, Canadians, Australians and New Zealanders spend about 20 to 25 per cent.

The survey covered a period of eight years, from 1968 through 1976, and the data obtained sheds some light on present spending trends.

In developing countries households spend nearly all the money they receive for consumption purposes, such as food, clothing and shelter, transportation, education and medical care — all items defined as basic needs.

And there's not much left in their budgets for movies, concerts, plays and other types of cultural activities Americans take for granted.

Nor is there much, if any, allowed for eating out once in a while.

That gives you an idea of how many people in the world can't even dream in terms of boats, recreational vehicles, sports equipment, or vacations, to name a few more things Americans take for granted.

Americans spend more of their income on transport and communications, 23 per cent, than they do on food and drink.

Outlays for non-consumption purposes, a major part of which is income tax and other direct taxes as well as private investments, are about 13 to 18 per cent of total expenditures in the U.S., Australia, Canada, Finland, Germany and Israel.

When it comes to the food and drink budgets, there are some interesting differences: in Great Britain, about 18 per cent of the food budgets is spent on alcoholic beverages; Australia and Greenland follow closely with about 16 per cent. In Ireland it is 12 to 15 per cent; Denmark, Sweden and France, 8.8 to 9.5 per cent.

And in the U.S., the proportion of the food budget spent for alcoholic beverages is only 6 per cent.

Not that people in the U.S. drink less than other countries — this just points out the more lavish amounts Americans have to spend on food and drink.

Now, do those grocery prices still bother you?

SHORTER TURNING CIRCLE THAN LAST YEAR.
AROUND ACROSS

In many places, people have believed it good luck to walk around things. At early Roman weddings, for instance, the happy couple was supposed to circle the family altar before they were officially hitched.

Going in circles can be easier than ever, thanks to improved engineering on the new-sized Ford LTD. Its turning circle is almost four feet shorter than before, making it a lot easier to park. It also offers better handling and road stability than last year.

The distance around any circle is about 3.1417 times as great as the distance across the middle of the circle.

NEWS OF HEALTH

You: A Potential Stroke Victim?

According to the American Heart Association, stroke affects some 1,950,000 people a year and kills over 188,000. That's close to one in every 110 Americans who suffer strokes, and nearly one in every 1,100 is killed by them. Fortunately, those statistics are decreasing as American medical experts work on ways to prevent stroke and help stroke victims.

The Heart Association warns your chances of stroke increase if you are a male between 40 and 65, have high blood pressure, high cholesterol or diabetes, are overweight; exercise little and smoke a lot—or even moderately. Even if you don't fit that description, have your blood pressure checked every year and look out for:

- A sudden, temporary weakness or numbness of the face, arm or leg.
- Temporary difficulty or loss of speech or the ability to understand speech.
- Sudden, temporary dimness or loss of vision, particularly in one eye.
- An episode of double vision.
- Unexplained headaches or a change in your headaches.
- Temporary dizziness or unsteadiness.
- A recent change in personality or mental ability.

An annual check is a strike against stroke.

If you notice any of these signs, see a doctor. Prompt and proper care can lessen stroke's power.

One thing many doctors tell their stroke-prone patients to look out for is constipation. Doctors have found that this problem can cause a strain on the heart and blood vessels. One way to control constipation is with a gentle and predictable laxative such as Senokot Tablets or Granules. Virtually free from side effects in appropriate dosage, this natural vegetable laxative can be a great help keeping people in good health.

Those who do suffer a stroke, however, need not despair. Modern drugs and treatment can restore many victims to full and active lives.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Nearly four years ago, the National Chamber was the first to predict the coming of a new conservative age. Many of the so-called experts disagreed, but we were convinced, because every day we were hearing more complaints from people exasperated by inflation, runaway taxes and government bureaucracy. It wasn't long before others were saying pretty much the same thing.

In 1976, Jimmy Carter began cultivating these frustrations and quickly engineered a series of upsets over prominent liberals in the Democratic primaries. Carter campaigned as the outsider who would slay the bureaucracy, reduce welfare fraud and balance the budget. Among his more than 600 promises he pledged to drastically simplify the income tax system so that taxes on middle-income families could be reduced. And he specifically pledged: "I would never increase taxes for the working people of our country and the lower and middle-income groups. . .and you can depend on that if I am elected."

About that time, Margaret Thatcher, who is now Prime Minister of England, was also gaining national recognition by attacking bureaucracy, taxes and regulation. And with Britain hit by paralyzing strikes, she criticized excessive union power as well. So when you consider their backgrounds and listen to their promises, you might think these two leaders have a lot in common. Look again. Look at each one's performance: the differences are inescapable.

Mrs. Thatcher wants to make a clean break with the past because she's seen how socialism nearly destroyed her country. She will push for economic growth by promoting more freedom for individuals, rather than more power for the state. The same does not hold for President Carter. He has moved, systematically and dramatically, to increase the power of the federal government over the American people. Yet because he retains his campaign rhetoric and style, much of the public and the media still consider him a conservative.

People get confused. First, the President demanded his cabinet officers read all the regulations issued by their own departments. Then, he requested whopping increases for regulatory budgets, proposed a new department of education, a new department of natural resources and a new department of energy. The latter, now alive and well, thrives on an annual budget of some $11 billion, produces not energy but an energy shortage, and adds about nine cents to every gallon of gasoline we buy.

Most of us can still picture the President's first prime time address on energy. Dressed in a cardigan and seated before a crackling fire, he called for voluntary sacrifice and conservation. But the substance of his proposals actually represented what commentator Nicholas Von Hoffman called: "The most massive and minute peacetime intervention in business, industry and private life since the New Deal."

The public wondered why White House staff members first lost their limousine privileges, then were granted huge salary increases — increases, incredibly, rationalized as a savings. Despite claims of reductions by presidential spokesmen, the current White House staff is about the same size as President Ford's; its budget is almost twice as big.

And the contradictions continue. An austere federal budget, we are told, demonstrates the administration's commitment to fight inflation. Not quite. Federal spending has ballooned by nearly 25 per cent in the last two years, driving inflation back to double-digit levels. And the bottom line is this: Last year, American workers suffered the steepest tax increases in post-war history. Their take-home pay buys less today than in 1976. But the administration now claims inflation prevents it from granting us a tax cut.

Margaret Thatcher's government is young, faces tremendous difficulties and could fall. But already her policies are exhilaratingly bold. She is moving to denationalize industrial concerns, freeze the growth of the bureaucracy and slash government spending. Anyone willing to work harder will benefit from steep tax cuts.

Mrs. Thatcher believes people's earnings belong to them, not to their government. My, my, haven't we all come a long way. For weren't we the ones who originated that idea more than 200 years ago? In those days, we were the radicals and the British were the oppressors. What about now?

TECHNOLOGY ON THE MOVE

Rocket Ramjets Join The Fleet

In years to come, U.S. Navy aircraft may carry a new supersonic tactical missile — powered by a rocket ramjet engine — that can strike distant targets on sea and on land. A prototype (shown in the photo, below) designed to prove the concept recently made its first test flight at the Pacific Missile Test Center, Point Mugu, Calif.

The 1,500-pound test missile was launched by a light attack aircraft. It flew a distance of 90 miles at an altitude of 35,000 feet, and reached speeds of 2,000 miles per hour. At the end of its flight, the missile made a programmed dive into the Pacific Ocean.

The experimental missile was built by Vought Corporation under the technical direction of the U.S. Navy's Naval Weapons Center. Its advanced integral rocket ramjet propulsion system was developed by Chemical Systems Division of United Technologies Corporation.

An integral rocket ramjet has an internal solid-propellant rocket motor that accelerates the missile past the speed of sound. When the charge of solid propellant is exhausted, a series of in-flight mechanical changes occur that transform the motor into an air-breathing, liquid-fueled ramjet. The ramjet propels the missile all the way to its target.

THEN & NOW!

THEN: For centuries, people of the tropics have known a way to beef up meals. They've cooked their meat with papaya fruit to make it tender and juicy.

THEN: In the mid-1940s Adolph Rempp, a California chef, finally perfected a papaya-based mixture that enabled consumers to serve succulent, tasty steak dinners that they could really sink their teeth into.

NOW: With the high cost of meat, many consumers agree it's smarter than ever to stake about 2¢ a pound on meat insurance: Adolph's Natural Meat Tenderizer. Improving the flavor and texture of all cuts of meat, Adolph's also reduces shrinkage and cooking time. Its functional ingredient still comes from the papaya and it works naturally with no MSG!

Fabulous Failures!

The "Old Pretender" never succeeded in acquiring the English crown.

Many consumers can save if "bottle bills" don't become state law.

Some people in the 1700s thought it would be a great idea to restore the descendants of the deposed King James II of England to the throne. In 1708 and 1715, James Stuart, the "Old Pretender" attempted to invade Scotland and failed. In 1745, his son, Charles Edward, known as "Bonnie Prince Charlie," managed to land in Scotland, but in 1746, his army was crushed, and he escaped with little more than his life.

Some people in the 1970s have had the "great" idea to restore America to a less littered state by proposing "bottle bills." Actually, many places that have these bills have found that they not only don't work—they can often cause such problems as higher costs, lower employment and a greater accumulation of dirty bottles and cans in homes and food stores. In many states that have mandatory deposit laws, there has been a decrease in the variety of beverages and packages available to consumers and an increase in the prices of the products that are left. Retailers are concerned about the cost of deposit layouts, the inconvenience of daily handling the influx of returnables and the employment, storage and sanitation problems that are reported by-products of the law.

The Jacobite movement of the 18th century has long been considered by most a romantic, but hopeless dream. Many people are finding that the forced deposit laws of the 20th century though laudable in intent could become an impossible nightmare.

Here's to Your Health

BY WHEELOCK WHITNEY
President, Minnesota Council on Health

From time to time, we need to take a hard look at all the segments of our society. The need for evaluation applies equally to government and to the private sector.

Therefore, the recent examination by the Minneapolis Tribune of alcoholism treatment in Minnesota was worthwhile. The series was correct in labelling the chemical dependency field as a growth industry.

Too often, we hear only of successes in social programs, not the failures. The Tribune articles were an attempt to tell "the other side" of drug and alcohol programs. As the articles claimed, it is true that some people are misdiagnosed by professionals. It is true that some are mislabelled as alcoholics or addicts. It is true that some people don't get well in treatment.

While recognizing those truths, however, we shouldn't forget the benefits that have come from Minnesota's network of intervention and treatment programs. On balance, many more people are helped than are hurt by the system.

We have reason to be pleased that treatment is a growth industry in Minnesota. Thousands of individuals have been able to grow because of our drug and alcohol programs. Thousands of families have grown. Our humanity has grown. The general state of wellness has grown.

There is a danger in looking at only one side of a question. That was the flaw in the Tribune's series. It looked only at the negative aspects of treatment programs.

Because of that imbalance, the articles were misleading and potentially dangerous. They may persuade some people who really need it to avoid help.

About 10 million adults in America have serious drinking problems. One out of every five high school students gets drunk at least once a month. Figures like those should convince us that we have a massive public health problem in alcohol abuse.

As in many areas of health, Minnesota has been a national leader in the alcohol and drug treatment fields. Counselling, intervention and treatment programs are found throughout the state, in business and government, in small communities and large.

If it is a growth industry, it is one for which we can be thankful.

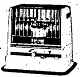
KERO-SUN portable heaters: so different, they're like an entirely new idea in heating comfort.

"Omni" models



"Radiant" models

Here is a line of portable heaters that is well known around the world, but new to the U.S.A. America, meet Kero-Sun! The "Radiant" models feature stainless steel reflectors for both quick-action radiant heat along with room-filling convection heat. "Omni" models deliver omnidirectional heat that warms every corner. There is a Kero-Sun portable heater that's ideal for that nasty cold spot. Great for supplemental heat. Ideal for leisure time activities — boat, barn, greenhouse, workshop, and garage. You name it!

Automatic Convenience
All Kero-Sun portable heaters offer a feature that people are particularly grateful for: the pushbutton lighting system. Press a button and a battery powered electric igniter automatically starts glowing right above the heater's wick. Within minutes your Kero-Sun is lighted and warming you. Convenient!

Quality Construction
We can talk about Kero-Sun quality — but the best proof is to see it for yourself. See the sturdy gauge of metal used throughout these heaters. See the handsome white, baked-enamel finish, carefully hand applied. See the stainless steel reflectors in "Radiant" models. See all the many construction features that say, loud and clear, "Quality."

Plus Other Features
Automatic shutoff in event of tilt-over (except Model K) ... operate without pressurization ... long burning duration ... three models feature radiant heat ... Clear View fuel gauge ... protective spill tray ... portable.

Space-Age Efficiency
Take a peek inside any Kero-Sun heater at its performance mechanism. You'll quickly realize what an advance in heater technology these unusual machines represent. The design is advanced, efficient, nononsense. Kero-Sun heaters truly make others you may have looked at seem old fashioned.

Tested For Pollution Safety
All Kero-Sun heater models have been tested for combustion by-products. The results are impressive: all models can be operated in continuous use with breathing safety. What's more, they burn with no annoying odor in operation, and no need for venting.

Budget-Wise Economy
Energy is expensive — that's why Kero-Sun heaters are "cheap-skates." With kerosene averaging 65-75c a gallon, their average cost of operation is only 3-5c an hour. In most areas of the country, it is far cheaper than supplemental electric heat. Biggest economy: you enjoy all the heat the Kero-Sun produces ... none goes up the flue pipe!

Thistle Caterpillar Considered No Threat To Area Sunflowers

Sunflower producers in the Thief River Falls area have expressed considerable concern over a greater than normal infestation of their fields by the thistle catepillar, according to Terry Courneya, Pennington county extension director.

The soft fleshy catepillar, gray to black in color with a broken yellow stripe along either side, is the larval stage of the painted lady butterfly.

"Despite the fact that some sunflower fields appear to be receiving considerable visible defoliation, there is little likelihood that chemical control is economically feasible," Courneya stated. "The larvae noramlly confine their feeding to two or three pairs of leaves and rarely consume enough during their 10-14-day feeding stage to cause measurable yield loss in the fields.

"The sunflower plant normally produces 12 to 16 pairs of leaves and is capable of normal yields if four to six pairs of leaves are healthy at heading time. In determining the feasibility of spraying, farmers are encouraged to exercise restraint before investing in the 15 to $6 per acre (1½ to 2 pounds of toxaphene) spraying costs," the agent said.

"A rule of thumb that can be used is to check the field closely in several places all the way to the center and back out again using a V-shaped pattern. Unless there is 25 per cent or more defoliation on an average throughout the entire field, and the larvae are less than an inch long, spraying is not warranted.

"Most sunflowers in the area are between 12 and 36 inches tall and will be producing from six to eight more pairs of leaves before heading. These new leaves are not likely to be damaged by the caterpillar," Courneya indicates.

Scattered reports of leaf damage by the larva stage of the sunflower leaf beetle have also been observed. Detailed counts of this insect in several fields indicate there is nothing of economic importance present at this time. University of Minnesota extension entomologist, David Noetzel, who was in the area last week to inspect a number of fields, says that indications are there will not be a serious infestation of this insect pest during 1979.

These findings concur with those of Dr. Charles Samuelson, a Thief River Falls entomologist employed by the Minnesota department of agriculture. "We will continue to monitor the insect problem in field crops closely and keep farmers informed of the infestation levels that justify chemical control," the county extension director indicated.

THISTLE CATERPILLAR is showing up in farily large numbers in area sunflower fields but is generally not considered to be a great threat to the crop. Extension agent for Pennington county, Terry Courneya, said that there is little likelihood tham chemical control is economically feasible. The thistle caterpillar ties the leaf together with a webbing and consumes large portions of the leaf. This distinguishes its damage from the shot holing pattern caused by feeding habits of leaf beetles which have also been observed.

Public Hearing On Greenwood Street Slated

Public hearing will be held Tuesday, July 24, to determine whether Greenwood street should be extended to cross the Soo Line railroad company tracks in Thief River Falls, according to Larry McNamara, director, office of railroads, ports and pipeline administration, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

Testimony on the proposed crossing will be heard by a state hearing examiner at 9:30 a.m. in the basement meeting room of the Pennington county courthouse, First Street and Main avenue, Thief River Falls.

The city of Thief River Falls has asked Mn-DOT to make a determination in this matter. Affecting the determination will be the need for the crossing, train frequency, train and automobile speeds, visibility in the area and projected number of vehicles crossing the tracks daily.

Mn-DOT has notified interested parties of the hearing.

After the hearing examiner's report is issued, exceptions may be filed by parties to the proceedings. Mn-DOT issues the final order adopting, amending or rejecting the report.

What does the cost of a McDonald's hamburger and a complete steak dinner for two have to do with fire protection from the Thief River Falls fire department? It is a comparison of approximate yearly per capita costs of protection for township residents versus city residents.

With approximately 25 per cent of the assessed valuation of the service area, 25 per cent of the population and 25 per cent of the annual calls, townships, according to 1978 figures, paid a per capita fire protection fee of 17 to 72 cents compared to $16.55 for city residents.

In the opinion of city officials the figures indicated that the city has in the past actually subsidized fire protection to the rural factions. As a result, the city recently initiated contract negotiations with the five affected townships hoping to work out an agreement through which the townships would bear a reasonable amount of the cost of fire protection.

Present contract between the city and the rural factions was entered into in of November of 1973, and was designed as a five-year contract; however, it will remain in effect until a 30 day's notice to terminate is given by either party. Under the current contract the townships carry liability insurance covering personal injury and property damage arising out of the operation of the fire fighting equipment and also pay maintenance fees for rural equipment. At the present time the rural fire association owns two trucks, a 1954 model and a 1974 diesel, both of which are housed by the city fire department at no charge. The five townships who are members of the rural fire association, Norden, Smiley, North, Rocksbury and Silverton, also pay fire call fees of $40 for the first hour and $20 for each additional hour. Money from the fire calls goes into the volunteer firemen's relief association budget.

Initial proposal from the city in negotiations for a new contract called for a $20,000 yearly assessment to be payed by the townships in addition to the current hourly fees and insurance and maintenance costs. The $20,000 would go to the city to help cover the operating budget for the fire

The Lady Is A Brakeman . . .

Melvie Carries On Railroad Tradition

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Despite the fact that five other children in the family decided against railroad work, Kay Melvie's dad discouraged her from following in his footsteps as a Soo Line employee. It wasn't that Earl Melvie didn't think railroading was an honorable means of employment, he was concerned for the safety of his daughter in what can be a hazardous occupation.

Kay wasn't content to seek an office job or something similar. She wanted to be a brakeman, a job that makes strong men grunt and sweat and occasionally cuss a little. And after her dad's 20 years of experience in railroading, Kay knew what the brakeman's job was all about when she applied.

"I guess I really didn't think I'd get it," she said about the job she has held since June 22 of 1978. "I applied in April and there was a stack of applications this thick," she said, holding her thumb and index finder a couple of inches apart. "But I guess there was a push on to hire females and that may have helped. I don't know for sure, but I think so."

Although she says she may have worked harder at doing a good job because some people didn't think she could last through the winter, she isn't out to prove anything about female equality. "I'm not a libber," she says flatly. "I don't go for all that stuff. I'm doing this because I like it and I'd really just as soon that there aren't any more girls doing it."

Why that opinion? "I get along good with the rest of the guys," she says. "They kid me a lot but they're always ready to help if I really need it. They treat me real good and I like the comradery. With other women around there would probably be just a lot of bickering (her second choice of descriptive word) and that wouldn't be any fun."

After a year of summer sweat and winter frostbite, Kay insists there isn't a thing she doesn't like about the job. "I really look forward to going to work," she said. "Last winter the switches were frozen a lot and it was really cold. It was physically harder than I thought it would be. But you bundle up and work a little harder and get the job done. It's really not all that bad."

So far Kay has done most of her work in the Soo Line yard at Thief River Falls. She has made four road trips and WATER SKIING is one of the favorite summer time activities for Cindy Poissant, one of 11 candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title at the Jaycee Aquacade pageant July 28. Cindy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Poissant and a 1979 graduate of Lincoln high school.

Extreme interest in the medical field, stimulated by volunteer work as a Candystriper at Northwestern hospital and her part-time work at Oakland Park nursing home and the Thief River clinic, have led Cindy Poissant into enrollment in the LPN program at the Thief River Falls AVTI this fall.

Cindy is the 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Poissant of Thief River Falls and a 1979 graduate of Lincoln high school. She is five feet six and one-half inches tall, weighs 118 pounds, has blonde hair and blue eyes. Her pageant talent number will include flute and piano.

There was a general opinion around Lincoln high school the last couple of years that if it was possible for man to write a song it was likely that Jane Olson could sing it. Music and drama were major activities for Jane during her high school years.

Jane is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Olson of rural Thief River Falls and a 1979 graduate of Lincoln high school. She is 18 years old, has brown hair and blue eyes, is five feet five inches tall and weighs 125 pounds. Her pageant talent number will be an Italian operatic number.

Centering the serving table was a three-tiered anniversary cake, baked and decorated with gold roses by Margaret Rupprecht. Topping the cake was a floral wreath surrounding a 50th anniversary bell, a gift from Mrs. David Dupree, a niece of the couple. Mrs. Dupree cut and served the cake as Mrs. Dennis Kalnz, a niece, poured the coffee, made by son-in-law Doug Jensvold. Steve Jensvold, the couple's grandson, served the punch.

Relatives and friends attending were from Ashland, Wis., Spokane, Wash., Grygla, Goodridge and Thief River Falls.

Greetings were received from Mrs. Roller's sister, Mrs. Forrest (Julia) Rice of Ephrata, Wash., (who was maid of honor) and her husband. Other greetings were from relatives and friends in Washington, California, Oregon, Colorado and Minnesota.

Mrs. Walter Fischer Receives State Award

Mrs. Walter Fischer, a longtime member of the Campanula garden club, has been selected recipient of the Minnesota Horticultural society merit award. Announcement of the selection was made to the local garden club by letter which was read at Wednesday's meeting. The award was to be presented at the state convention at Marshall.

The meeting of the local club was held at the home of Olga Johnson. Present were eight members and two guests: Mrs. Agnes Anderson of Oregon, and Mrs. Sindey Wilson, a member of the Moccasin garden club. Roll call was a phenology report, including birds, flowers, animals and pests seen and the variety of vegetables now being used.

President Geneva Overum presided at the meeting. She announced that the Pennington County fair was scheduled for July 19-22, the State Convention at Marshall, July 13-15, and the 13th District Flower show set for August 8 at Viking.

Several reports were given. Bernice Knutson gave the monthly phenology report, which included the period from June 13 to July 11; and Bertha Hastad told of her trip to the East Coast and Washington, D.C., illustrating her report with pictures of flowers, trees and mountain scenery. The regular meeting reports were given by secretary Mr. Emil Koglin, treasurer Olga Johnson, and good cheer chairman Bernice Knutson.

A report was also given on the iris show held at the library meeting room. It was noted, that in addition to a variety of iris, a gloxinia, two specimen from a peony tree, and a cultivated yellow moccasin flower were displayed.

The monthly lesson featured a demonstration in flower arranging by Mrs. Sidney Wilson. In addition to giving tips on the variety of containers that add interest to arrangements, she assisted the members in making small arrangements to be used in rose bowls.

Lunch was served by Miss Johnson. During the social hour, the happy birthday song was sung for Agnes Anderson and Bertha Hastad.

musicals "The Boy Friend" and "Sound of Music" were among Jane's most public performances. She also earned star rating in regional music contests, won the Region 1 talent contest held as a preliminary to state fair competition last year and was selected as a member of the all-state Lutheran choir where she was accorded soloist honors this year.

She sang in the high school choirs for four years, including a number of solo appearances and has shared her vocal talent with others through singing at wedding, community meetings and social events.

At Lincoln she also was ninth grade class secretary, sophomore class president and student senate member as a junior and senior, serving as senate secretary last year. She was active in one-act plays, participated in community theatre and was a member of the Lincoln Usherettes.

Jane is the youngest of four Olson children. Kathryn is 24, Scott 23 and Bryan 21. For five years Jane was a member of the City View 4-H club and exhibited at the county fair, winning one state fair trip with a grand champion exhibit.

In addition to singing, Jane enjoys listening to music and playing the piano. She reads and watches drama as well as participating and lists bike riding and sewing among other favorite activities.

This fall she will enter Bemidji state university to study voice with John Keston and work toward a degree in vocal music education. She also hopes to continue in choir and drama activities in college.

In addition to Candystriping and clinic work, Cindy took the health occupations course at the Northwest vocational center while in school and has recently competed the emergency medical technician program at the East Grand Forks AVTI.

Active in other high school programs she went to regional competition as a sophomore and junior in the speech program, was on the debate squad, served as a basketball cheerleader as a sophomore, served as secretary-treasurer of the VICA club and earned entry into the state health skill olympics contest through the DECA chapter and regional competition.

She is involved in the "special friend" program and serves as a "big sister" to a younger friend and has taught Bible school and Sunday as well as playing piano for church events.

At the conclusion of the boat races, the day-long barbecue contest between local business and civic groups will conclude and the evening barbecue supper will begin. A huge fireworks display will conclude the day's events at dusk.

Contract For Fire Protection Is Discussed

Counter proposal from the townships presented June 21 suggested a $5,000 a year assessment and an increase of current fees from $40 to $100 for the first hour and from $20 to $50 for each additional hour with the city paying all insurance costs.

In a meeting held Thursday, July 12, the Thief River Falls fire department presented another proposal drawn up through joint meetings with the finance committee. That proposal called for a contribution from the townships of one mill, in 1980, or approximately $10,000; and contributions equivalent to two mills or roughly $20,000 annually for calendar years 1981, 1982 and 1983. Fire call fees would remain the same with the payments still going to the volunteer fireman's relief association. Normal maintenance of equipment and insurance costs would be paid by the city unless maintenance costs exceeded $500. In that case the excess would be picked up by the townships.

The proposal of the city was also rejected by the approximately 20 township officials who were in attendance at the Thursday meeting. Among the arguments presented by the township representatives objecting to the $10,000 and $20,000 proposed assessments were that the city was not taking into account the fact that the townships owned two pieces of equipment; that the townships get less benefit from the fire protection because the response time is longer; and that, while a businessman can raise his prices to cover his costs, the majority of the rural residents are farmers who have no control over crop prices and would not be able to afford the extra mill or two mills involved. Rural representatives also reminded the city that if it did not have the township equipment it would fall from a class six department to class seven fire department because the number of gallons it could pump per minute would be reduced. It was also observed that even if the city were not serving the rural faction, they would not reduce the size of its department or operating costs.

Rational for the city proposal was explained and it was noted that the city had taken into consideration the longer response time to the townships and the fact that the townships did own some equipment. With a $160,000 budget proposed for 1980, if the townships were asked to bear ¼ of the cost on the basis of their having 25 per cent of the population, annual calls and assessed valuation, the request would be for $40,000. The city, however, was only ultimately asking for half of that because officials do realize response time is slower for greater distances and that the townships do own their own equipment. City personnel also commented that the townships should also remember that, because they do live greater distances, it is more costly to serve them than city residents and that wear and tear on equipment is greater for that service. Rural citizens were also reminded that they are not presently making any contribution to the actual operation cost of the firehall and that just to house their equipment outside of the city firehall they would have to pay more than the $880 paid to the volunteer fireman's relief association in 1978 in fire call fees.

Manpower was cited as the most costly item involved in the fire department and it was explained that one of the methods the city had used to estimate what a fair contribution by the townships would be was to add together the annual cost of one of the city's seven full time fireman ($18,624), four of the city's 23 volunteers ($1,120), and a 24 per cent share of the depreciation of the fire hall ($3,840) for a total of $23,574. From that figure the city subtracted the amount of state aid it receives as a result of its service to the townships ($3,046) to arrive at $20,538, again very close to the ultimate $20,000 contribution the city is asking from the five townships.

It was also explained that the $160,000 budget mentioned by the city does not include payments on the fire hall bond issue or depreciation which are estimated at $35,000 and $10,000 per year, respectively. With the inclusion of these figures the fire protection cost for one year actually rises to $205,000 making the $20,000 assessment requested of townships only a 10 per cent contribution.

If the townships were to pay a $20,000 assessment and the five townships' contributions were computed on the basis of both population and assessed valuation approximate contributions would be Smiley, $3,040; Rocksbury, $7,030; North, $5,070; Norden, $2,320; and Silverton, $2,540.

At the Thursday meeting it was also suggested that a formula, designed by Leonard Kopp of Mound, be used to determine fire service charges to the townships. The formula would take into consideration per cent of use of the fire department and per cent of assessed valuation of the protected area. The formula may be tested in future negotiations between the two parties.

Following private consultation Thursday, townships voiced a desire to have 60 days in which to seek out additional information, possibly holding a meeting of township residents to gain their opinions. Following the 60 days, they would again meet with city representatives and perhaps present a second counter proposal. Thursday, September 13, has been set as the tentative date for that meeting. City target date for completion and execution of the new contract is December 1, 1979.

Cheryl Felling Bridal Shower Set At Plummer

Cheryl Felling will be honored at a bridal shower on Tuesday, July 17, at 7:30 p.m., at the Catholic church basement at Plummer.

All friends and relatives are welcome to attend.

The modern funeral has a two-fold purpose: It is a ceremony during which relatives, friends and associates pay their respects to the deceased - and comfort to the survivors. It usually lasts a period of two to four days, and takes place in the presence of the body of the one who has died. This helps to confirm the reality of death, which is essential for the mental health of the bereaved.

Respectfully,

Kay Melvie Is Brakeman For Soo Railroad

expects to make more in the future but so far prefers working in the yard. Most of the time she works an eight-hour shift five days a week and knows 24 hours ahead of time when she is scheduled to work. Once in awhile she gets called to fill in for someone else.

Kay graduated from Lincoln high school in 1976 and took a year of architectural drafting at the area vocational-technical institute here. She also worked as an aide at Northwestern hospital for about six months but found that job not to her liking. Neither was she interested in going into railroad drafting department.

"I wanted to be outdoors," she said. Her wish has come true. Shifts at the switch yard here run from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. (day shift), 3:30 to 11:30 p.m. (afternoon shift) and 11:30 p.m. to 7:30 a.m. (night shift). "We call that one (11:30 to 7:30) the midnight delight," Kim grinned. It's a shift she pulls quite often.

A member of the United Transportation union, she is working her way up the seniority ladder. "There are a couple of guys with less seniority than me now," she said. "I'm eligible to be a yard foreman but I don't want to take it yet. I want a little more experience. Maybe this fall I'll take it. Eventually I'm going to be a conductor. That's my goal right now."

Kay has no doubt at all that railroading is going to be her career. Is the pay better than that earned by most other women her age? "Oh, for sure!" Kay says. "We're not supposed to talk about dollars that much, but the pay is good. I don't think there are many gals earning what I make on the railroad. . .except maybe hookers," she laughed.

While she has been able to work regularly most of the time, there were a couple of months last winter when she worked only three days during a whole month. She didn't care for that aspect of the job but she took it in stride. Things have been a lot better lately.

In her job she uncouples cars, makes joints, opens knuckles, relays signals to the engineers and rides the brake to slow cars down and reduce impact during switching. All of the jobs are part of the necessary work to be done in "following the mix", or making up the train in the manner prescribed by the foreman. And the work goes on rain or shine, snow or sleet, daytime or night time.

Is the job dangerous? It has been known to produce injuries, more than a few, but Kay insists that "if you're careful there's no way you can get hurt." Her parents worry less now that she has proved her abilities, but Kay's reminder that people can also "die at a desk" isn't totally reassuring.

When she isn't working, Kay rides her motorcycle, plays with the family's dogs, practices on the piano or organ or shoots pool.

And every day she goes to work she is carrying on the family's railroad tradition. "I like that," she says. "I like that a lot."

Senator Gives His Support To Stills For Fuel

"Ideas like this car and its fuel may well be a major factor in overcoming our energy crisis," said Senator Rudy Boschwitz this week after viewing the Baron, otherwise known as the "Spirit of Minnesota."

The "Spirit" was driven to Washington, D.C., from Howard Lake on a fuel mixture of alcohol and water. Accompanying it were the developers and the men behind its special fuel—Max Prinzing and Jeff Ellefson of Howard Lake and Jeff's brother Ron of Montevideo.

They dramatized their journey to the capital through the car, a vehicle specially designed by Baron Industries which Prinzing founded.

However, what they really came to Washington to talk about was the car's fuel—alcohol distilled from vegetation in a solar system "still" at a cost to them of 13 cents a gallon.

They'd like to build more of these stills and sell them to customers so they could make their own low-cost fuel at home.

"There are two strong selling points to their idea. Number one, the solar system stills they've developed can make fuel from a number of agriculture products. This use would certainly help to reduce our dependency on imported oil," Sen. Boschwitz said.

"Point number two, their idea will help create new uses for farm products. These men have come up with a very imaginative, a very good idea. I intend to give them my full support.

"Right now, there's unfortunately a barrier standing in the way of commercial production of the stills. That is an anachronistic law which forbids this kind of home 'still' on the theory that the alcohol produced is going to be sold as liquor," the senator said.

"We've got a bill in the Senate that would provide a waiver for stills which are used to produce alcohol for fuel, and I will be a cosponsor.

"My staff and I are also working hard to find a source of financing to help out these men. We've contacted the small business administration and the department of energy to find out what's available in loans.

"We're also working with the bureau of alcohol to see what they can do to nurture this project rather than kill it with obsolete taboos," he added.

"I've said many times that answers to our energy problem will not come from the department of energy and its confusing network of regulations and often contradictory allocation system. The answers will be found in the free marketplace and the enterprising spirit of creative individuals. I believe these three men and their idea prove my point."

According to the three Minnesotans, any car today can run on alcohol simply by adjusting the carburetor at an estimated cost of $300.

Inflation price you out of a new building? Take a look at Stran.

And reconsider.

As your Authorized Stran Builder, we're very much aware of how inflation has affected the cost of building new facilities.

Costs have risen dramatically for both materials and construction labor. That's why it makes good building sense to take a look at Stran's building systems approach. Why?

• Most of the building is fabricated in a modern manufacturing plant to take advantage of automation and more productive man-hour utilization.
• The system is designed and produced to go together fast at your job site. Saving valuable man-hours in on-site construction costs.

So before calling off your plans for a new building, call us and let's see how we can help you deflate inflation. We may have you breaking ground after all.

"Pretty Kettle of Fish"

Manager Bob Graham of PKM electric cooperative at Warren knows well the involvement of the government in business operations. While rural cooperatives benefit from low interest loans from Uncle Sam, they are also subject to controls placed on them and other public utilities.

In a recent issue of the cooperative's publication "The PKM News", Graham explains a couple of problems which illustrate how one hand of government restricts use of the other hand. Here is what he writes in his "Manager's Letter" column:

Not so long ago we were advised by Minnkota that its coal miner, Baukol Noonan Co., had received a 20 per cent slash of fuel needed to restore land after mining as required by law. If this ain't a pretty kettle of fish. On the one hand the government orders you to do something and on the other removes the means to do it. If this ridiculous impasse is permitted to long exist, it means ultimately you can't mine the coal needed to run the power plant.

However, the Basin Electric Cooperative of Bismarck, which serves more than 100 rural electric cooperatives over an eight-state Missouri River Basin area, is faced with a much more immediate and serious problem, according to a recent article appearing in the Fargo Forum.

The article states that its coal miner, Consolidated Coal Company, has informed Basin that it will be unable to meet its contract obligations to furnish coal this year because "existing federal policy has delayed utilization of lignite from federal coal leases that are checkerboarded throughout Consolidated's Glenharald Mine near Stanton." As a result, Basin will have to deplete its existing coal stock pile and may have to burn as much as 350,000 barrels of oil during the next 9 to 10 months at an additional cost of $5 to $6 million. More to the point: Is the oil going to be available at any price?

How's that for government bungling? Despite the nation's increasing dependence on foreigners of dubious reliability for oil supplies and lengthening lines at gas stations, we must use more oil for electricity generation at a plant that is surrounded by millions of tons of coal just waiting to be mined and used.

I verily believe that if the government would confine itself to vigorous enforcement of anti-trust laws already on the books and require reasonable protection of the environment, we could solve the energy crisis of this country in a hurry (4-5 years) by simply letting old-fashioned greed take its course.

In other words, if prices for energy were allowed to rise to their natural level in the market place, there would be so many investors drilling for oil and using coal and shale to make synthetic substitute fuels that we would once again develop a reasonable relationship between supply and demand. This in turn would moderate prices and more importantly, the lethal inflation that presently afflicts the economy.

Unfortunately, our present policy based on government tinkering with the economic machine merely gums up the works, thereby artifically producing the same high prices, but with no hope for future reduction, since in the present "red tape" economy there is insufficient incentive for investors to develop new energy supplies.

I know there are some who won't agree with this approach. However, I think we'll all have to agree that what we're doing now isn't working.

$279,000 Fleecing

Following editorial is from the Renville Star-Farmer:

Taxpayers have probably been amused at times over the philantropic misadventures of governmental bureaus when they have been uncovered; more often, though, they have probably felt a renewed surge of frustration and anger at the seeming ease with which tax dollars are, on occasion, spread so prolifically.

So it must have been once more last week when the Department of Urban Development (HUD) and the Economic Development Administration were roasted by Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin for squandering $279,000 on a community center in Michigan, two miles from the nearest road. The senator awarded the two agencies his "Golden Fleece Award" which he has periodically used to point out similar governmental boondoggling.

The building was so remote, the senator noted, that when the roof caved in under heavy snow in February the incident went unnoticed until it was spotted by a wandering woodsman.

Construction of the remote building began after HUD approved a $100,000 grant in 1975. After construction began the community sought, and was granted, funds to build a road to the center. But the roof collapsed before the road was completed.

News reports last week quoted a township supervisor as criticizing HUD for stupidity in granting the money, failure to review the application or to supervise the construction and plans. And he is right. The incident is an example of colossal stupidity.

But, granting that, one must also concede that local officials who had the plans drawn, who applied for the grants, who saw construction proceeding, must have been just as colossally stupid. For it must have been on their initiative that the project was begun, and someone on the scene must have had plenteous opportunity to blow the whistle on the boondoggle long before it became a $279,000 fleecing.

Certainly federal — and state, too — agencies often throw tax money around wildly, and there's no acceptable excuse. But it's just as immoral for local citizens or their governments to partake in such forays on the public treasury.

We don't pretend to be moralists, but still we're inclined to say that it's probably even more immoral to, when the fleecing is uncovered, point the finger of scorn and ridicule at the federal government which, because of its bigness and remoteness, is suddenly transformed from a jolly Santa Claus to a handy whipping boy.

Surprise! Surprise!

Following editorial is from the Wheaton Gazette:

I told you so. You bet I'm going to say it. I did tell you so — time and time again. Everytime the Minnesota legislature took action during the past session to "kill" the domed stadium bill, I said hogwash. The Minneapolis Trib can print whatever it wants about the doings relating to the domed stadium, and the legislators can make all the noise they wish to about it, but when the cards are laid face up on the table, you're going to find a domed stadium built right in downtown Minneapolis — just the way the big boys want it.

That's really a shame. The stadium itself isn't a shame. I think it would be great. But it's a real tragedy that members of the Minnesota legislature, who are supposed to be representative of the people, simply do not heed the wishes of the people at all, and give ground to professional and moneyed interests to do their bidding.

A domed stadium in downtown Minneapolis would be fine — if it were built by Minneapolitans. There is not another ball park in the state of Minnesota, save those on state college campuses, which have not been paid for by the residents of the locales where they exist.

We are hearing a lot of chatter now about how Minneapolis is going to have to be willing and able to tax its people in order to make the payments on the bonds — if revenues come up short. But there are other taxes which are designed to pay the bulk of those costs. One of them, is a new tax on hotel room rates. They call that a local tax. But what resident of Minneapolis stays in a hotel in Minneapolis? None of them. Visitors to the city are the people who will be paying that tax.

But again, it all comes as no great surprise. I think the last minute vote by the legislature on the domed stadium was typical of this legislative body. They have been more than willing to act in a people-be-damned fashion throughout the session.

It seems to me that legislators are elected not to legislate according to their own whims and fancies, and certainly not at the bequest of those who may be able to apply pressure of one sort or another, but rather to represent the wishes and beliefs of their constituents.

I do not believe that this legislature has represented the people of Minnesota. I do not think it has ever tried. And it should follow that 1980 — still too far away; I fear — should bring about sweeping changes in the calibre of people who are seated as representatives of all of the people in the Minnesota State Capitol.

Interesting Opinions:

"I think the greatest curse of American society has been the idea of an easy millennialism—that some new drug, or the next election, or the latest in social engineering will solve everything."

—Robert Penn Warren

U.S. Senator Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

Washington, D.C. has been frequently described as 70 square miles surrounded by reality. Not surprisingly, one of the questions I'm asked most often when home in Minnesota is, "Rudy, how on earth do things really work out there?"

I can understand their perplexity; you almost have to see Washington's workings first hand to begin to grasp how the federal government has assumed its present unfortunate role of foe, rather than friend, in the minds of many Americans.

Something I find particularly disturbing is the sheer number of bills introduced in Congress each session. So far this term, 1,681 measures have been brought up for consideration by the Senate.

"How can a person keep track of them all?" Minnesotans usually ask when I mention this fact to them.

The sad answer, of course, is that no one Senator can give the kind of serious and thoughtful attention to each of those 1,681 measures that a piece of Congressional legislation should receive.

The alternative is to hire staffs of legislative assistants to keep track of bills as they're introduced and go through the committee stage where — by the way — the vast majority die. My attention comes when either a Minnesota group is interested in a particular bill and lets me know or when a bill actually is going to come onto the Senate floor for debate.

Many of these 1,681 measures represent serious and sincere attempts to solve a problem and are worthy of Senate attention.

Unfortunately, however, a large number seem to be cases of legislation introduced simply for political reasons with no serious expectation that the bill will actually get anywhere. These bills are usually poorly thought out, often unnecessary, and always time wasters.

They also continue the vicious cycle of increasing government in our lives and of growing government spending. As the number of measures considered by each committee grows, so does the size of that committee. And the committee's staff is then thought to need more members. And the committee's need for space increases. And new office buildings are decided necessary.

The growth of bills began its really dramatic proliferation in the 60's when a Great Society government sold us on the idea that within the federal government lay the answer to all life's problems. . .sort of a "Tell your troubles to Uncle Sam" approach.

Ultimately, the growth will stop only as more and more Americans realize that this approach has brought unpleasant side effects, namely non-desired interference in their lives and a mushrooming of government spending that's rending inflationary havoc on their incomes.

In the short term, within the Senate this year floor leader Robert Byrd is forcing consideration of legislation earlier in the session so that we'll avoid the last minute flood of bills that's occurred in other years and resulted in the hasty, slipshod passage of numerous laws that most Senators haven't even had time to read thoroughly.

There is one particular bill I'm looking at with great interest: It calls for a limit on the days that Congress may stay in session.

When I first came out here, I assumed that the longer and harder we all worked in the Senate halls and offices, the better off our constituents would be. I'm coming to realize now that the people we represent may well be safer if we spend less time in session and more time at home with them.

Congressional Pay Raises!

Inflation is pushing prices up dramatically, and in order to maintain the same standard of living many Congressmen and Senators favor boosting their own salaries by passing legislation permitting a cost of living raise.

Personally, I am against such a raise, and for this reason voted against the Legislative Branch Appropriations bill for 1980. This bill contained language allowing members of Congress and other top government officials to receive a 5.5 per cent pay raise, and this negative factor led to the defeat of the bill, 186-232.

The people of the United States are looking for answers to problems, and if Congress is going to play a leading role in reducing excessive government spending we must act responsibly and set a good example. We cannot continue to ask the private sector to limit spending while we continue to boost government spending.

The problem of Congressional pay raises goes back to 1975 when Congress adopted the Executive Salary Adjustment Act, which provides top government officials, including Congressmen and Senators, with automatic pay raises every year equal to those granted Civil Service workers. The purpose of this legislation is to keep Federal employee salaries comparable to those in the private sector. A Presidential Commission is charged with determining the percentage of increase, and unless recommendations are vetoed by either the House or the Senate, they go into effect each October 1st.

What this ridiculous law has done is eliminate the voting process in determining whether or not there should be a raise. For example, if Congress does not take action to veto the President's recommendation to increase wages, members of Congress will receive over an 11 per cent pay increase (5.5 per cent for last year and 5.5 per cent for this year).

The Legislative Appropriations bill was an attempt to reduce the amount of raises permitted to 7 per cent should either House decide to block the President's recommendation. On the House floor, an amendment offered and approved by voice vote reduced the increase level to 5.5 per cent. This amendment, however, was two-fold. It also had as its goal the establishment of exactly how each member of the House felt on the issue. A yes vote for the amendment established support of the pay raise, while a no vote symbolized opposition to any kind of pay raise.

I voted no on the amendment and I think it's a shame that Members of the House of Representatives were not willing to stand up and let their constituents know how they feel on this issue. The Speaker of the House denied a request that the vote be recorded, and virtually shielded members from declaring their positions.

Following a motion to reconsider, the House, in a recorded vote, supported overwhelmingly a 5.5 per cent pay increase. Although I did vote against the bill, I voted for this amendment. Since there was no way to vote to eliminate a pay raise altogether, I felt the lower 5.5 per cent increase was a better option than a 7 or 11 per cent increase. I am pleased to say that the bill failed.

Congress must now act on behalf of the people and come up with a successful version of the Legislative Branch Appropriations bill that seeks to eliminate pay raises for Congressional members. Americans are faced with double digit inflation, an energy problem that is getting worse, and record high taxes. If we expect people to sacrifice, to cope and to conquer these problems, Congress must lead the way and become more responsive to the needs of the people.

THROWING SWITCHES isn't too bad a job during the summer for even a little gal like five foot three inch Kay Melvie. But when ice and snow and 30 degree below zero weather hit in the winter, even the husky male brakemen are moved to exert extra muscle and call forth their full vocabulary. Kay spent last winter as a brakeman in the Soo Line rail yard here. "The guys are real good to help if you need it," she said about the sometimes frozen switches, "but most of the time I can handle it myself."

Minnesota Man Serves NEA As New President

Willard H. McGuire, who began a series of terms July 4, 1974 as NEA's first vice president, is the new president of the National Education association. He'll begin his two-year term September 1.

McGuire, a Long Prairie native and graduate of St. Paul's Macalester college, began teaching in 1950 in Clarkfield and in 1952 began teaching algebra and Spanish in North St. Paul-Maplewood.

Martrene Woodard, a Rochester, home economics teacher for 19 years, has been reelected to a second three-year term on the nine-member NEA executive committee.

Suggest Longer Call-In Period On Loan Grain

Farmers should be given 120 days, rather than 30, to turn in grain under loan to the government, once a trigger price level has been reached, Senator Rudy Boschwitz and the Senate agriculture committee recommended to agriculture secretary Bob Bergland this week.

"Presently," Boschwitz explained, "once the trigger price is reached, farmers must either turn in grain on which a loan has been made or pay back the loan and retain the grain themselves. Though the second course may be more profitable right now, a shortage of credit may prohibit a widespread practice of doing so," he said.

"With the 30 day limit on grain forfeiture, we can expect a drastic flood into the market," Boschwitz predicted. "That limit needs to be extended to provide for more orderly marketing."

Said the letter to Bergland: "Reserve stocks are part of our vital food security for the general public and they provide a system of orderly marketing for America's wheat producers. The forcing of stocks into the market in excess of one-half year's domestic food needs at harvest time violates both these objectives; it is disruptive to the market and an unwarranted depletion of essential food stocks."

Although the letter specified the problem facing wheat farmers, Sen. Boschwitz said growers of many crops could encounter the same dilemma if the call-in period is not extended.

CORRECTION

In the law enforcement report printed in the July 4 issue of the Times a portion of an accident report involving Victor Nolte and James Kalbakdalen was inadvertently omitted. The report should have read:

June 24, 2:45 p.m., Main Ave. & 4th St.: A car driven by Victor Nolte of Thief River Falls was traveling east on 4th St. while a second car, driven by James Kalbakdalen of Red Lake Falls, was headed north on Main Ave. and the two vehicles collided in the intersection. Damages to the Nolte vehicle were estimated at under $300 and to the Kalbakdalen vehicle, over $1,000. Kalbakdalen also suffered a sore left arm.

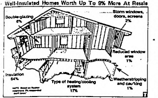
Hints For Homeowners

Well-Insulated Homes Worth Up To 9% More At Resale



Double-glazing 6%
Storm windows, doors, screens 2%
Reduced window area 1%
Insulation 64%
Type of heating/cooling system 17%
Weatherstripping and caulking 1%

Sixty-four percent of Realtors surveyed say home buyers see insulation as energy feature saving the most money.

The home buyer who makes sure his new house is well insulated today will gain extra returns when he sells it tomorrow, according to a national study of real estate experts.

The study, commissioned by The Dow Chemical Company, manufacturer of Styrofoam* TG brand insulating sheathing, showed that a well-insulated home can be worth an average of up to 9 percent more at resale.

This resale bonus can mean $9,500 extra at resale in seven years of today's average, well-insulated home priced at $66,000, said Thomas D. McGivern, product manager for Styrofoam brand insulation.

Resale may be the farthest thing from the new home buyer's mind. But national figures show the average mortgage lasts only seven years. Therefore, a buyer should plan his home for his own family—and also the family he will sell his home to.

The study showed insulation is a key element in the resale value of a home. Home buyers consider insulation as the energy-saving feature which will save them the most money, the experts said.

The study also revealed other benefits from energy-efficient homes:

—They are becoming easier to finance than homes lacking energy-saving systems. Energy efficiency helps the buyer obtain lower mortgage rates in some areas. And lower anticipated fuel costs can make the difference when the buyer tries to qualify for a mortgage.

—Energy-efficient homes are easier to resell. A marketable house saves aggravation when the owner puts it up for sale.

"Insulation clearly is regarded as an investment by many home owners today," said McGivern. "Not only will the owners enjoy the comfort and lower fuel bills a well-insulated, energy-efficient home offers, but the investment can pay for itself while they're still living in it. In addition to being a money saver, insulation is also a money earner since a well-insulated house can earn extra returns at resale."

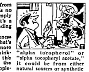
NATURAL VALUE



Getting the most from your consumer dollar is no longer a matter of simply spending less. Often it's a matter of understanding more.

With the new awareness of proper nutrition that's sweeping the country, more and more people are thinking seriously about the nutritional content of the foods and dietary supplements they buy. Homemakers are reading the labels as well as the price tags, and they are beginning to realize that good nutrition is good value.

But some people find label reading confusing—although many labels are actually easy to understand.

Take vitamin E for example. It can be purchased either in naturally derived or synthetic form—and recognizing the natural source product is as simple as reading the letter "d". What does this little "d" signify? It says you are buying vitamin E that comes from natural vegetable oils such as soybean oil and has been concentrated for use in capsules or tablets.

The scientific name for vitamin E is alpha tocopherol, and when it is found in nature, it occurs only in one isomeric form—the "d" form. Therefore, the correct name for natural source vitamin E is d-alpha tocopherol or d-alpha tocopheryl acetate. When vitamin E is manufactured synthetically, it contains eight isomeric forms including the "d" and "l" form. Therefore, synthetic vitamin E has a little "dl" preceding its name and is called dl-alpha tocopherol or dl-alpha tocopheryl acetate.

If the label on a bottle of vitamin E reads simply "alpha tocopherol" or "alpha tocopheryl acetate," it could be from either natural sources or synthetic sources or perhaps a combination of both. When the label shows both "dl" and "d", you know you are being offered a combination of synthetic and natural source forms.

The FDA has taken the position in proposed labelling rules that one cannot claim natural source vitamins are superior to their synthetic counterparts. In the case of most other vitamins, synthetic and natural source forms are identical in composition and in potency.

But synthetic vitamin E is made up of eight isomeric forms, only one of which is identical to natural source "d" form. Natural source vitamin E has a greater biological potency on a weight basis than the synthetic material, as is recognized in the Natural Formulary. On a weight basis, natural source vitamin E (d-alpha tocopherol) is about 36 percent more potent than its synthetic counterpart. This means to get the same number of International Units, users have to take more of the synthetic vitamin E by weight than the natural source material.

The well-informed consumer need not be confused by the two types of vitamin E. Natural source or synthetic source vitamin E? It's all in the name—and the name is on the label.

Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team, looking at a second place finish in the Northwest League standings, will complete its 1979 regular season schedule this week against three non-league foes.

Carrying an 8-3 record, Thief River Falls will be at Bagley Tuesday and will host Gonvick Friday in a pair of 7 p.m. games before closing with a 1 p.m. Saturday doubleheader against Bemidji in Thief River Falls.

Coach Terry Sullivan's Thief River Falls squad is assured of a second place finish in the Northwest League behind Crookston and ahead of Roseau, with Warren, East Grand Forks and Warroad rounding out the loop.

Crookston has the edge over Thief River Falls based on a 4-1 win when the semifinals of the July 7-8 Crookston invitational tournament. It was decided that game would count as a Northwest League contest after a regularly scheduled Thief River Falls-Crookston match-up was twice postponed by wet weather.

Crookston will complete its Northwest League schedule at Warren Thursday after taking a 12-7-1 record into a weekend tournament at Hibbing. In an interesting Northwest League game played Thursday, Crookston and Roseau played through a 2-2 seven-inning tie that was called because of darkness.

Ace left-hander Brent Stahlecker no-hit Roseau on 15 strike-outs. But he walked eight, giving up two runs in the fourth inning when two walks on an error loaded the bases, a sacrifice bunt by Brandon Shank scored the first run and a bases-loaded walk issued to Aaron Broten forced in the second.

Crookston also scored both of its runs in the fourth on a two-run, two-out double up the alley by John Panzer. But like Roseau, Crookston left the bases loaded.

Losing pitcher Mark Huglen, who scattered five hits while striking out six and walking six, also got out of jams in the second inning when Crookston loaded the bases with no outs and in the top of the seventh when Crookston had the bases loaded with one out.

The doubleheader here Saturday against Bemidji was expanded from a single game with addition of an earlier rain-postponed contest at Bemidji.

Bemidji took over the lead in its sub district race with a 13-5 rout of Park Rapids Thursday, lifting the team's record to 10-5 heading into a weekend tournament at New York Mills — their fourth straight weekend outing.

In the latest Bemidji statistics, Mike Bucanaga leads the club with a .545 batting average, followed by John Noga .500, Howie Orgon .478, Scott Pemberton .417, Dave Ashley .417 and Craig Erhart .326. Those high numbers has the Bemidji team batting average at .289.

Miscellaneous

+ Softball Notes: That powerfull Chuck's Off Sale men's slow pitch softball team of Wahpeton we mentioned here before lifted its season record to 51-3 by winning the fourth annual McQuade Distributing-Olympia Beer-Herry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy tournament at Bismarck, N.D., beating Minot Alley Cat 30-16 in the title game of the 233-team tournament billed as the world's largest invitational. . . Wright Construction, a competitor in the Thief River Falls Far North men's fast pitch softball tournament in June, strengthened its hold on third place in the Bemidji fast pitch league by claiming a 20-17 slugfest over O.K. Tire, improving its record to 7-6 which trails Skaars 10-2 and Moose 9-3. . . United States Slow Pitch Softball Association (USSSA), featuring 65-foot base paths, base runners who can lead off and pitchers who can pick them off, home run hitters who merely have to touch first base instead of circling the bases and a one-swing rule where a batter gets one swing — hit it fair or you're out — is gaining popularity in the Twin City area over the traditional ASA American Softball Association (ASA), which for decades has provided the national guidelines for all forms of recreational softball .

THE BALL BOUNCED away from the East Grand Forks Red catcher as Thief River Falls Elks base runner Greg Harder scored in the first inning of Thursday's Lake Agassiz Babe Ruth Southern Division Sub District baseball tournament game played on the Northland community college diamond. Umpire Brian Peterson watched the play.

Runner-Up Elks Earn District Berth . . .

EGF Blue Wins Babe Ruth Title

East Grand Forks Blue, surprising top-seeded East Grand Forks Red and the host Thief River Falls Elks, completed an unbeaten three-game championship performance Friday with a 12-11 title game victory over the Elks in the 1979 double-elimination Lake Agassiz Babe Ruth Southern Division Sub District baseball playoffs for 13-15-year-old ball players.

Played on the Northland community college diamond, the five-team event began Wednesday when Crookston beat Red Lake 12-3 and the East Grand Forks Blue began its surprisingly strong showing with a 10-3 victory over the Thief River Falls Elks, considered by some as the pre-tournament favorite.

Thief River Falls bounced back that afternoon to eliminate Red Lake Falls 9-1 while the East Grand Forks Red made its debut by beating Crookston 4-3.

Thursday's competition featured a 6-4 Blue triumph over the Red in an East Grand Forks match-up, with Thief River Falls advancing through the loser's bracket with wins over Crookston 11-4 and the East Grand Forks Red 7-3.

With both Friday finalists assured berths in this week's district tournament at Roseau, the East Grand Forks Blue won the higher seed with a 12-11 decision over the Elks.

Thief River Falls will take a 20-8 record to the district playoffs at Roseau Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Winner of the four-team, double-elimination event will earn a spot in the 1979 state Babe Ruth baseball tournament at Maple Lake.

EGF Blue 10, TRF 3

Beaten by the Elks 11-1 in the semifinals of the Thief River Falls invitational tournament three days earlier, East Grand Forks pulled off a major upset by winning the quick rematch 10-3 in Wednesday's post-season playoff opener.

Rick Langlie, who pitched a no-hitter against the Blue in the invitational event, was tagged for nine hits this time as East Grand Forks scored five times in the second inning and four more in the third. The Elks mustered just two base hits.

TRF 9, RLF 1

Greg Harder pitched a two-hitter, striking out 11, and Mark Harder led a seven-hit Thief River Falls offense with a 3-for-3 performance that included three RBI in a 9-1 Wednesday afternoon triumph over Red Lake Falls.

TRF 11, Crookston 4

Turning from pitcher to hitter, Greg Harder led Thief River Falls past Crookston 11-4 Thursday morning with a 4-for-4 game. Three of his hits were triples and he also drove in three runs.

The 12-hit Thief River Falls attack also featured Brent Schmitz and Rob Jorstad with 2-for-3 games.

Rob Blankenfeld was the winning pitcher, scattering seven hits while striking out eight.

TRF 7, EGF Red 3

Another 1-2 punch delivered by the Harders — Mark and Greg — knocked out the East Grand Forks Red 7-3 Thursday afternoon. The game offered the winner a district tournament berth.

Mark Harder was the game's winning pitcher, tossing a two-hitter that included nine strike-outs. Mark and Greg were both 2-for-4 at the plate with a pair of RBI' as Thief River Falls built a 5-0 lead through four innings.

EGF Blue 12, TRF 11

It required eight instead of the regulation seven innings, but the unbeaten East Grand Forks Blue managed to avoid a championship-deciding doubleheader against the once-beaten Thief River Falls Elks by claiming a wild 12-11 verdict in Friday's finals.

A five-run fourth inning built a 7-3 lead for the Blue who combined 11 hits with nine walks issued by losing pitcher Kerry Wollin and 10 Thief River Falls errors.

The Elks battled back and nearly pulled the game out in the bottom of the eighth before Rob Jorstad's hard line drive to second base ended the game with Thief River Falls runners on second and third.

Greg Harder starred offensively for the Elks with a 4-for-4 game that included two RBI. Tim Bergland and Jorstad were both 2-for-5 in the nine hit Thief River Falls attack, with Bergland driving in two runs.

Key Match-Ups Highlight Division Pennant Races

Key pennant race match-ups are on tape in all four divisions this week in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association.

Top divisional matches start tonight (Monday) when the Division I leading Rusty Nail Raiders (13-3) face the TRF Merchants (13-5) who share second place with Tony Dorn, Inc.

On Tuesday, Division II leader First Federal Savings & Loan Association (10-4) will go against the St. Hilaire Bears (9-4) who, along with The Get-A-Way, can match the leaders' loss total but are a game off the pace in the win column.

Division III takes the spotlight Wednesday when front-running Arctic IWA (10-2) meets the challenge of preseason favorite Phase II (8-5), now in third place after a slow start.

Wilson Brothers Co. (10-2), just a game behind Division IV leader Jean Junction-Rundell Electric in the win column, will try to keep pace with a Friday test against a Smith & Holthusen team that has won four straight games since suffering back-to-back 9-7 losses to the two leaders.

Division I

A doubleheader winner Wednesday, Tony Dorn, Inc. became a Division I challenger when Dennis Bendickson shut out Hobo Haus 3-0 and then drove in three runs in a 9-3 victory over Hartz.

Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. split a Wednesday twinbill, losing to the TRF Merchants 15-4 but beating Hobo Haus 8-4.

Wagon Wheel beat Hartz and Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. in a Friday doubleheader, with the TRF Merchants duplicating its Wednesday victory over Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc.

Division II

First Federal Savings & Loan Association took over the Division II lead with an 8-6 victory over Home Lumber Thursday when Rick Holmes went 3-for-3, followed by a 14-7 triumph over Bridgeman's Friday.

Bridgeman's also lost a 14-1 decision to Popplers-Action Realty Thursday to fall two games off the pace in the tight eightpteam standings while the St. Hilaire Bears stayed in the thick of things with a 14-9 win over Popplers-Action Realty.

Elsewhere, Murray Melander homered as Home Lumber beat Dallmann Athletic, Inc. 13-7, with the losers rebounding to knock off Hamms-Pizza Hut 6-4.

Division III

Schumacher's Tireland tightened the Division III race with two wins Wednesday, one against division-leading Arctic IWA after a 20-6 opening win over First Northwestern Insurance Agency.

Phase II beat McDonald's twice, 8-5 and 14-11, Great Northwest Agency, Inc. doubled Consumer's Co-op Association 10-5 and First Northwestern Insurance Agency beat The Club 11-6 while picking up a forfeit over McDonald's.

Division IV

Pete Lee homered as Jean Junction-Rundell Electric triumphed over Kmart 10-3 Thursday to break a first-place stalemate with idle Wilson Brothers Co.

Smith & Holthusen belted Tip & Ring 23-6 as Sid Brouse and Rick Nelson both went 4-for-4 and Lon's Restaurant & Pub out-scored the TRF Aggies 18-8 in a battle for last place.

Wed., July 18 — Schmidts vs. Melvies, 7:30 p.m.; Action Realty vs. Coca-Cola, 9 p.m.

A unique string on six consecutive one-run ball games in the Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league came to an abrupt end in the first half of a Wednesday doubleheader when Coca-Cola did a number on Schmidts, 14-1.

Coca-Cola started the game in the usual manner in the first inning when Roger Cota drew a walk and was sacrificed to second by Rob Almquist. Gordie Peterson the unloaded an RBI double, moving to third on an error. First of three Tom Goddard singles made it 2-0.

It wasn't until the third inning that it became obvious the league's string of six straight one-run ball games dating back to June 29 would be severed.

Tony Johnson and Goddard singled to start the third. Paul Walker put down a sacrifice bunt and Wayne Gutterud drilled a double to right field to start Schmidts' demise. A fielder's choice play on a ball hit by Tom Drury produced an error instead of an out, making it 5-0. It became 7-0 before the inning was over.

Schmidts scored in the fourth inning on Howard Dalager's lead-off triple to right and Larry Coltom's sacrifice fly.

Cota lifted his league-leading batting average to .478 with two hits in three at-bats.

Melvies 2

North Star Transport established a league record with eight sacrifices in turning back upset-minded Melvies 3-2 as the one-run trend returned in the second half of Wednesday's twin bill.

Top of the first inning produced a 2-0 start for North Star Transport as Darrel Stromlund walked and went to second on Tom Neibauer's sacrifice bunt. A throwing error scored Stromlund and moved Neibauer to second. He went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Jeff Vacura's single to center.

Melvies cut the gap to 2-1 after three innings when Erv Melvie smacked a one-out single to left, Tom Shetler was safe on an error, Rick Kofstad's fielder's choice play loaded the bases and Darwin Nelson drew an RBI walk from Neibauer who got out of further trouble by striking out Keith Charbonneau to end the inning.

After missing a chance to tie the game in the fourth, Melvies got the equalizer in the sixth when Jay Kverno walked, stole second and scored on Greg Kofstad's one-out single to center. In the fourth, Kverno had doubled to open the inning and went to third on Karl Chromy's fly ball to center. But on an appeal it was ruled that Kverno left the bag before the catch. Greg Kofstad followed with a base hit that could have scored Kverno.

North Star Transport broke the tie in the top of the seventh when Stromlund walked, went to second on an error on Neibauer's fourth sacrifice of the game, stole third and with one out, scored on Mike Carriere's sacrifice fly to center field.

Melvies, a first-time winner a week earlier in a 1-0 upset of Dallmann Athletic, Inc., threatened to extend North Star Transport to extra innings by getting a runner into scoring position in the bottom of the seventh. But the run was stranded at second as Neibauer got Charbonneau to bounce out to end the game.

DuChamp lost his shutout bid in the bottom of the seventh when Mike Durry led off with a triple to right and scored on Bruce Johnson's ground-out. Dallmann Athletic, Inc. put the tying and winning runs into scoring position before DuChamp fired a game-ending third strike past Gary Laidley.

Mike Drury Is New Fast Pitch Batting Leader

A new listing of top ten Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball hitters features a new leader this week, according to figures released by league statistician Dick Bjerken.

Mike Drury of Dallmann Athletic, Inc. now heads the list with a .360 batting average on nine hits in 25 at-bats. Wayne Smith of Action Realty is second in the July 13 figures with 11 hits in 31 at-bats for a .355 average.

Roger Cota of Coca-Cola, announced as the league's top hitter a week earlier, actually improved his batting average from .450 to .478 but fell out of the top ten because he doesn't have the necessary 24 at-bats to qualify for the listing. He was 23.

A strong of strong performances by the league pitchers has also taken its toll on the batters, with the number of .300 hitters reduced from 11 to six.

Minnesota AAA Reports Gas Supply Adequate

Gasoline supply situation in Minnesota appears good, according to the latest survey by the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA). Almost all outstate gasoline stations reported that gas supplies are adequate in their areas.

"In the metropolitan area you can easily find gas if you fill up early in the day," commented Roger Jolicoeur, spokesperson for the automobile club of Minneapolis.

"Prices are still inching upward, but the number of stations open after 8 p.m. during the week (33 per cent), after 6 p.m. on Saturdays (42 per cent) and on Sundays (36 per cent) has remained stable or even increased in the past two weeks," said Diane Nelsen, Minnesota AAA spokesperson. "As usual, stations in outstate areas are open longer hours and 61 per cent reported they're open on Sundays."

Prices increased an average of 1.3 cents per gallon at full-service stations and 1.2 cents per gallon at self-service stations. A record high price of $1.04 per gallon for unleaded was recorded on Minnesota AAA's survey of 65 stations throughout Minnesota.

Currently, the average price per gallon at full-service stations is 92.1 cents for regular, 96.8 for premium, 96.1 for unleaded, 98.7 for unleaded premium and 90.1 for diesel.

At self-service stations, the average price is 90.4 cents for regular, 96.8 for premium, 94.2 for unleaded and 97 for unleaded premium.

Nationally, AAA reported that the gasoline situation has eased slightly; more gasoline is available, more service stations are open and lines are shorter. Major metropolitan areas, hardest hit in the summer fuel crunch, may expect larger supplies of gasoline as the result of changes in allocation systems. Fuel supplies at many tourist destinations, including resorts and national parks, are adequate in Minnesota and throughout the United States, said AAA.

"While Minnesota AAA is still urging people to conserve gas whereever possible by keeping their car tuned-up and proper air pressure in the tires, we see no reasons for people to cancel plans for a motoring vacation," Nelsen said.

Gasoline availability hotlines have been set up in Minnesota and across the nation, so concerned motorists can call ahead to check out the local situation.

"We do suggest that you plan your route to avoid the need for a fill-up late at night or on Sundays. It's also a good idea to carry an adequate supply of cash or travelers checks because many of the independent stations that are open late or on Sundays don't take credit cards," Nelsen added.

Minnesota energy agency has published a list of gas stations in outstate Minnesota that have volunteered to stay open Fridays through Sundays. For information, call the Minnesota department of economic development, 612-296-5029, or toll free, 800-652-9747 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday-Friday. The list is also available through all Minnesota AAA offices from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday-Friday, all statewide chambers of commerce and the Minnesota state patrol, 612-482-5901, 24 hours daily.

The national travelers gasoline advisory also has a national toll-free information number, 1-800-238-8000, 24 hours daily.

WHAT'S IN IT FOR YOU?

By allowing American products to compete fairly in world markets, prices may be held down, and American jobs and our national security may be protected. In this article, taken from his testimony to a Congressional Subcommittee on Trade, a leading American industrialist discusses conditions in international trade which discriminate against American business and hurt the American consumer.

By G. C. Hurlbert

When our imports consistently exceed exports (a) inflation may mount at home (b) the dollar's purchasing power may decline (c) America's self-sufficiency may be threatened? ANSWER: a, b and c are true.

Foreign industries sometimes sell their products here for less than it cost to produce them to (a) stabilize the dollar (b) keep their own employment high (c) protect American jobs? ANSWER: b.

The Antidumping Act's goal is (a) to control industrial pollution (b) to protect American industry from unfair competition (c) to ensure equal access to the International Court? ANSWER: b.

As a result of unequal European and Japanese sales of heavy electrical equipment to the U.S. (a) consumer prices for electricity declined (b) thousands of Americans lost their jobs (c) the dollar stabilized? ANSWER: b.

Competitive opportunities for U.S. exports to the developed countries of the world are not equal to the opportunities offered them in U.S. markets. Unfortunately, the results of the Multinational Trade Negotiations may give foreign producers a disproportionately larger entry into the U.S. market than they already enjoy while American producers continue to be denied access to major markets overseas.

Nationalistic practices in the European countries and Japan prevent them from buying American equipment, while, on the other hand, utilities in the U.S. have purchased several hundred million dollars worth of large electrical equipment from European and Japanese manufacturers.

American equipment manufacturers were not the only losers: we have had to reduce employment in our turbine generator facilities alone by several thousand people.

Until European nations and Japan agree to open their markets for large electrical equipment to American and other foreign bidders, the U.S. should increase the "Buy American" differential and make no tariff reductions on these products.

As our country moves to convert more of our energy usage to coal, nuclear and other advanced technologies, we will need a strong technologically advanced heavy manufacturing industry to provide the machines for utilizing scientific developments. Our national security will depend on such industry.

To remain healthy and maintain steady levels of employment, these large manufacturing plants must have orders.

When the market for large equipment in Europe is depressed, manufacturers there may seek export orders, even at below-normal prices in order to maintain employment and partially recover the overhead expenses of large industrial plants. Thus the U.S. Antidumping Act should not be weakened.

Foreign governments are extremely protective of their own interests. Utilities and some manufacturing industries are either owned by the government or are mandated to carry out social responsibilities and to maintain employment. These governments support their industries in the need to export—even at marginal prices.

Our government should protect Americans.

290 From Area Are Involved In Girl Scouting

The 225 girls and 65 adults who are registered Girl scouts in Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire are served by Pine to Prairie Girl scout council. Pine to Prairie includes 34 counties in North Dakota and Minnesota, and has over 4,500 registered girls and over 1000 registered adults.

A Girl scout council is a non-profit, tax exempt organization that exists to provide and maintain girl scouting within its jurisdiction, states Margo Gustafson of Grand Forks, council field director.

Girls scouting is the largest female organization in the world. It exists in 94 countries with six million members. The United States has about 3½ million girl and adult memberg.

Girl scouts is an organization that exists for the growth and development of each of those three million girls. Helping each girl becomes the best possible person she can become is what Girl scouting is all about.

Pine to Prairie council is supported financially by United Ways or One funds, annual cookie sald and sustaining membership contributions from the communities it serves. Some of the specific ways that Pine to Prairie provided service to Thief River Falls Girl scouts in 1978 include:

Six Council sponsored training sessions were held for leaders and support team members;

Over 30 visits were made to the community by a professional field director to assist volunteers and 10 visits by other members of the staff;

Council sponsored trip to Wyoming was conducted in which three Thief River Falls girls participated;

Council sponsored core staff day camp was held in which 100 girls participated;

Printed materials were given to leaders and support team members;

Council mailings are sent to older girls and adults to keep them informed;

Pine to Prairie carried insurance on camp properties including Camp MOE and also pays for the maintenance of the camps.

The items listed above are some of the ways that United Way money is used by Pine to Prairie Girl scout council. The council volunteer board of directors is responsible for how the money is spent and is proud of the fact that 89 per cent of the total budget goes to service to troops, camping programs and training of leaders and girls.

Parking Project Gets Unofficial OK From Council

Proposed parking assessment district and downtown parking project were the main topics of discussion at an adjourned regular meeting of the Thief River Falls city council held Monday, July 16, with the downtown development committee (DDC) in attendance. Unofficial statement of council members given at the close of Monday's meeting was that the project will receive approval at the July 24 regular council meeting.

During the discussion DDC chairman John Larson summarized the action that had been taken by the committee to date in obtaining options on various parcels of property and listed other property still being considered for purchase.

In the northwest corner of the assessment district, Larson stated, it was the intention of the committee to acquire the old Northland Electronics building for $28,000 and the Sjoberg building and lot for $55,000 each. The lot north of the Rusty Nail, which is owned by Don Enright, owner of Ben Franklin, will also be acquired to $16,000 and traded to Sjoberg's as a part of the transaction for his two lots. Also being pursued in that area is the Credit Bureau property.

In the southwest area of the assessment district efforts are being made to purchase site B, a lot of approximately 100 x 140 feet south of the American Legion club. According to correspondence from Burlington Northern, which owns the lot, the transaction would be expensive to the city, however, since it would involve the relocation of team tracks and an unloading platform. Negotiations will continue, since it was the feeling of both the council and the DDC that the parcel is important in providing parking in the southwest corner of the assessment district to the school, county and city.

Lot being proposed for purchase in the southeast section of the assessment district is the old Lind Motor supply building. The DDC is also continuing negotiations with the hospital to work out some agreement for possible lease of the lot the hospital owns in that area.

Gene Belto lot, a 100x140 foot parcel, has been proposed for purchase in the northeast corner of the assessment district at a cost of $42,500. At the Monday meeting Burnell Netteland, daughter of Mrs. Agnes Israelson, made a presentation to the council and DDC regarding the Agnes and Hardy Israelson lots, also in the northeast section of the assessment district.

Mrs. Netteland indicated that both were 50x140 foot lots and that they would be offered for sale to the committee for $125,000, $50,000, for the bare lot owned by Hardy Israelson and $70,000 for Mrs. Israelson's lot housing apartment dwellings. The $70,000 price would include a waiver for relocation costs. The DDC indicated that it would take the offers under consideration.

With numerous combinations of lots available for purchase with awsessment district funds, the DDC indicated it would attempt to return to the council on July 24 with more specific guidelines about the committee's priorities.

A request was made at Monday's meeting by the downtown development committee that a standing advisory committee be established to see the project to completion and handle any future business of the assessment district. It was suggested that a six member committee be formed with three representatives from the DDC and three representatives from the council, with members to be appointed for two-year terms by the mayor. Suggested to serve from the DDC were Duane Walton, Dick Bjork-

HITTING AN OVERHEAD, Suzanne Fournier of Red Lake Falls displays her tennis prowess. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fournier, Suzanne is the reigning Miss Red Lake Falls and an entrant in the Miss Thief River Falls pegeant July 28. Tennis is among her favorite sports.

Susie Fournier In Queen Event

(This is the ninth in a series of interviews with candidates for the Miss Thief River Falls title at the official Miss America preliminary pageant to be held July 28 at the Lincoln high school auditroium. The Aquacade pageant will begin at 8 p.m. Stories and photos on the remaining two candidates will be published in the Monday edition of the Times.)

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

If Suzanne Fournier hits piano keys with the same confidence she hits a tennis ball, spectators at the Miss Thief River Falls pageant should hear an inspired piano solo.

Suzanne, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fournier of Red Lake Falls and a 1979 graduate of Lafayette high school there. She is five feet four inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, has brown hair and blue eyes. Her pageant talent number will be a piano solo which includes parts of Scot Joplin's "The Sting" and "Maple Leaf Rag".

Six years of lessons and four years of practice and playing on her own make Suzanne comfortable at the piano. She enjoys all kinds of music and played percussion and baritone saxophone in the Lafayette band as well as singing in the school choir for four years. The experience included some saxophone solo work.

Claiming to be a "late starter", Suzanne didn't join the band until her sophomore year, then was in the concert band and marching band for three years and the stage band which plays pop music for one year. Her ensemble groups won two "A" ratings in state area music contests.

Secretary-treasurer of her junior class and a member of the student council for one year, she was also president of the HEART (home economics and related training) club and earned a first place state award in the HEART cake decorating contest. She played volleyball for three years and was a tri-captain as a senior.

Other school activities included drama club for three years (she appeared in a play and a musical), FHA, annual staff, speech club, two years of basketball cheerleading and one of hockey cheerleading.

A member of the Catholic Youth organization (CYO), she was a member of its choir and served as secretary and vice president. Tennis and volleyball are listed among her favorite sports for participation although she enjoys watching all sports.

Other hobbies include baking bread and other items from scratch ("I try to beat my grandma," she said), raising house plants and Teams interested in participating in the tournament should contact managers Doug Volk at 681-6196 or Ron Hanson at 681-5639 evenings.

Teams wishing to participate in the water fights to be held Thursday, August 2, should contact Dave Jones at 681-6545 evenings. Both male and female teams are encouraged to enter, Jones said.

The water fights will begin at 7 p.m. and teams will consist of four members with single eliminations to be held to determine the winners. Entry fee will be $10 per team and cash prizes will be awarded for first, second and third places. Each entrant is also required to have an Aquacade button.

Treasure hunt will again kick off the Aquacade which will be held July 28-August 5. Two clues will be given daily on radio station KTRF from the opening of the hunt until the two treasures are found. Prizes are $50 and $100 and the finder must be wearing an Aquacade button when turning in the find at the KTRF studios.

Treasure seekers are reminded that the treasures will be hidden on public property and will be visible to the keen eye. No property need be disturbed to find them.

Foster Parent Information Meet Tuesday

Informational meeting for people interested in becoming foster parents will be held Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the basement meeting room of the Pennington county courthouse in Thief River Falls.

Conducting the session will be Barb Gulson and Ken Yutrzenka, social workers for the Pennington county social services department. Agenda will include a film of foster parenting and discussion on applications, regulations and expectations, Yutrzenka said.

Current licensed foster parents will be on hand to meet with interested parties and answer questions regarding foster parenting.

"There are many children today who cannot return to their natural homes due to a number of circumstances," Yutrzenka said. "Foster homes provide these children with a loving and caring environment. There is a great need for additional foster homes for these homeless children at this time. They need special people who are willing to make them a part of a family structure."

COMEDY TEAM Mahana and Jaspering will appear at the Pennington county fair Sunday evening as a companion act to the Jeannie C. Riley country and western show. Their antics, sound effects and impressions have met with enthusiastic response in the United States and Canada and led them to appearances with such personalities as Donny and Marie Osmond, Melissa Manchester, Ray Price, Ann Murray, Jody Miller, Tommy James and Mel Tillis. Show time is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. and advance tickets are on sale at reduced price at Dallmann Athletic or the Thief River Oil company stations at Third and Horace or Eighth and Atlantic.

NICE WEATHER to walk the dog, catch a fish, have a picnic, go to the Pennington county fair or engage in other outdoor activities is predicted for the rest of the week and into the weekend. Weather during the past couple of weeks has been mostly warm and dry with high humidity on several days being the only summer discomfort. Windy weather in this area Saturday is evident in this photo of Nancy Opdahl, 1979 Lincoln high school graduate who is enrolled in the Lowthian Fashion school in Minneapolis. Extended forecast for this area calls for little chance of precipitation (but don't believe everything you read) through the weekend with highs in the 80's and lows in the 50's and 60's. The cool evenings should make it particularly enjoyable to take in the grandstand shows at the county fair. They include a free talent show on Thursday, demolition derby at 7 p.m. Friday, old-time fiddler's contest on Saturday and the Jeannie C. Riley show the Mahana and Jaspering on Sunday.

Management Of Land Will Be Workshop Topic

This workshop has been accredited by the Minnesota state board of continuing legal education in the amount of six credit hours. Accreditation for continuing real estate education credits has also been awarded in the amount of 6.5 hours.

Faculty for the workshop has been chosen for expertise as well as variety or perspectives represented. SOCIETY and CLUBS

Kathy Kohler-Bruce Levi Marriage Vows Spoken

Miss Kathleen JoAnne Kohler and Bruce Thomas Levi exchanged marriage vows on Saturday, June 16, at 7:30 p.m., at St. John Lutheran church in this city.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Kohler of this city. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Levi, Fargo, N.D.

Rev. Barrie E. Henke officiated at the double ring ceremony, basing his meditation on Ephesians 5:21-33. Mrs. William Halbach was the organist. She played the "Wedding March" for the processional and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," for the recessional. During the ceremony, Mike Lehrer sang, "Wedding Prayer," "Wedding Song," "A Gift of Love," which was sung as the couple lit the unity candle, and "The Lord's Prayer." The assembled guests joined in singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," following the Holy Communion service.

Bouquets of white daisies graced the altar and blue ribbon bows marked the pews.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father and given in marriage by her family. She was attired in a gown of chiffonella designed by Joelle of New York. It was fashioned with a high neckline, full bishop sleeves and a full chiffon skirt complemented by an attached cathedral-length train. The molded bodice featured an inset of English net encrusted with Venise lace fluerettes and scallops that flowed down, marking the lifted waistline. Coordinating lace flowers and scallops graced her Juliet headpiece and finger-tip veil. She carried a cascade of yellow roses, white daisies, blue carnations and ribbon streamers in yellow, blue and white.

Kristy Kohler attended her sister as maid of honor. Other attendants were Patty Larson, Oakes, N.D., the bride's college rommate; Cyndi Stein, Savage, Mont., and Delilah Meyer, Crookston, sisters of the groom. They wore identical gowns of a pastel maize qiana featuring halter tops, crystal-pleated full circular skirts and flowing capes. In their hair, they wore a white daisy attached to a comb. They carried yellow roses, white daisies and blue carnations with yellow and blue ribbon streamers. Their gold necklaces were gifts from the bride.

Cindy Frelich of Crary, N.D., college roommate of the bride, was personal attendant.

Best man was Don Buegel, Fort Worth, Tex., a friend of the groom. Groomsmen were Gary and Jeff Levi of Fargo, brothers of the groom, and Jim Kohler of this city, brother of the bride. Serving as ushers were Larry Kohler, Harmony, uncle of the bride, and Mark Bauer, McClusky, N.D., cousin of the groom.

The groom was attired in a white tuxedo with a white ruffled shirt and a yellow double rose boutonniere. The groomsmen, ushers and the fathers wore baby blue tuxedos with white piping, white ruffled shirts, blue bow ties and yellow single rose boutonnieres.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Kohler selected a floor-length gown of baby blue qiana featuring a chiffon blouson with sweetheart neckline. The groom's mother wore a mint green qiana floor-length gown with a chiffon blouson top with cape sleeves. Their identical corsages were of yellow roses.

Honored guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Daubenspeck and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kohler of Detroit Lakes, grandparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Levi, Fargo, grandparents of the groom; and L.B. Hartz, a friend of the bride's family.

A reception in the church parlors followed. To correspond with the bride's chosen colors, the dining area was decorated in yellow and blue. Hurricane lamps centered the tables.

Serving as reception host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Neil McEwen. Mrs. Robert Reeve and Mrs. Vern Quam served the punch, Mrs. Joe Sorvig and Janet Williams registered the guests and Mrs. Mark Anderson and daughters, Nicole and Kersten were in charge of the gift table.

Highlighting the serving table was a four-tiered wedding cake iced in white and decorated with white daisies, yellow roses and blue accents. Delicate stringwork surrounded the tiers. Topping the cake was a heart-shaped pedestal featuring three satin bells trimmed with pearls and lace. The cake, baked and decorated by Mrs. Donald Rupprecht, was cut and served by Mrs. Larry Kohler of Harmony, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Armand Bauer of Bismarck, N.D., aunt of the groom. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Norman Sorensen, Fargo, god mother of the bride, and Mrs. Robert Bauer, McClusky, N.D., aunt of the groom.

Relatives and friends attending were from Fargo, McClusky, Bismarck and Grand Forks, N.D.; Detroit Lakes, Crookston, Harmony, LeCrescent, Frazee and the Thief River Falls area, as well as from Wisconsin, Arizona, Texas and Montana.

Following the rehearsal, the evening prior to the wedding, the groom's parents hosted a dinner at Lon's for members of the wedding party.

After a wedding trip in northern Minnesota, the couple is now at home at 2300 Library Lane, Grand Forks, where both are employed. The bride, a graduate of Lincoln high school, is employed by Murray, Olson, Larivee and Bohlman law firm; and the groom, a graduate of Fargo South, is employed by the First Bank of North Dakota. man and Jon Larson. Appointments from the council will likely be made July 24.

Method in which the project will proceed following council approval was also outlined at the meeting. Options would be obtained with landowners for a sufficient length of time to allow the city to hold an assessment hearing on the project and give the 30-day grace period for filing objections to the assessment rolls. Following the hearing and waiting period the project would get underway.

In other business Monday, the council instructed city engineer Doug Stewart to make application for state bridge replacement funds for the Oakland Park road bridge at Greenwood St. Of the $163,000 project cost, $68,500 is eligible for use of bridge replacement funds and the remainder is eligible for use of state aid funds. Application had previously been made for soil conservation funds (SCS) for erosion control in county ditch 70 in that area and at Monday's meeting the council instructed city clerk Jerry Wigness to set up a meeting with the SCS to discuss a possible increase in the amount of monies applied for.

An antique car club representative was given permission to use a portion of Floyd B. Olson parking lot for a display in conjunction with the flea market September 15; fire chief Duane Noel was given permission to advertise for a firefighter to replace Freeman Lanska who will retire September 15; and a resolution was passed indicating the city's desire to participate in a shade tree disease program.

MSU Schedules Second Teachers College Reunion

Second annual reunion of Moorhead state teachers college graduates is scheduled August 1 to 3 at Moorhead state university featuring a golf tournament, campus tours, a banquet and a chance for alumni to vote on the athlete of their decade.

What now is the university was called Moorhead state teachers college between 1921 and 1957. An estimated 4,000 students graduated from the school during those years.

Registration begins at noon that Wednesday followed by a reception at the Moorhead Holiday Inn from 5 to 8 p.m. and an evening at the theatre with the Straw Hat Players.

Thursday will include motorized campus tours, a golf tournament at the university's Ponderosa golf course and a banquet and party that night. The athletes of the decades will receive trophies. More golfing and a noon steak fry at the Ponderosa will end the reunion Friday.

For more information or for reservations, call the MSU alumni office at 236-2555.

Oilseed, Grain Barge Shipments Are Reduced

Officially inspected export shipments of grains and oilseeds by barge from Minnesota terminal elevators on the Mississippi river through June this year were lower by 11 per cent both in volume and value compared to the same three months last year, agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin reported recently.

This season's barge movements totaled an estimated 71.2 million bushels valued at nearly $252 million, compared to the April-June 1978 shipments totaling almost 80 million bushels worth $283 million. Reduced soybean volume accounted for $31 million of the drop in value.

Commissioner Seetin said that barring further problems the month of July should show a significant improvement in barged volume of grain and oilseed exports. Terminal elevator receipts state-wide the past two weeks have been at record levels for truck deliveries, peaking on Tuesday, July 10, at just short of 4,000 truckloads unloaded. That one-day peak represented almost 100,000 tons or 3.5 million bushels.

A combination of problems have been responsible for the reduced volume of grain movement by barge this season. The severe winter delayed the 1979 barge season for Minnesota until mid-April. During June both the diesel oil shortage and the truck strike had an impact upon the flow of corn, wheat, soybeans, oats and rye through terminal elevators.

Corn is the leading commodity in the volume barged, estimated at almost 42 million bushels, with a farm value of $87.7 million. Volume was 4 per cent below last year.

Soybeans barged total nearly 18 million bushels valued at $125.3 million. That volume was 25 per cent less than last year, but higher market prices this year held the value decline to 20 per cent.

Other barged commodities this season through June 30 included: 10.7 million bushels of wheat, 10 per cent below last year, worth $35.6 million; 1.9 million bushels of oats, 4 per cent above last year, worth $2.45 million; and 48,000 bushels of rye worth $100,000.

Indians File As Members Of Chippewa Band

Cut-off for filing applications for membership with the Bois Forte band of Chippewa Indians will be midnight, Aug. 20, 1979, according to Darrell Wadena, president of the Minnesota Chippewa tribe.

The announcement was made in connection with details regarding the distribution plan of funds awarded the Bois Forte Band of Chippewa Indians under Docket 18D.

Sent to Congress on Feb. 9, 1979 — pursuant to the Indian judgment funds act of Oct. 19, 1973, and becoming effective on June 5, 1979 — the plan provides that 20 per cent of the funds awarded shall be used in an annual educational scholarship program, a reservation economic development program, and a band land acquisition program.
